KNOWING is better than GUESSING

At the time you buy an automobile, you think it's good; you wouldn't buy it if you didn't. You'll know in a few weeks whether it's good or not.

BUT IT'S EASY TO START OUT WITH KNOWING. Here you can be sure before you spend your money.

BARGAINS.

Every car listed below is a bargain. We have priced them very low in order to sell them this week.

BUICK ROADSTER, 1920.

Repainted, blue body and fenders, cream wheels; looks fine; mileage very low; you can buy cheap.

CHANDLER TOURING, 1918.

In splendid condition. Will take $700.

1921 STUTZ TOURING.

One of our demonstrators, mileage very low; looks good as new; in fact, driven just far enough to be in good operating condition. A bargain.

1919 STUTZ ROADSTER.

Refinished in Mercedes red, new cord tires and all parts re-nickeled; has Burbank top and looks like the 1921 model. Priced low to move quickly.

1918 STUTZ 4-PASS.

Reconditioned in our own shops, repainted Mercedes red, all parts renickeled and has brand new non-skid cord tires. Priced very low.

DORT 5-PASS., 1918.

Has seat covers, good tires and is in splendid mechanical condition; cheap.

HUPMOBILE TOURING, 1917.

You will be surprised at this car for only $500

1919 STUTZ, 6-PASS.

Repainted midnight blue, and all parts re-nickeled; this car has been thoroughly gone over in our plant and will carry guarantee of a new job. Priced low to move quickly.

1916 STUTZ ROADSTER.

Here is another famous 8-valve Wisconsin motor car. It has original finish, original top, etc., and new cord tires all around. Wonderful car for someone at a give-away price.

OPEN SUNDAYS FROM 9 TO 2.

WE WILL TAKE YOUR CAR IN TRADE AND GIVE TERMS.

SPOONING NOT EASY TO STOP.

Neither Will Young Return to Old Dances.

Jazz Corrupts Everything, Says Lady Mary.

Not Sure That New Methods Aren't Best.

BY LADY MARY.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, October 29.—"No, dear Lady Mary, you cannot stop our spooning any more than you can make us go back to the old dances," said a beautiful young flapper to me just the other day.

I had been saying that the manners of the modern British ballroom would have caused a scandal in the last days of Queen Victoria, which I dimly remember.

Well, so it is. I suppose we cannot stop the tendency of modern times toward frankness in the manners of young people. We have not stopped it in the character of plays and novels, we have not stopped it in the conduct of the middle-aged and elderly and I do not suppose that we should hope to stop it in the ballroom.

But I heave a quiet sigh, just now and then, when I see young people dancing.

JAZZ CORRUPTS ALL.

Jazz has corrupted everything. It is worse than ragtime. It is mania, insanity, bewilderment, nonsense, a crime against the arts of music and the dance—but it is fascinating. The young folk seem to become intoxicated with these crazy dances as the niggers of the voodoo ceremonies do with their strange measures to the tom-tom.

I watched some of them at a dance the other night and my head still swims.

When I said, the other day, to a gentleman of the old school, as we were watching the young dancers: "There seem to be no square dances, these days." He answered, very cynically, "There seems to be, these days, nothing that is square."

Of course I don't believe him. I cannot dance the new dances but I like to see the youngsters dance them.

INNOCENT AMUSEMENT.

They get as good, and I believe, as innocent amusement out of them, as we used to get in the days of my girlhood out of our quadrilles, gavottes, waltzes and polkas. Personally, I do not think the arm clasps are much tighter. Thinking back I don't think they could be!

As I am able to analyze them, the new dances are based on rhythm wholly and pay not the slightest heed to form.

Well, isn't that more natural than the old way? Isn't the new dancing, as a matter of fact, far more natural than the old?

I believe the new dances are an expression of the individual. The old dances were not. They were and nothing of the poetry of motion. They were as awkward as the hopping of the merry German peasants. Dancing, then, was principally a matter for the dancing masters. Today it is a matter for the dancers—and I believe that that is better.

HIS WIFE'S TIP.

A Youngstown man was an enthusiastic spectator at the Kentucky Derby. Having little knowledge of the sport, and desirous of placing a small bet just for the excitement of the thing, he looked over the list of contenders until his eye rested on "Behave Yourself."

The Youngstown man, as the news reports have since told the world, was among those who "cleaned up," because Behave Yourself was the Derby winner.

"How in the world did you happen to pick the winner?" asked a friend.

"I had a hunch."

"Hunch?"

"Yes; 'behave yourself' is the last left home."—[Youngstown Telegram.

SHANGHAI FOND OF YANKEE CANDY.

Tons of American Sweets Consumed Monthly in Paris of Far East.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) Oct. 29.—To the widely accepted theory that candy is popular only where liquor is scarce, Shanghai, the lively, joyous oriental port often referred to as the Paris of the Far East enters an exception if not a flat denial. All sorts of alcoholic beverages flow freely there, and yet candy maintains a surprising degree of popularity. Tons of it are consumed monthly, according to the reports of American commercial agents, which are supported by the experience of shipping men.

No less than 20,000 pounds of chocolates, bonbons, jelly beans and taffy were included in the cargo of the Admiral liner Wenatchee which recently cleared for the Orient. This comprised a single shipment consigned to Shanghai. Yokohama, Kobe and Manila also like candy, but do not buy as much as Shanghai.

Court to Issue Order Against Miners' Chief.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 29.—Refusal of President Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America to agree to suspend union efforts to organize the Williamson coal fields of West Virginia was followed by the announcement of Judge Anderson in the Federal court here today, that an injunction would be issued Monday.

The decision to issue the order was made by Judge Anderson after he had expressed the intention to defer all action in the case until the final trial. However, he held that meanwhile efforts to unionize the field must be stopped. He called on Mr. Lewis for a decision. Finally Mr. Lewis declared: "We have a constitutional right to organize and I decline to surrender."

FATE OF EX-EMPEROR CHARLES UNDECIDED.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, Oct. 29.—The Council of Ambassadors again failed today to reach an agreement regarding final disposition of former Emperor Charles, who last week made an abortive attempt to regain the Magyar throne. No government has volunteered asylum for him. Assent of the Portugal government to placing Charles on Madeira Island was asked but no reply has been received.

Reports of mobilization of the forces of the Little Entente because of Hungary's failure to deliver the former ruler to it have reached the council, which decided to tell the Allied representatives in the Little Entente countries to recommend that those powers suspend war preparations.

UNIONS UNINTERESTED IN OIL STATEMENT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 29.—Commenting on the statement issued by the Oil Producers' Association of California tonight which gave rise to rumors of the oil workers' strike in the San Joaquin Valley being near a settlement, E. B. Daniels, secretary of the union, said tonight that so far as the striking men were concerned it means nothing.

Members of the Federal Mediation Board, C. T. Connell and E. P. Marsh, held conferences with the district council representing all unions in the State here yesterday, but this could have no bearing on, nor could it be the cause of the association's statement, it was the opinion of Mr. Daniels.

Reproducing Old Engravings.

An ingenious method of making photographic copies of plates and engravings in books that cannot be removed from libraries, and where the use of the camera is prohibited, has been devised by Jarvis Smith, an Englishman. He coats a cardboard with luminous paint, exposes it to sunlight or electric arc light, and then places it at the back of the engraving while the photographic plate is placed on the face of the engraving. The book is closed, and after one hour, depending largely on the thickness of the paper, a satisfactory negative is produced. The book is inclosed in a black cloth during the manipulation, from which the book takes no harm.—[Rochester Post-Express.

Different Kind of Criticism.

"Arthur," said a young artist to a friend, "do you see that lady and gentleman who are looking at my picture and talking in such low, earnest tones?"

"Yes," replied the friend.

"I wish you would saunter by carelessly and find out what they are saying. It looks like business."

"She is calling him down for staying out late last night," said the friend, returning.—[Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

"MYSTERY PORT" NOW DESCRIBED.

Richborough Well Concealed During the War.

Was of Immense Service to Fighting Allies.

All British Guns Lost Were Replaced Quickly.

BY GEORGE WILSON.

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Revelations of war secrets are the order of the day. Up to this time there has been much reserve—almost as if Britain were not absolutely certain that the great tragedy had ended.

The latest lifting of the ban shows secret details of the great "mystery port," one of the most important of all British war enterprises, but so carefully concealed, even from Englishmen, that thousands living within a few miles were ignorant of the port's real character until long after the armistice, and many actually resident in the city, which sprang up by magic where a marsh had been about it, did not have the least idea as to the importance to the war of the community in which they lived.

This port is Richborough, on the Kentish coast between Sandwich and Ramsgate. From Sandwich several of the earliest Massachusetts families emigrated to America, and Ramsgate is a summer resort. This is one of Great Britain's most historic sections. At the time of the beginning of the war it was principally characterized by a large area of marsh land. Its river is the Stour. The Stour was diverted and immense docks built, one of them being not less than 2200 feet long, abutting on a splendid basin.

PORT WELL EQUIPPED.

At this and other docks immense steel barges were loaded for the trip across channel to the French ports of debarkation, and on these barges and the manifold other craft constructed in the great yards, bought or commandeered for this war service, nearly all the British artillery and supplies were carried. No German port ever was better equipped than Richborough.

Eighty miles of special railway tracks were laid to serve the docks alone and a shipyard was established where nothing had existed prior to the war except salt marsh.

The barges of this ferry were enormous and could take an entire train of the short "wagons" or freight cars in which the British railways transport freight. The immense importance of this port to the final victory of the Allies may be estimated when I say that not less than one-third of all shipments made from England to any of the war zones, including, of course, that of France and Belgium, were made from Richborough. In one month, that of October, 1918, the ferries going out of Richborough carried 132,000 tons of supplies.

600 GUNS IN 48 HOURS.

In 1918 when the British and French suffered such disaster—in the last week of March—the army of Britain and much of that of France was re-equipped with an almost instantaneous promptitude largely because of the efficiency of this port. Six hundred guns, which were the total of the British loss, were replaced by new ones shipped from Richborough in something less than forty-eight hours after the beginning of the British knowledge of the disaster.

It is an extraordinary thing that the Germans apparently never got a real inkling of the importance of this port, despite the acknowledged perfection of their spy service. Of course Richborough was well equipped with air defense facilities, but it was not called upon to use them, for at no time did it suffer serious attacks by Zeppelins or airplanes although it was, of course, within easy reaching distance for them.

The vessels constructed in the Richborough yards were of the most purely utilitarian character—the barges for the train-ferry, tow-boats, large and small, rescue tugs (powerful sea-brutes capable of hustling even great ships into port after they had been torpedoed) tugs of the "Dance" variety.

WORK ASTONISHING.

Some of the feats of these big tow-boats during the war were astonishing. They are now offered for sale and their great war-service seems to add nothing to their money-value, but to the layman it would seem as if it should. The range of tugs is from 85 to 2400 horsepower. The larger ones are known as "rescue tugs" and all named after saints. They did heroic feats of heavy towing in almost all the waters of the world, for they were sent to be on call wherever ships were likely to be put into distress by Germany's ruthless submarines.

One notable feat was that of the St. Columb. It towed the torpedoed armored cruiser Weymouth, feared to be in a sinking condition, a great distance to safety in the Adriatic. The story of that feverish effort in which men and machinery co-ordinated as they have done many times in history has become a tradition in the war-history of the British merchant marine. With this tremendous load on behind her on steel cables and in by no means the best of weather the St. Columb managed to achieve an average of six knots per hour, while her crew was ever ready for attack by submarine.

Today the British government with respect to Richborough and its craft is in much the same position that the American government is in with regard to Hog Island and the Shipping Board craft. Tonnage is a drug upon the market in England, as it is in the United States, and those who built up the port and produced the many craft now lying idle there under high pressure in war time now are disgusted because no worthy bids are made for them to be used in peaceful service.

PLANS TO RAISE TAX VALUATIONS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA ANA, Oct. 29.—Orange county property assessments will be increased fully 20 per cent next year, County Assessor James Sleeper announced today.

Sleeper says he will increase the assessments for the reason that if he does not the State Board of Equalization will. With the increase of assessed valuation, the tax rate will be lowered, it is said.

The present assessment of the county, $115,000,000, is approximately 30 per cent of the actual market-able value, according to Sleeper.

Woman Blames All Her Woes on Prohibition.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PITTSBURG (Pa.) Oct. 29.—Here is a wife who blames her marital unhappiness on the Volstead Act and the enforcement of prohibition laws, as, since the law became effective her home, she says, was broken up.

Mrs. Rose Smith so testified in the divorce proceedings she brought against her husband, Emerick Smith, a tailor of Sewickley. She said that he drank before prohibition like a gentleman should, but like something else after prohibition became effective.

They always got along well together, but after prohibition was supposed to have become effective there was no living with him. She had to leave him, she said. The wife is recommended a decree of divorce in the masters' report.

TWO BOYS INJURED BY TRAIN AND AUTO.

MOTORIST HELD ON CHARGE OF RECKLESS DRIVING AFTER ACCIDENT.

Two school boys were seriously injured as the result of traffic accidents last night.

Running in front of an inbound Redondo Pacific Electric freight train at the Florence-avenue crossing early last night, Horace Foskett, age 9 years, son of Pacific Electric Agent Foskett of Compton, was severely injured when the motor struck him and threw him to one side. Taken to the Golden State Hospital it was found that he had suffered a possible skull fracture and fracture of the collar bone.

Motorman Luther and Conductor Shick were in charge of the train. The boy's home is at 7186 Meramont avenue, Compton.

Lester Feinberg, aged 10 years, of 5201 Hooper avenue is in the hospital with a fractured skull and Joseph Kenley, contractor, of 931 East Twenty-fifth street is in the University Station Jail charged with reckless driving as the result of an accident which occurred near Twenty-fifth street and Central avenue. According to the police the boy was being carried by his father across the street in the middle of the block. At the approach of Mr. Kenley's car the police stated that the father let the boy go. Mr. Kenley, it was said blew out two of his tires in an attempt to stop in time to avoid hitting the boy.

Aged Woman Struck and Dragged By Auto at Beach Expires.

Injuries received in an automobile accident resulted in the death of Mrs. Mary Baughman, aged 70 years, at Long Beach last night.

Mrs. Baughman, who lived at 1405 East Anaheim street, Long Beach, had stepped from a jitney bus at Gundy avenue, when she was struck by an automobile driven by A. H. Austin, 1612 Stanton Place. Neither the driver nor bystanders saw what had happened and the woman was dragged several hundred feet along the street before the car was stopped. When Mrs. Baughman was taken from beneath the car she was frightfully cut and bruised and died of a fracture of the skull before she could be taken to a hospital.

She had no relatives with the exception of a son said to be in the Army and stationed at an Eastern post.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—To assist the British meteorological office in making accurate weather forecasts, a staff of British observers is leaving to take charge of the new observatory established on the island of Jan Mayen, 300 miles east of Greenland.

From there they will send wireless reports to the Air Ministry here.

GIRLS SELL APPLES TO BENEFIT ORPHANS.

An auction of Halloween apples was held by forty girls of the Frances DePauw School westerday at Vine street and Hollywood Boulevard for the benefit of Los Angeles orphans. Fifty sacks of apples were gathered by the girls from the orchards of Weddington Brothers, Lankershim, under the direction of C. M. Pierce. All unsold apples were distributed to the orphans' homes and the rescue mission. This is the third sale of apples from the Weddington orchards this autumn. Another sale will be held Saturday.

GROUND HOG A PREVARICATOR.

Don't Trust Him, Advice of Scientific Sharks.

Animals as Forecasters of the Weather Ridiculed.

Divers Other Traditions Are Termed Fallacies.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—"We are going to have a hard winter this year."

You hear a lot of amateur prophesies to this effect, and a few to the contrary. Some base their predictions on the way the squirrels are piling up nuts and some on the report that muskrats have thick fur, and some on the fact that ducks have come south sooner than usual.

The Government attaches no significance to special industry on the part of squirrels, or to any of these other things. Nor does it consider reports of early flight of birds to the South a true warning that winter will set in sooner than usual. The Government biologist and meteorologist regard these phenomena as interesting but no more to be relied upon than the pretty story of the ground hog and his shadow.

ARE NOT SO WISE.

"The fact is," says Dr. A. K. Fisher, of the Biological Survey, "we have no proof that animals are supplied in advance with instinctive warnings of storms or cold weather. On the other hand, there is a good deal of proof that they do not know in advance about weather conditions. If they did, there would be fewer catastrophies in the animal world.

"Weather changes often overtake birds, for instance, with tragic results. If birds could sense storms far ahead we would not hear of 3,000,000 Lapland longspurs being beaten to the ground in a driving storm in Minnesota. This incident occurred in the spring when these birds were flying north. They were caught in the gale. After it was over, ornithologists measured the area of the frozen lake where the birds lay dead and then counted the birds to a square yard. According to careful estimate, 3,000,000 were wiped out that day. When birds do seek shelter in a storm it is generally because they can no longer keep up in the air, not because they sense the storm's approach."

Early migration of birds is commonly accepted as an infallible sign that winter may be expected at once. Birds really migrate, Dr. Fisher says, not because they anticipate cold, but because the food supply is disappearing.

When they migrate sooner than usual in the fall it may mean that winter is setting in and destroying their chances of getting food, or it may mean that less of the food needed by those particular birds is available. Or, as a third supposition, there may be unusually large flocks of the birds in a locality and the food supply is not lasting so late as usual.

WHAT MAKES FUR GROW.

By the same specious reasoning, it is sometimes asserted that animals are provided with thicker fur in preparation for a severe winter. The facts, so far as science has studied them, are that animals do have thicker fur in cold winters. Animals in very cold climates have thicker coats than similar species farther south. This is a well-recognized fact in the fur trade, where furs from the far North bring much higher prices than pelts from warmer latitudes.

The overlooked fact here is that the warmer coat is furnished by nature after the cold sets in, not before. Roughly speaking, the cold stimulates the skin to produce thicker fur. Yet reports of thicker fur on animals in the early fall are widely regarded as a sure sign of heavy weather ahead.

ANOTHER FALLACY.

Hibernation is another misinterpreted animal function. Early hibernation is often pointed out as one of the signs of approaching cold. As a matter of fact, animals do not hibernate so much on account of cold as because of their bodily condition. When a bear has an inch of fat on his body, or whatever he needs for the winter, he feels, we may imagine, much like a person who has eaten a hearty meal. So the bear curls up in a protected place and sleeps.

With some animals this desire for sleep comes in the hottest part of the year. Ground squirrels in the West go into the ground in July and stay there the balance of the summer months.

An example of how hibernation is connected in our minds with weather is the ground hog shadow tradition. The ground hog, or woodchuck, is supposed to regulate the coming of spring. The story goes that the ground hog comes out of his hole on Candlemas day, February second, and looks around. If he sees his shadow he returns to his hole, thereby informing the world that winter is not over. If the sky is cloudy he ventures out to enjoy the spring days that are coming.

DON'T TRUST THE GROUNDHOG.

This tradition got its origin through the January thaw that sets in some years. For a week or two the weather is pleasant and melting. Farmers know by experience that this fine weather does not hold, and that it is almost invariably followed by a setback. Spring is apt to come sooner if there is no January thaw, and the temperature rises gradually a little later. The ground hog comes into the story because he emerges from his winter quarters about this time. If he comes out and finds the sun shining he is supposed to know that the warmth is too unseasonable to last.

The story would be more reasonable if the fate of the winter rested on the temperature of ground hog day rather than the sun. A day of freezing temperature may be bright and sunny. Yet the sign would read that the ground hog saw his shadow and winter was not over.

Tracing the different traditions back, it is easy to see how they originated. Today we merely quote them without considering their significance or without making allowances for facts that science has proved since the old weather lore was evolved.

The conclusion of scientists that lower animals are not better equipped to be weather prophets than human beings would be without their instruments and scientific knowledge.

LIVENS UP VIRGINIA GRIDDERS.

Coach "Fat" Spears Injects Some Football Pep Into Stolid Mountaineers.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MORGANTOWN, Oct 29.—"Fat" Spears is getting considerably more than twice as much in salary as any earlier West Virginia University football coach, but he has done what few if any former coaches have been able to accomplish, which is to say that he has been able to make the Mountaineers take their football so seriously that they weep over a defeat.

Former Mountaineer teams have been termed "stolid" and "dumb," but not so the 1921 West Virginia eleven. The heads are up and the men are showing a knowledge of the game that promises to make the team, which has always been regarded as one of unusual physical qualifications, into one that will be a real factor in American football. The fighting spirit, without which no team can be successful and which has been largely missed in past West Virginia teams, is now present and when the team gathered in the dressing room after the Pitt gome the whole outfit to a man sat down and cried like so many children and were ready to go back and battle Pitt for more. It should be well understood, however, that the Mountaineers make no claim to the "praying record" of Centre College.

Incidently, George Hill, the sturdy fullback of the Mountaineers, starting off like real All-American stuff. Against Pitt he ran fifty-three yards for West Virginia's first touchdown, and later ran ninety-two yards from the kickoff for the second one. Against Ohio University here Saturday he ran forty-seven yards for the only points of the game and later ran sixty-five yards in returning a kickoff.

MOTOR VEHICLE ACT VIOLATION CHARGED.

A LOS ANGELES CONCERN'S TRUCKS EXCEEDED SPEED LIMIT, OFFICIAL SAYS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

VISALIA, Oct. 29.—Complaints charging violation of the State Motor Vehicle Act were sworn to here today by Charles A. Whitmore, State Highway Commissioner, against drivers for the Hodge Transportation Company of Los Angeles.

Mr. Whitmore alleged the company's trucks exceeded a speed limit of ten miles an hour while loaded, including trailers, in excess of 24,000 pounds. He said these were the first of a number of complaints that would be issued in an effort to secure strict enforcement of the law prescribing maximum load and speed for trucks on the State highway.

ISTORY'S FAMOUS CHARMERS OUTDONE BY MADALYNNE.

arry Carr Calls Mrs. Obenchain Greatest Fascinator of Men; Says She's Not Beautiful but Puts Cleopatra in Piker Class Just the Same.

BY HARRY CARR.

Now, I have an idea how a reporter for the Egyptian Daily News would have felt interview- Cleopatra with both Marc Antony and Caesar stamping around the outskirts and glaring. Yesterday I talked with Madalynne Obenchain at the County Jail while Arthur Burch and divorced husband peered in at the party.

is with Cleopatra that I com- Mrs. Obenchain because 's queen was the greatest fas- of men I ever heard of until murder case came along. But matter of cold fact, Cleopatra a piker compared with this in the County Jail waiting for murder.

Obenchain's case is without in history or fiction. She men gently aside when she of them and they yield with of pain. When she wants again, they throw aside ca- freedom—everything in an- to her nod.

Burch is guilty of killing Bel- Kennedy, as is charged, then is the most extraordinary case love madness in all human an- for, the State believes, it was a successful rival lover to the woman who had turned down that he is alleged to come to California on mur- bent.

On the other I have talked to several experienced, brilliant news- minds. They all sigh and with a "Ah-there's-a-woman" when Mrs. Obenchain is men- ed. The more intellectual they the harder they seem to fall. ally we find real life dramas pointing. I found her disap- —also Burch and the None of them look the Barry was both coarse and Even Cleopatra was not voluptuous beauty that we see the stage and screen. Archaeol- now know that she was very small and only passably good-looking. But she had a wondrous voice and she was the most highly educated woman of her time and a woman of great refinement and delicacy, speaking some forty languages.

Mrs. Obenchain is also a highbrow young lady and every impressionable young man vibrates at the sound of her voice. Otherwise she does not register as a charmer.

I happened to meet her at a very dramatic moment.

The night before, it seems, that she and Burch had had a chance meeting somewhere in the maze of jail corridors and he had breathed —I believe that "breathed" is the correct and romantic word—out a violent protestation of love for her, swearing she should go to San Quentin with him if he has to go there; that he would not leave her for Obenchain. And, according to the best information from the sobbing young lady writers, Madalynne's eyes "blazed" and she was very sore.

When I came in, she was talking to her husband in the shadows of a dark corner of a big wire cage into which the prisoners are turned to talk to their relatives on visiting days. It was so dark that I could only make out the dim outlines of her figure.

One of the reporters asked for Burch and presently a snappy little figure in white duck trousers came bouncing into the room.

They say that the mark of your previous incarnation is always upon you in this life. Well then, Burch the last time he was here, was a white fox terrier. He is very small with the eager, quick ways of a terrier. He is exactly the type of college boy who is yell leader during the football season and acts as business manager of the glee club during the winter.

Any movie casting director who picked him out for the villain of a murder mystery would be fired on the spot. You always expect men accused of deliberate killing to have glowing dark eyes that seem to strike when they look. Burch has rather faded, ineffective gray eyes. He has rather ineffective teeth, too; they have no shape and Three Roads of Destiny Enmesh Kennedy Killing Case Principals.

Murder-Trial Figures and a Crucial Problem in Highway Routes.

The arrows represent the way Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain, charged with the murder of J. Belton Kennedy, says she took with the young broker when they motored to Beverly Glen and his death; the State will contend that Arthur C. Burch, indicted with Mrs. Obenchain, reached the same goal by some road not disclosed; Burch says he went elsewhere and that he has an alibi. The segment of a circle, twenty-two miles from Third and Spring streets, incloses every spot where Burch could have been at the time of the killing, since the speedometer of the motor car he used showed that he drove forty-four miles on the fateful night. Mr. Erbstein is chief of counsel for Mrs. Obenchain, and Mr. Obenchain, her former husband, is among her attorneys.

MRS. OBENCHAIN IN HANDS OF FATE.

BY A. M. ROCHLEN.

The roads of destiny! Where will they lead Mrs. Madalynne Donna Connor Obenchain and Arthur C. Burch?

At 10 o'clock next Tuesday morning these roads will converge in Judge Reeve's court, at the Hall of Justice on Buena Vista street, just north of Temple street. Back through a maze of circumstances, through throbbing currents of conflicting emotions, through loves and hatreds of hearts, beating and stilled, back through years of sorrows and joys, the State of California and the attorneys for the defense will seek to guide a jury over these roads to a quiet, peaceful spot in Beverly Glen, and beyond. There, in the splendor of California hills, was staged the climax of a life drama of four human beings—three men and one woman. The culmination of the loves, hopes, ambitions and disappointments of the principal actors in this drama was staged there. And it is there, the State hopes, the solution of the Kennedy murder case, with all its romance of mystery and emotions, will be found.

But the roads of destiny do not end at the Beverly Glen home of J. Belton Kennedy, the Los Angeles broker, for whose murder Mrs. Obenchain and Burch are to be tried. Beyond the fateful spot in the verdant glen, at the ends of the different roads, lie potentialities for rest and retribution, new joys and new romance, exoneration or disgrace, or prison bars or the gallows. All the elements of probably the most extraordinary murder case ever tried in California, with the thousand and one ramifications that tend to make it of nation-wide interest, are to be found on these different roads, one of which each of the defendants must travel.

Which road will the jury choose?

The State, through Dist.-Atty. Woolwine and Dep. Dist.-Atty. Keyes, will seek to lead the jury and the defendants over one of these three highways to destiny. Its route is comparatively direct. The mileposts on the State's road are marked Conspiracy, Revenge, Jealousy, Assassination. Its principal resting points are Indictment, Arrest, Conviction. More tortuous, more bewildering and fascinating, are the other two roads. They wind around a woman's heart and love. Strong motives—Personality, Fate, Coincidence, Friendship and Sacrifice are the mileposts on the other roads. One of them leads, like the State's road, to the Beverly Glen cabin where J. Belton Kennedy was slain from ambush. The other one leads away from it. Acquittal is the goal on each. A jury of the defendant's peers, under the able guidance of famous attorneys of California, Illinois and Washington, will be shown the innermost nooks and corners of the other roads and asked to choose them.

Whichever road the jury chooses, it must be certain beyond a reasonable doubt.

Unless all indications fail, the daily court journeys over the different roads of the case will furnish a legal battle never surpassed here for the dramatic intensity, human interest and bitter clashes. The eyes of the nation will be fixed upon the little courtroom in the red brick building on Buena Vista street. Representatives of newspapers in every city and town in the country will record every detail of the battle in which human lives and reputations are at stake. And, unless all indications fail, before the final chapter of this drama is closed in the crowded courtroom, another sensation, another romance within a tragedy will come forth to show that fate and truth are, indeed, stranger than fiction.

NEW LOVE BORN.

For out of the crash of their careers, out of the debris of plans and hopes and homes, there has come into being a new love of Madalynne Obenchain for Ralph R. Obenchain, her former husband and present attorney. Deny it, as they may, the facts remain unchanged. I have watched the principals in this strange life behind the bars in the cold gray building of the County Jail, sometimes called the House of a Thousand Woes, and the comings and goings of Ralph Obenchain, and in spite of all the efforts on their part to hide this new something that has come into existence for some of them, it showed itself and grew and grew. He has been called many names, some ridiculous, some over-sentimental, some just plain silly; the name that strikes me as most appropriate for Ralph Obenchain is "Smiling Ralph." In the midst of so-called confessions, charges and counter-charges, of impatience and disagreements, he has kept on smiling. His smile is based on the realization that whatever others in the case may lose, he may gain the love of Madalynne Obenchain, his wonder woman.

The State has called her a murderess. In the eyes of the law, when he goes before the jury, Burch is charged with murder. The "Wonder Woman" and Arthur Courtenay Burch are the two persons accused in indictment No. 16931 of having "willfully, feloniously and with malice aforethought murdered J. Belton Kennedy, a human being."

VETERANS TO BATTLE.

Dist.-Atty. Woolwine, a veteran of many court battles, known to his friends as "Turbulent Tom," and Asa Keyes, his deputy, whom his friends, and they are legion, call "Ace" for short, will represent the prosecution. On the defense side will be Charles E. Erbstein, the famous Chicago criminal attorney and recently the center of a court clash with Mr. Woolwine; Warren Williams, well-known Los Angeles attorney, and "Smiling Ralph," the husband that was and, some day, the husband-that-may-be. Representing Burch will be Paul W. Schenck, one of the leaders of the Los Angeles bar and one of Mr. Woolwine's many bitter enemies, his law partner, Richard Kittrelle, veteran of many victories with Mr. Schenck, and Sullivan of Washington, a fiery fighter of the Northwest.

Scores of witnesses from every walk of life—bankers, pawnbrokers, society women, chambermaids, hotel clerks, garage employees, gunsmiths, schoolgirls, handwriting experts, scientists and police officers will rub elbows with the curious crowds in and around the courtroom. Gorgeously plumed hats of brilliant hues, rusty shotgun stocks, dainty bits of stationery and correspondence cards, automobile tires, long and ardent love letters and scraps of paper carefully pasted together into important links of what the State will seek to prove to be a chain of circumstances—a hundred and one different kinds of things will be among the exhibits of the case. New York, Chicago, Evanston, St. Paul, San Francisco, Vancouver, Honolulu are some of the settings for the testimony in the case. Happy college days, the business world, mysticism, occultism, the "land beyond the veil," dark gloomy corridors of the County Jail, the starlit silence of the foothills—one by one these will pass before the nation-wide audience of the great drama of the Kennedy murder. Wits will battle, hearts will ache, oratory will flow to prove, if possible, how and by whom J. Belton Kennedy was shot down in cold blood without an inkling of his fate or a chance for his life.

NEVER RETURNED.

For J. Belton Kennedy cannot testify. His voice is stilled. On the afternoon of Friday, August 5, typical glorious day of California, Mr. Kennedy arrived at the Alexandria Hotel and called for Mrs. Obenchain. They were to go driving in Mr. Kennedy's car that afternoon. The two drove away—and Kennedy never returned.

About 10 o'clock Friday night, George Deering, a Southern Pacific Railroad man, living in Beverly Glen, heard shots and screams. When he reached the entrance to the cottage owned by J. Belton Kennedy, he heard a woman's voice, "Speak to me, Belton!" The voice was Mrs. Obenchain's.

Half-way between Kennedy's automobile, parked at the foot of the steps, and the front of the cottage, some fifteen or eighteen feet above, lay the body of the insurance broker. A hole about the size of a half-dollar, about two inches below and a little back of the left ear, was in his head. Life was extinct. His revolver, loaded, but undischarged, lay close near his right hand.

Mrs. Obenchain was taken by Deering to the Beverly Hills police station, whence a call was sent to the Sheriff's office. Deputy Sheriffs John Cronin, now dead, Johnson and Valarde, were dispatched to the scene of the crime and immediately took charge of the investigation.

After a brief search of the vicinity, which at first disclosed nothing of importance, they proceeded to question Mrs. Obenchain closely. She then told the story which, with the exception of a few details, was never changed.

LOVE CONFESSED.

She and Mr. Kennedy, she told the officers, loved each other. He had asked her to marry him. On his key-ring was a wedding ring she said he purchased for her. The afternoon of the fatal day Mr. Kennedy called for her at the Alexandria and telephoned to her room No. 1080. They were to go driving that afternoon, she said. Kennedy had called earlier in the day and asked her. She had consented. They left the hotel in the middle of the afternoon and drove "somewhere to the beach." It must have been in the vicinity of Manhattan Beach, she later added, and also El Segundo. She remembered seeing a sign. They sat on the sand and talked "and watched the sun set." Then they drove to Brentwood, intending to take dinner at the country club.

For some reason they did not stop there, but drove on. It was Kennedy's suggestion, she said, that they drive by the glen house, as he called his place. Kennedy did not have the key to the glen house with him, but said they would just drive by for the sake of memories. They drove past the place some distance, turned around and started back toward the city. "Then," Mrs. Obenchain was reported as saying, "a cat ran across the road."

"LUCKY" PENNY LOST.

"I remembered that some months before I left a lucky penny under a rock at the foot of the porch. Belton suggested we stop and get it, so we decided to go up the steps."

She said they left the automobile with its lights burnings directly in front of the entrance and walked up the steps. She looked around in the dark and could not find the penny. Kennedy started to go down the steps toward his car to get some matches. He was half-way down when a shot rang out. Then another shot. Between the shots, she later told the officers, she heard Belton call out, "Good-night, Madalynne." He spoke no more. She said she thought she saw two roughly-clad men running away.

Mrs. Obenchain was detained for investigation.

As soon as Sheriff Traeger and Undersheriff Biscailuz arrived at their office the next morning, Al Manning, superintendent of criminal investigation, and Deputy Sheriffs Fox and Nolan and William Bright were assigned to the case. They at once proceeded to question Mrs. Obenchain, going over her story again and again. One by one, the facts of her life and friendship with the physical characters of this drama were disclosed.

COLLEGE GRADUATES.

Mrs. Obenchain, a graduate of the Northwestern University, had known Kennedy for years. He, also a college graduate, had been in love with her prior to her marriage to Ralph Riley Obenchain. Mr. Obenchain was a brilliant law student at Northwestern University, was one of the circle of college boys who courted the beautiful co-ed and he won. The marriage was performed in Los Angeles. This city had been Mrs. Obenchain's home while away from college and her mother, Mrs. Anna Smart, of 5322 Pasadena avenue, had made Los Angeles her home.

Mr. Kennedy figured in her life before her marriage to Obenchain. While she first knew him, she said, he had become interested in a young woman engaged to be married to a man whose name she did not know and it was because of this she said she made her decision to marry Mr. Obenchain. Her love for Kennedy never died.

Eventually Mr. Kennedy came to her, she said, and told her he had only been diverting himself with the other girl. It was then, she declared, she told Mr. Obenchain she loved Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Obenchain, who since his arrival here has been called "Steady Ralph," decided to allow her her freedom. A divorce was arranged. Mr. Obenchain, always willing to shoulder the burden, became the defendant and Mrs. Obenchain was given a decree in the Chicago courts.

LOVE SURVIVED.

He told her he still loved her and was willing for her to return to him any time she recovered from her infatuation for Kennedy. An alimony was granted her and Mr. Obenchain always sent more than the court decreed. Her ex-husband, she said, was an attorney for the Aetna Life Insurance Company in Chicago. Mrs. Smart, she added, was formerly Mrs. John D. Connor. Mrs. Obenchain was educated in St. Paul, Minn., graduating from Mrs. Bakkus's school for girls and later attending Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill. In addition to her college education she passed two years at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, New York City. Mr. Obenchain was a lieutenant in the field artillery during the World War and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Abram Obenchain of South Whitley, Ind. He was president of the senior law class at Northwestern in 1914 and is a member of the Phi Kappa Sigma. Her former husband, she said was still in Chicago.

Mrs. Obenchain's condition was still slightly hysterical; mentally she was dazed, she said, the shots still ringing in her ears. At 10 o'clock Saturday morning, August 6, Deputy Sheriffs Fox, Noland and Bright took her from the County Jail to the Beverly Glen cottage, where she went over with them, step by step, every detail of the tragedy as she witnessed it, enacting her part for the officers.

MADALYNNE ON GRILL.

She was taken abck to the jail and later in the day to the District Attorney's office, where she once again recited her version of the murder for Asa Keys. Late that afternoon the questioning of Mrs. Obenchain was resumed. She declared, the officers say, she could think of no one who would want to kill Mr. Kennedy.

Then, while scores of officers were searching for clews throughout the county, and entire Southern California was reading details of the crime, came a "break" in what heretofore was an aimless investigation. Thomas M. Haley, proprietor of the Russell Hotel, 316½ South Broadway, telephoned that he had discovered what he believed to be a clew. Undersheriff Biscailuz, Deputy Sheriff Nolan and Superintendent of Criminal Investigation Manning dashed to the hotel.

There, in room No. 21, on the third floor, facing Broadway, the proprietor had found bits of a torn telegram and in piecing it together saw that it had come from Evanston, Ill., the day before. It was addressed to Arthur C. Burch at the hotel. Burch was the name signed on the register by a young man who rented the room July 24. This man telephoned to the hotel in the afternoon of Sunday, July 24, and asked if there was a room vacant facing Broadway. He made attempts to persuade the occupant of a room further south to exchange rooms with him and finally decided to keep room No. 21.

Mr. Haley and employees of the hotel read all the details of the Kennedy murder. Mr. Kennedy's office, they remembered, was in the Homer Laughlin Building, directly across the street from the hotel. The woman with Mr. Kennedy at the time of the murder, they also recalled, was from Evaston. Then Mr. Haley remembered the man who registered as Burch acted rather strangely. He was very anxious to have a room only a few feet away from the room he occupied. He came with an unusually long suit case.

WATCHED BUILDING.

He said he did not know how long he would stay and asked for the privilege of having a woman, whom he termed his cousin, visit him at his room. He promised to leave the door open on such visits. Blanche Rogers, a maid at the hotel, remembered that on the occasion of these visits of the cousin, the woman and Burch would sit at the window and watch something across the street. On another occasion, she said she remembered she saw the man sit at the window, gazing intently at the Homer Laughlin Building. On the night of the murder, it was remembered by A. B. Niles, night clerk at the hotel, that Burch left the building with a long package under his arm. When Burch returned that night, a few minutes before midnight, he did not carry the package.

That morning, Haley told the officers, he and others in the hotel saw Burch in room No. 21, sitting on the bed. This time he was not as always in the past, watching the Laughlin Building. He was engrossed in reading the latest accounts of the murder of J. Belton Kennedy. A few minutes later he packed up and checked out of the hotel. When Mr. Haley entered the room after Burch's departure, he walked to the window and looked out across Broadway. Almost exactly opposite where he stood he saw the words "J. D. Kennedy, Insurance," in glittering gold letters. He then called the Sheriff's office.

CARD REVEALED.

A search of the room revealed a business card of Wilhite & Leader, 823 South Spring street, automobiles for hire. Mr. Haley recalled that Burch inquired where he could rent cars without drivers. A search of records at the automobile place disclosed that a touring car was rented there July 24, the day of Burch's arrival, by a man who signed his name M. C. Obenchain and his residence, Alexandria Hotel. There was just one peculiarity about that signature and it later formed one of the strongest links in the State's case.

Burch had surrendered the car and received part of his deposit before the murder of Kennedy.

Armed with this evidence, Deputy Sheriff Nolan rushed back to the Sheriff's office, where Mrs. Obenchain was being questioned while Supt. Manning and Undersheriff Biscailuz searched for the trail of Burch. It was fast work; no time was to be lost. In a big county automobile, sirens screeching a warning to the traffic, the officers darted back and forth across the city, covering railroad stations and ticket offices. At the Santa Fe ticket office they finally picked up the trail. The return portion of Burch's ticket was validated there that day.

BURCH TRAILED.

At the Salt Lake Railroad station they clinched it. A ticket to Chicago had been bought by Burch and his car number and berth number were learned. Back to the Sheriff's office the officers went and in a few minutes wires were buzzing with instructions to arrest Arthur C. Burch on a charge of murder and hold him in custody. The train on which Burch was riding was then in the heart of the desert. It was due at Las Vegas, Nev., at 10 o'clock and there the arrest was planned.

Mrs. Obenchain was asked about Burch. She at first manifested great surprise—was obviously taken off her guard. Then she tried to convince the officers that Burch could have had nothing to do with the murder. She said he was an old college pal of hers. They had borrowed money from each other, she said. She knew he was in Los Angeles, she had seen him several times, talked with him, but insisted he knew nothing about the matter.

In the midst of this conversation another bit of evidence, which the prosecuton regards as strong, arrived at the Sheriff's office. It was a special delivery letter, mailed in Los Angeles at 10 o'clock that morning a few minutes before the departure of the train on which Burch was then speeding eastward.

SENT TO MADALYNNE.

It was addressed to Mrs. Obenchain in care of M. Louise Wilson, proprietress of a beauty shop in the Security Building and an old-time acquaintance and confidante of Mrs. Obenchain.

Inside the envelope were two blank sheets of paper and $85 in bills, with nothing to indicate the identity of the sender—except two things. Burch, Mrs. Obenchain said, had borrowed that sum from her a few days before. The other was the beginning of the prosecution's chain of evidence—a characteristic of handwriting. The address on the envelope was printed, every letter of it except one, that was initial "C" in Mrs. Obenchain's name. Through habit perhaps, the writer wrote it instead of printing it. A characteristic hook on the top of the letter and the sharp-pointed line on the bottom of it were identical with the letter "C" signed to the card of the automobile livery on Spring street, where Burch is said to have signed "M. C. Obenchain," when renting the car.

BURCH ARRESTED.

From that time on developments came fast and the State began to shape its way out of the mystery of the slaying of J. Belton Kennedy. Burch was arrested at Las Vegas. He admitted his identity. Telegraphic communication with Chicago disclosed the fact that he was the son of William A. Burch, retired minister and formerly secretary of the Northwestern University. He was a year behind Mr. Obenchain and Mrs. Obenchain in college. He married Allie Quayle, daughter of Bishop W. A. Quayle of St. Louis. He had been in business in Chicago and left there July 21 for California for a vacation.

Burch, after his arrest, told Sheriff Sam Gay and Chief of Police McCarter of Las Vegas he would Husband Wins Decree After Forty Year's Wedded Life; Woman Doesn't Appear.

Mrs. E. A. Summers, known as the oil queen, was divorced from Alpha C. Summers in Judge Toland's court yesterday. Mrs. Summers, who married him forty years ago, did not appear and contest the case. The ground was desertion.

The Summers were married in Kentucky on Sept. 27, 1881. They separated in May, 1908. Mrs. Summers left her husband while they were living at 819 California street and took up her residence in the Wilshire district. Mrs. Summers is wealthy in her own right.

Attempts on the part of Mr. Summers to effect a reconciliation proved of no avail, he declared.

History of Obenchain-Burch-Kennedy Case Since Shots Rang Out Near Beverly Glen Cottage.

nothing. He has fine hands,

BURCH ENJOYS DRAMA.

We talked about everything from to Mrs. Obenchain. He laughed a great deal and said he enjoyed the murder drama himself: that he expected Woolwine to produce something spectacular at least once a day during the trial. At the same time he seemed to me to be laboring under a very severe nervous strain. His laugh had no merriment and I think he was acutely conscious of the fact that the woman in the dark corner about twenty feet away was debating with her ex-husband what she should do at the trial. When you know an angry woman may have your life in your hands, the fact probably does not add much to joyousness or continuity of thought.

Burch seemed to be very much interested in the fact that the New York papers are filled with his name. "I can't understand it," he said.

"Well," I answered, "they have been talking for 2000 years about Anthony and Cleopatra."

He laughed nervously and that opened the way for me to quiz him about Mrs. Obenchain.

I asked him frankly what it was about her that seemed to enthrall men at a glance. I told him she had put the famous vamps in history pushed back into the wall-flower class.

"Well," he said, with a nervous smile, "it is something that I can't tell you. To know you will have to meet her yourself. I never could tell you."

He indicated her with a rather spasmodic jerk of his head. "She is right over there now; go find out yourself."

And so I went.

One of the newspaper men who came to interview Mrs. Obenchain and went away to rave told me her fascination lay in the fact that she was so helpless and appealing. I knew better than that before I saw her. Helpless women are kissed, but they are never died for. I also knew she would not have a sense of humor; no woman who ever cracked a joke in her life ever was died for.

Mrs. Obenchain was, in fact, pretty much what I expected her to be—except that she is tall. Nearly all women with this strange hold over men have been small.

Madalynne is tall and dark. It is easy to understand that she wrote letters to Kennedy with a lot of stuff about Greek gods. She is sentimental, rather inclined to be exotic, mystic and passionately sympathetic.

There is a kind of rough amateur among women vamps, who listen to the troubles of men and gain the reputation of being sympathetic. The finished artists are those who tell their troubles to men and—so are sympathetic. Boy, run when you meet the kind who tell you their troubles in a gentle, stricken voice! They are the unconscious sirens of the world.

FACE OF UNSOLD POET.

Mrs. Obenchain has the face of the poet (the kind that doesn't sell their poems) and the mystic. Her eyes are gray and very full. You can see the whites under the pupils. Her brows are heavy, very much arched and very short. Her mouth is sensitive; but her jaw is firm and determined. I particularly noticed her hands. They are the hands of a psychic—extraordinarily soft and long with nails trimmed to a point and long-pointed fingers. Her hair grows low and is coiled still lower over a brow that is the Greek of the Greek statues.

She had been kind enough to stop an important conference with her ex-husband to talk to me and the nervousness of the great crisis, I suppose, was still upon her. Anyhow, her hands traveled in a never-ending fighting route over the long shell necklace that she wore draped over the front of her dress.

When she half rose to acknowledge the introduction, she did not impress me as being helpless at all; but I did at once detect in her manner that "You-understand-and-I-understand - but - they - do-not-understand" tone that is fatal to men.

NO MOVIE AMBITIONS.

We talked for a few moments about her life in the jail and about the stage and the movies. She said she had thought at one time of going on the stage, but had never considered it very seriously; as to the movies, she said in a gentle, regretful voice, she did not care for the cinema at all. I told her that I knew that every woman between the ages of 8 and 80 at some time has wanted to go into the movies; so she, too, must have. No, she said, that she missed the contact with the audiences; she had no movie ambitions.

I asked her about her life in the jail. She smiled sadly and said that the procession of personalities that passed through her life interested her . . . the reporters and the jailors and the lawyers. They each had something from which she got some good.

Finally I asked her bluntly about it. I told her she had ruined the fame of every famous charmer of men in all written history. I asked what it was about her that made men fall at her feet.

She gave me a stricken look. "Oh, Mr. Carr," she cried, "Please, please don't talk that way to me. I have tried to be simple and sincere all my life and I have never thought about attracting anyone. I haven't lived with those thoughts at all."

Feeling that somehow on other I had committed murder in the first degree myself, I oozed out.

As I passed out, Burch asked me with a queer little smile whether I was now to be numbered among the devotees. I said, no, but really I wish she hadn't given me that maimed look of a dying antelope.

RED CROSS ISSUES APPEAL.

Memories of the stirring days of 1917 and 1918 are revived by the "call to the colors," which Mrs. Hancock Banning has issued to the army of 2000 or more patriotic women of Los Angeles, who were associated with her during the great war, to join the ranks and take part in the fifth roll call of the Red Cross. The splendid service these women gave in the cause of humanity is one of the city's treasured recollections.

Beginning tomorrow the women's committee headquarters at 921 West Seventh street wil be open every day, and it is here that volunteers are asked to call and enroll. As there are only twelve days preceding the opening of the roll call on Armistice Day, November 11, Mrs. Banning and her aides are anxious that all those who can give either the whole or part of their time during the progress of the campaign, which ends Thanksgiving Day, November 27, shall come in as early as possible.

"The object of the call is to obtain new members for the Red Cross and to raise the funds to carry on the tremendous work of charity, both in Los Angeles and in the larger field, which it is doing for humanity," Mrs. Banning pointed out. "There will be no sewing nor any other of the multitudinous tasks which engaged us in the days of the great war. We are to devote ourselves and our energies from November 11 to November 27 in appealing to the people of Los Angeles to do their share to carry the burden of relieving the sick, the maimed and the suffering, whose miseries came to them through the sacrifices they made in the line of duty. To such a noble charity the women of Los Angeles, I am sure, will gladly give their time and energy as soon as the necessity is made clear to them."

Frank Ryan, president of the Los Angeles Realty Board, is chairman of the call. The main headquarters will be at the California Building, 205 South Broadway, with A. F. Culling in charge, while the women's headquarters will be at 921 West Seventh street. Mr. Ryan has been assured of the help of many men and women from all ranks of society in Los Angeles. He announces that it is his intention to conduct the call with as little disturbance to the usual business activities of the city as possible. He declares that he can find use for the services of any man or woman who volunteers, whether for only an hour or two a day, or for a greater portion of their time.

Texas Guinan is Exonerated in Check Case.

Texas Guinan, well-known actress, has nothing to fear from the law, for yesterday the charge of passing a check for which she was said to have had insufficient funds in the bank, was dismissed by Justice Brown. It is intimated that a damage suit may result from her prosecution.

Miss Guinan's attorneys, Philip Cohen and Samuel A. Miller, showed to the court that at the time she gave W. F. Wiscombe, a grocer of 4892 West Washington street, a check for $48.92 for groceries, she had much more than that amount in the bank. It was shown that she left for New York and her bank account was attached, but that the check could have been paid from her account for at least three days after the check was issued. It was also brought out that the check was for a past due consideration and therefore the case was immediately dismissed, without great opposition from Dep. Dist.-Atty. McDaniel.

Bail of $1000 was exonerated by the court and Miss Guinan was released, the court stating that she should never have been arrested.

HINTS AT MYSTERY.

Letter in Divorce Suit Shows "Affinity" Role.

Gustave C. Kerner is said to have written a letter to his wife, Sarah E. Kerner, after their separation, which was offered in evidence in Judge Toland's court yesterday. The decree of divorce was granted on the ground of desertion, but the letter revealed something deeper.

The letter stated, "That you will ever forgive me or even want me again, I do not blame you for, but neither shall I ever forgive you for having shown 'her' letter to our innocent Helen before I could defend myself from such a designing adventuress. Would you listen to her, even though I did wrong by you and Helen on account of my infatuation for her? I would love to see Helen as I haven't the nerve to write her since you showed her a letter of her father's affinity, as you call her."

AUTO TOUR BRINGS MANN ACT CHARGE.

Rrank A. Richards was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Long yesterday on the charge of violating the Mann Act. The woman in the case is Grace Holman, alias Mrs. Frank A. Richards. The pair, traveling in an automobile, reached this city in the early part of June from Springfield, Ill., and it is alleged by agents of the Department of Justice that they have been living together as man and wife. Richards was held in a bond of $2000.

DIRECTOR WINS SUIT.

For services rendered as technical art director for the cinema play, "Foolish Wives," A. W. Alley was given a judgment of $5300 against the Universal Film Manufacturing Company by Judge Hewitt yesterday. He declared he had been discharged while the picture was being completed. The company asserted that Mr. Alley was not employed for any specified time, but was paid for the work he performed. The suit was for $6000. The court held Mr. Alley was entitled to that amount, less $700 paid him for services he actually gave.

SLAYINGS HERE INSPIRE POET.

Los Angeles Murders Induce Him to Smite His Lyre.

Sings "Slip Me the Dope and It's Shocking, I Hope."

Rural Editors Whet Wits on "Killingest" Metropolis.

Is Los Angeles becoming as noted for murders as it is for climate? It seems so.

Perhaps it is nature's way of equalizing longevity. Perhaps not.

Anyway the Kennedy-Obenchain-Burch-Cupid-Quixote-Don Juan murder case has caused editors, and probably other people, to wonder whether charming homicides are not native to Southern California along with the savory fruits and caroling birds. But in justice the fact should be stated that two of the three principal actors in the most recent murder-mystery-romance are not native fauna, being indigenous to the Great Lake region.

SERIOUS THING.

Murder, at best, is a serious thing. But we find "Doug," who conducts a colyum in the Jerome (Ariz.) News, writing lyric verse about it. Shame on Doug! But his verse is so good as such that "an old subscriber" urges The Times to reprint it. Granted:

"A murder in Los! Goshamighty!
Come on with the horrible facts.
Throw in a mysterious love note
And three or four suicide pacts.
There's a vampire mixed up in it somewhere,
A steno betrayed by her boss.
The press never failed to give all the details
Of a murder that happens in Los.

"What's that? A man slain in Hoboken?
And a woman in Greenville, N. C.?
A whole family slaughtered in Texas?
I ask you, what's all that to me?
Those low, vulgar tales are degrading:
They bore, they depress, make me cross.
But I think it's just fine and I read every line
When there's somebody murdered in Los.

"They can lynch forty niggers in Georgia,
They can blow up a bank in St. Paul;
They can burn Louisville or Seattle,
And it interests me not at all.
But a Los murder story's so zippy—
She knows how to trim and emboss.
So slip me the dope—and it's shocking, I hope—
On this latest big murder in Los."

MORE COMMENT.

The editor of the San Bernardino Sun takes his pen in hand as follows:

"It may not be true that the Los Angeles city editors join regularly in the petition, 'Give us this day our daily murder,' but whether prayed for or not, they certainly do 'eat up' the almost diurnal homicide which makes the Angeleno feel at home, and the stranger wonder whether the new arrivals come fast enough to make up for the number that are removed with the O. K. of the County Coroner.

"It is a habit with us to be most shocked over the latest sensation, but the truth is that murder sensations seem to have become chronic in the neighboring metropolis, and it becomes an easy matter to stretch one over a few days if necessary until another one develops, so that day after day it is an orgy of killing. Just what it is in the environment that makes men—and women—want to reduce the population we cannot guess, but things are rapidly coming to the point that it will be proper to stop travelers at the city's gates and inquire if they have any romance which is likely to lead them into the criminal courts.

"Naturally—in Los Angeles, all of these suspects are immediately tried and convicted in the newspapers, the resultant atmosphere being such that if there were any question as to guilt, a fair trial would be impossible. Just now it is a mysterious murder of a young man who seems to have been a bachelor when he ought to have been married. Before that it was the killing of a police officer by a drug addict, who always kept just two jumps ahead of the arresting officers—and is at least that far ahead of them yet. A little earlier it was the Denton case. Yes, Los Angeles is easily the killingest municipality we happen to know of."

There are many other comments by editors in the great Southwest and elsewhere. But none attempts to analyze the reasons for this city's failing, as charged. Nor has any suggested that Los Angeles retain a municipal criminologist or something.

TO AID DEAF.

Earl C. Hanson's Device Wins Him Praise; Ready for Delivery.

Earl C. Hanson, who came into the public eye through the invention of the piloting cable system adopted by the government for guiding vessels through the fog into harbors, is receiving congratulations on his latest device, the vactuphone, which is now being manufactured by the Western Electric Company.

The first of these humanitarian instruments, which are said to be to the ears what glasses are to defective eyes, making it possible for one hard of hearing to use a telephone successfully, were ready for delivery yesterday.

The young inventor has been financed through the experimental stages of his inventions by the Title Insurance & Trust Company.

SIX-FOOT OSPREY CAUGHT.

A giant osprey, biggest of fish hawks, measuring six feet from tip to tip, which is bigger than some eagles, perched exhausted on the foremast light platform of the steamship Europa of La Veloce line Wednesday evening off the Grand Banks, 500 miles from land, and Capt. Minetti offered a reward to the seaman who would capture it.

Quartermaster Francesco Donato volunteered and had a battle with the big bird aloft. If the bird had not been very weary from its long enforced flight down the blast that had borne it off the coast of Newfoundland, Donato might not have subdued it. As it was, the bird put up a good fight, severely clawing and biting the quartermaster before he dragged it down to the bridge with the help of Chief Officer Angelo Cacace. The bird was chained to the boat deck and fed regularly with fish.

The skipper says the Bronx Zoo can have it merely by sending for it. —[New York Herald.

Transform your home with a

HAINES GRAND with the AMPICO

IT MAY be in the house of a friend, at the country club, in the concert hall, at the little theater, in some hotel, or perhaps on board ship—somewhere you may hear the wonder music of the Haines Bros. Grand with the Ampico. And you will exclaim, "Why, only Godowsky himself—or Ornstein, or Steeb, as the case may be—can play like that!"

And you will be right—it will be the actual playing of Godowsky—or Ornstein or Steeb.

For, amazing and all but incredible as it may seem, the Haines Bros. Grand with the Ampico has the power of giving a "living" reproduction of the playing of pianists. And the greatest of the great have entrusted their playing to the Ampico.

Don't wait to discover the wonder of the Haines with the Ampico by chance. We invite you cordially to hear it played in our store any time.

GIVES PARK FOR PEACE DAY FIESTA.

Board Says It Will Do Everything Possible for Patriotic Celebration.

The Park Board yesterday "went all the way" for the war veterans. Col. Charles F. Huchins, director-general of the Armistice Day celebration of the American Legion, the California National Guard and other Los Angeles veterans' organizations, appeared before the board and asked formal permission for use of Exposition Park on November 11.

"The park is yours," said Martha Nelson McCann, chairman of the entertainment committee of the board. "When we needed the men who are in the American Legion and the National Guard they didn't wait. Now, when they want something from Los Angeles, it doesn't seem to me that we should quibble. Put your request for whatever you want this board to do in writing and if it will help to make Armistice Day a success we will do it."

Then the board unanimously voted to allow the veterans to use the park kitchens to prepare food for visiting troops from Los Angeles Harbor, Arcadia, March Field and the Reserve Officers' Training Camp; to allow food booths to be operated for the benefit of the hungry crowds; to allow the sale of souvenir badges and ribbons, and to allow the Legion to operate a parking station for the convenience of motor visitors at the celebration.

"If anything else comes up that the boys need, let us know," said President William M. Bowen and Commissioner W. H. Cline, "and we'll do it."

Through Mrs. McCan arrangements were made for a joint committee of the Park Board and the Legion to prepare the full program for the dedication of the Memorial Forest in Exposition Park.

TWO WATCHMEN HELD ON MURDER CHARGE.

Accused of murder of Samuel Baines, a night watchman of Hollywood, on the 11th inst., L. R. Mills and A. R. Ridland, also night watchmen in that district, were held to answer yesterday by Justice Forbes. Without opposition from Dep. Dist.-Atty. Costello, Ridland was released on his own recognizance until the trial and the other defendant was committed to the County Jail.

The shooting of Mr. Baines, according to testimony, resulted from an argument over the watching of a home in Hollywood and because the two defendants and the deceased were members of rival night patrols. A dying statement by Mr. Baines was introduced in evidence.

TO MOVE "DRY" OFFICE.

In the interest of economy and for other reasons, the office of the prohibition enforcement agents, that has been located on the ninth floor of the International Bank Building, will, tomorrow be removed to room 515, Federal Building, with D. J. O'Leary in charge. It is expected that within the present week there will be additions to the list of enforcement agents, to the end that the new program of prosecuting those who carry intoxicating liquors to be drunk in Los Angeles city cafes may be carried out.

THE FERTILE SPOT.

The man with the figures again calls attention to the fact that they produce more things on a large scale in Imperial Valley than in any other section of the country. They raise everything but umbrellas in the Imperial Valley.

CARRYING ON THE HIP.

If a man carries a whiskbroom in his hip pocket nowadays he is under all sorts of suspicion. He may be shot for a bootlegger or pinched as a roisterer. The safest plan is to carry nothing more bulky than a porous plaster. We must help to make the country safe for the prohibitionists.

READING THE LIPS.

Have you been to a lip-reading party lately? They are quite the thing and the training can be followed up by a visit to the movies for practice. Some girl students are so keen that they can read a whispered "I love you" in the dark. Ability to read the lips at sight comes handy when one gets old and deaf. It is a form of preparedness.

THE DELINQUENTS.

Health officers in cities roundabout are preparing rules for police officers to enable them to detect intoxication. They didn't do this in the old days. If a man couldn't lie down on the ground without falling off he was supposed to be drunk. Now if his carotid artery pulses a few times he is under suspicion of contamination. It pays to be careful.

SYNTHETIC PSYCHOLOGY.

Would any lady or gentleman in the room like to be a synthetic psychologist? It seems to be a fair-to-middling business, at that. One of them is collecting from $3 to $5 a head from audiences for telling how it feels to be one. Over El Segundo way they think a synthetic psychologist is a party who can take rabbits out of a plug hat. In Pasadena they know him to be a savant who can spread the human soul on a bran muffin. As a matter of fact, a synthetic psychologist is a highbrow who can extract $3 from the human pocketbook by biting off a shred of impressive words.

HUNTING FOR HUSBANDS.

Lots of English women are coming to this country. If an English girl can raise enough money to pay her transportation and get by the barrier she is glad to take a chance on America. She figures that her chance of securing a husband is about 100 per cent better than in the home land. In England the women now greatly outnumber the men and so the prospects of securing a mate are not good. When they reach this country they begin the pursuit at once. What do the American damsels think of an invasion of this kind? First thing we know they will be asking a prohibitive tariff for protection against the pauper brides of Europe. Some of our home girls find it hard enough to find a suitable male mate without having to compete with the rest of the universe. A tariff would be a wise thing, to their manner of thinking.

IN DARKEST RUSSIA.

Maxim Gorky says that the genius and intelligence of Russia are bankrupt. He will spend his remaining days in the effort to salvage something from the work of Russian scientists during the last five or six years. There have been important discoveries in medical science and in economics, but there is no way of getting them before the people. Nothing is being printed in Russia except the gospel of the commune. Gorky says that Russian physicians have made wonderful progress and discoveries in the treatment of tuberculosis; but nothing has been done to give this knowledge to the world. He says that the intelligentzia of the land of red and white desolation is a thing of the past. The birth rate of the class is less than 1.75 per 1000, which means the extinguishment of the lamp of literature. Russian philosophers and writers fanned the fires of Socialism until the flames have devasted the land.

INSIDE AND OUTSIDE.

The bitter-enders insist that the United States must not even recognize in the smallest way the existence of a League of Nations. So far as they are concerned there is no such animal. No matter how many countries pin their faith to it or hold membership, it has not even the flimsy fabric of a dream. For the President of the United States to even whisper the name of the League is treason. Yet it is of record that at a recent session of the great council at Geneva no less than fifteen notes from our Secretary of State and his department were read and received in a single day. For a nation determined to have no fellowship or communion with a League of Nations we are indicating to the world a delicious morsel of inconsistency. Col. George Harvey, an original anti-leaguer, is sitting in at practically all of the sessions of the council and frequently participates in the proceedings. The rest of the statesmen and diplomats view the position of Uncle Sam as a good joke and carry a tolerant smile. But back in their home countries the people are wondering what sort of government it is that will not openly associate with them, yet insists on dictating their consciences. There are now over fifty nations in the big League. How many of them are really chummy with the United States? In case of a showdown—in the hour of great need Great Britain would be about the only one we could depend upon and that would be because she speaks the same tongue.

THE CITY HALL LOBBY.

The old-time lobbyist has gone out of fashion in most of the legislative halls of America, but he is still rampaging around at the Los Angeles City Hall. Countless Mayors have tried to kick these men out of the city government, to which they have attached themselves like barnacles on a ship's bottom, but the Mayors have wearied of the job or the voters have wearied of the Mayors for many reasons, and the lobbyist has continued to slink about in the jungles of city political affairs as taxpayers and property owners have learned later to their cost, when their assessments and tax bills have arrived.

During the flurry preceding the municipal elections lobbyists disappear from City Hall; the Council candidates appear in the roles of free, untrammeled friends of the taxpayers and the people at large and distribute promises right and left that if elected to office they will lie awake o' nights working out ways and means to serve the common good. "Hooray!" says the voter, who casts his ballot, elects Councilman Bjones to office and then proceeds to forget all about the city government for two years. The lobbyist then reappears and takes up his task of peddling his "influence" with the Council wherever he can find a customer. The so-called "paving trust" has paving materials to sell. Paid lobbyists see to it that streets are found on which to lay paving material and then, being acquainted with all of the details of the "red tape" surrounding street improvements, the lobbyists patiently follow these proceedings through and finally, snapping their whip of control over the Council, the lobbyists secure sufficient votes to order the work done over the protest of the majority property owners.

A new Mayor takes office sincerely desirous of trying to give the people the best that is in him and to leave a record for efficiency and integrity that will long be remembered. Lobbyists insert themselves between the Mayor and the Council and by subtle methods "gum the cards," as the expression goes, and the Mayor finds himself with his back to the wall, unless he will make terms with the lobbyists and will appoint their candidates to public office.

Union labor uses the methods of the Los Angeles City Hall lobbyist, as was shown last week when the Central Labor Council's scheme to block the addition of at least 300 to a pitifully inadequate police department was successful and by the votes of President Criswell and Councilmen Mallard, Sparks, Sanborn and Wheeler, a mere handful of men were given to Chief Jones to patrol the city.

And what is to be the end of it all? Possibly as long as there are contractors with paving materials and other supplies to sell to the city there will be middlemen lobbyists to act as intermediaries and by retailing their "influence" with the Councilmen put over any schemes they desire. The practice will end in Los Angeles for all time to come when men are elected to the Council who will tell the lobbyists to go to a hotter place than the corridors of City Hall, will tell them that this is a city government administered for all of the people, that in this republic the majority rule is the law of the land and that, above all, the common good of Los Angeles is the only real test that shall be applied to men and measures presented to the City Council, whether it be the appointment of members of a Board of Harbor Commissioners or the proposed paving of Lyon street under the notorious act of 1911.

The taxpayers themselves are partly to blame for the condition existing today at City Hall, where the lobby is growing more and more powerful as the citizens take less and less interest in their city government. It is a pity that the city charter does not provide that the citizens shall elect a lobbyist-at-large to fight fire with fire, to remain on duty every day at City Hall to see to it that the Councilmen legislate for all of the people and when they fail to do their duty publish the fact broadcast with the real story of the "wire pulling" that went on and the reasons for it. The citizens will then know who of the Councilmen wore a captivating smile and proffered the glad hand for vote-getting purposes only and who have stood fast for the best interest of the entire city, whether the issue was one of selling $13,500,000 of the city's bonds for $11,965,000, of providing a soft berth in the city's service for a friend of a friend of the lobbyist or of recommending that the city purchase a lot of idle land belonging to a city politician.

The lobbyist is as out of date as the dodo bird, but he is retaining his clutches wherever he can find a complaisant legislator and a client for his most dubious "services." When the lobbyist is kicked out of Los Angeles City Hall it will be a happy day for the city government, the taxpayers and the people.

CAN'T AFFORD TO BE SICK.

Despite the fact that all men are supposed to be equal in the United States there are three classes here, as elsewhere—the rich, the middle and the poor. The latter and the former can afford to be sick, but the middle class cannot because of the high cost of doctors, nurses and medicine. A noted surgeon has made the charge that the nurses have joined the profiteers and demand exorbitant pay for their services. He declares that as things now are only the very rich or the very poor can receive proper treatment and care when sick. The very rich can pay for it; the very poor get it for nothing. The physician asserts that if the present prohibitive cost of sickness for the middle class continues these people will be driven to pauperize themselves and nothing is so disintegrating to business integrity as pauperization. The burden of the surgeon's letter is that the nursing union is to blame and that it has become the most autocratic closed shop in the country. While the physician says nothing about the high charges made by many men of the medical profession, he certainly has succeeded in calling attention to a growing problem which has been raised through the unionization of nurses. There was a time when a salaried man could, in case of sickness in his family, get the services of a nurse for about $18 a week and the nurse, of course, received her board and lodging. Nowadays few nurses will look at any wage under $35 a week, and how can the ordinarily circumstanced man pay such a sum in addition to the other bills which rain upon him when illness descends on the home? And suppose the costly services of the nurse and the doctor are of no avail and the patient dies. Then comes the undertaker and the last stage of the unfortunate family is worse than the first.

PRODUCTION AND GROWTH.

It is gratifying to note that Southern California is increasing its production as rapidly as it is gaining in population. That means that the growth, remarkable though it has been, is healthy and substantial, that it is capable both of sustaining itself and of laying the foundation for further growth. It means also that newcomers have found ways to participate in the activities and production of the community without undue loss of time.

Population gains, especially when they are as huge as in the past few years in California, are impressive. They are more conspicuous and more readily understood than some of the attendant phases of growth. Figures on increase of population are obvious. They lend themselves to striking comparisons and require little analysis. They are doubly significant in California, however, when considered in connection with our tremendous gains in industry, trade and general production.

Los Angeles county, with the exception of one or two years, has led the counties of the United States in the value of its soil products. It has held the lead, not because of its orange groves, although it produces superb oranges, and not because of its dairy products, although its dairies are among the best in the land. It ranks first because it produces a great variety of valuable products. It not only produces in quantity, but excels in yield and quality.

When Los Angeles county first took the lead in soil production among the counties of the nation its agricultural and horticultural phases were more pronounced by comparison than now. Since then the population has quadrupled. A world metropolis has come into being within its borders. Land that once was purely agricultural is now thickly settled with residences. Crops of barley that a few years ago were raised where the fashionable Wilshire district now is, and in other portions of Los Angeles, no longer figure in the county's agricultural production.

Groves of bearing fruit trees have been cut up into residence lots to make room for the rapidly swelling population. Urban life has steadily encroached upon suburban life. Yet, withal, Los Angeles county, apart from its population and industrial growth, has maintained its lead in soil production. More intensive farming, better utilization of farming opportunities and an abundance of water made available by the Aqueduct have been sufficient to offset the tremendous encroachments made upon agriculture and horticulture by spreading city population.

Los Angeles county is in many respects the most remarkable county in the United States and perhaps its ability to maintain its soil production under conditions of astonishing population growth is its most remarkable achievement. It has had close rivals in the past and has some now, other counties in Southern California being among the most formidable. It took second place to Aroostook county, Maine, one year when that famous potato-growing county raised a bumper crop and marketed it at high prices. Los Angeles county is almost the southwesternmost county in the United States. Aroostook county is in the northeastern tip of the country. The two counties are as unlike as their geographical location and climate. Aroostook county agriculturists have been undisturbed by any great access of population, but are restricted in variety of production. The Maine county farming is mostly on a large scale. That of Los Angeles county is varied and intensive.

In Southern California more than one county hopes to wrest the championship from Los Angeles. Orange county, small in area compared with many California counties, has been going ahead at an astonishing rate. Figures recently compiled show that Orange county's oil and soil production total this year is almost $90,000,000. The fields and orchards of Orange county are making a remarkable record for yield per acre and quality of product and that county is pressing close upon the heels of Los Angeles.

The rise as a productive area of Imperial county in the past twenty years has been phenomenal. The reclaimed desert has flashed across the agricultural horizon like a meteor. No man can compute or estimate its ultimate limit of production. San Bernardino county, with its vast areas of rich land and its record of annual increase in production, is another rival of Los Angeles county, and Riverside county is advancing as rapidly. When Los Angeles county, compelled to meet the population needs of more people than all California had a few years ago, yields its agricultural scepter it is reasonably to be expected that some other Southern California county will take its place.

So, as population figures swell, Southern California is growing otherwise in proportion. Losing none of its agricultural and horticultural prestige, it is extending its trade relations, building giant factories and multiplying its pay rolls. Production and population gains go hand in hand, making for solidity as well as rapidity of growth.

THAT PEACE PAGEANT.

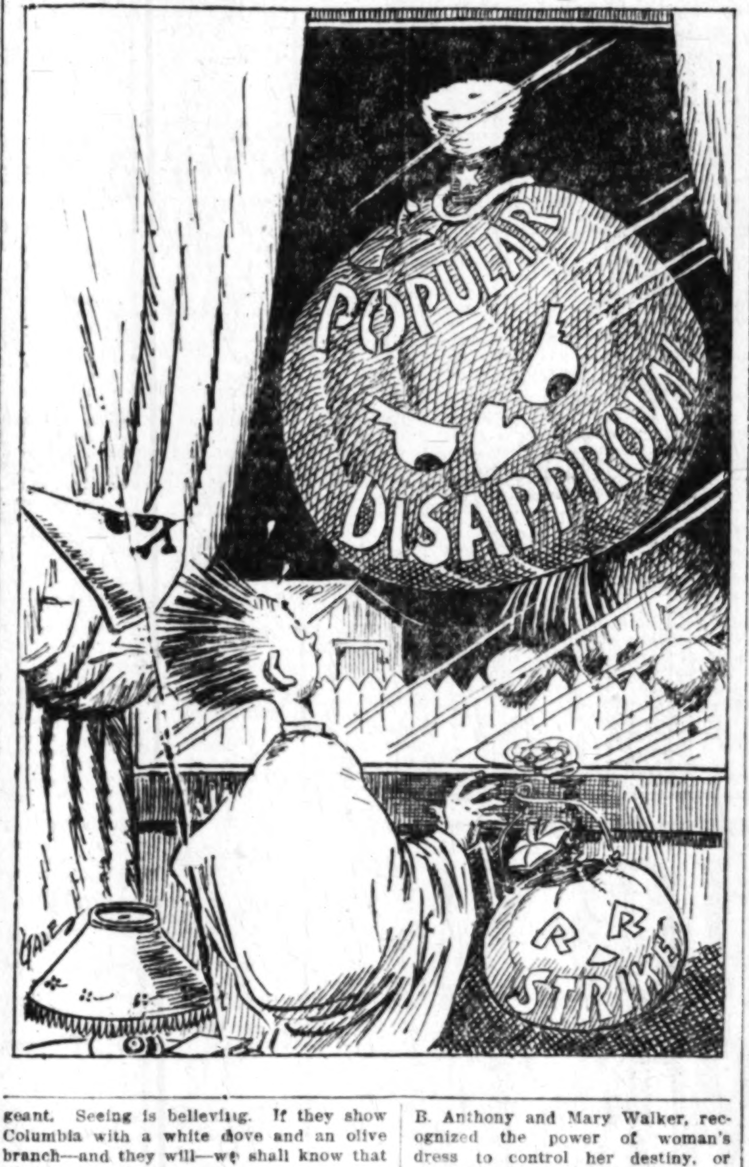
They could not very well have allowed a Disarmament Conference to take place in Washington without a peace pageant. One must positively have a pageant nowadays. They are such an inspiration. At least to the participants.

But it is a shame the conference is to take place in November—kind of chilly to be parading in classical garments, don't you know, and endeavoring heroically to ignore the elements in the great cause of the drama. Even in Los Angeles our Thespians found it decidedly bleak when they gave us Shakespeare in the Hollywood Bowl and unfortunately the ancient Romans never knew a thing about fur-lined overcoats, and it isn't good form to introduce them into a performance of "Julius Caesar."

The people who take part in historic pageants always impress us as being peculiarly sacrificial. They have to sacrifice their personal dignity, their comfort and their beauty in such a dubious cause. They always look anxious, hungry, cold, self-conscious and lacking in that fine confidence that correct attire and a seven-course dinner—on time—inspire. Pageants always butt into one's mealtimes, always wear one to a frazzle of nervous tension, always demand foolish clothing and not enough of it, and no one is ever remotely deceived by even the cleverest make-up.

But it is so obvious that a Disarmament Conference without a pageant would be a futile, worthless thing. Amateur dramatic allegory is an indispensable concomitant of practical international debate. If we can't have both by all means let us have the pageant. Seeing is believing. If they show Columbia with a white dove and an olive branch—and they will—we shall know that all is well with the world.

The Young Man Who Changed His Mind about "Going Out."



THAT OSCILLATING PENDULUM.

Apropos of sundry and divers hints regarding coming styles in woman's dress we are concerned lest a retrograde movement has started—a swing of the pendulum back toward the acres of crinoline and the yards of voluminous and trailing skirts. The recent decisions from "the powers that be" contain startling and fearsome possibilities.

There are no limits as to what it may involve. There is a psychology in dress intimately connected with the psychology of mental attitudes. For instance—a woman cannot feel truly "emancipated" when forced to waddle about swathed in long and cumbersome skirts. To be sure, they will not start with nine or eleven gores—that would be too shockingly radical, even for the most hopelessly servile of Dame Fashion's blind devotees. We all know from past experience, however, that our liberties are easily and skillfully encroached upon. It will be but a short transit from the increased length to the billowing width—then (heaven help the dear ladies) of what use will the ballot and all their newly acquired powers be? The mopsy skirt, with its obsolete fullness, is of itself a badge of serfdom. The short and abbreviated skirt is a sign and symbol of freedom—with all the newly acquired powers and prerogatives that go with it.

The logical and philosophical mind sees in the pronouncement of doom upon the short skirt a possible reversion of type. Some of the men will remember her—the Godey's Ladies' Book type! (The women will not be expected to, as it involves a delicate question of age!) She was enmeshed in endless yards of crinoline—this pale and ladylike creature of other days! In her, of course, was the "eternal feminine," but she had lachrymose tendencies and always carried her smelling salts about with her. Being greatly handicapped with her tightly laced bodice, her high, stiff collars, her hoopskirts and bustles, she must perforce wear her yoke meekly. She was taught to do so from her cradle—and Dame Fashion helped her to preserve the traditions. Naturally she became prim and precise and sometimes lisped her syllables with "prunes and prisms" puckers to her Cupid's bow lips.

Time, however—the great iconoclast—sweeps us on and behold the fair sisterhood of today! Chic and alert, tripping with graceful abandon in her abbreviated skirt (note the singular noun!) she is truly an evolution! She may powder her nose on Broadway in front of a street mirror and use her lip stick with the bravado of seasoned experience, but she knows how to negotiate congested street crossings even where there are no automatic signals or traffic officers. She has absolutely no use for a hartshorn vial or aromatic salts. When she travels she is not the despair of the train porters with her numerous band boxes and bundles, carpet bags and bird cages. She swings herself lightly along with her dainty suit case and really has but little need of the Pullman porters' attentions. She has learned something, too, of the value of time. The really efficient, modern woman deems it quite passe to always be late for an appointment. The truly "up-to-datest" execute their business promptly and take their pleasures with definite purpose. System is their keynote. Briefly, the women of today are something more than ornamental appendages to the lives of men. They have learned to think with the masculine positiveness, with the logic and lucidity of the sterner sex. With the initiative and efficiency which renders them the peers of men, their comrades and pals instead of playthings or serfs, they have sacrificed none of their feminine qualities. We are speaking, of course, of the finer types of both sexes. There are always exceptions.

Truly the man of today would miss her should she suddenly go into limbo and emerge later as—the type of yesterday! As before stated, there is a psychology of dress and no one can imagine the women of this epoch in the garb of the preceding one! It would be a paradoxical absurdity. Even the advance guards of the suffragettes, Susan B. Anthony and Mary Walker, recognized the power of woman's dress to control her destiny, or shape it. They would not even presume to preach emancipation for the feminine portion of the race until they had doffed the crinoline and donned the trousers. They must have dimly recognized that woman could not be truly free until free from the tyranny of foolish custom—free to dress with ease and comfort. A happy medium between the crinoline and the trousers has been reached in the present-day skirt.

RIPPLING RHYMES.

EASY RIDING.

My car's so easy riding it gives no jar or shock and in it I am gliding at all hours by the clock; and, as might be expected, my chores are oft neglected and creditors, dejected, are wishing I would walk. And every mile I travel provides new, pleasant thrills; but, as I throw the gravel and climb the sunlit hills, the morbid undertaker, the butcher and the baker protest that I'm a faker who doesn't pay his bills. All day you see me striving to make speed laws a jest, and if I cease my driving to give the car a rest I'm boned by merchant princes for pay for prunes and quinces, and every one evinces a spirit I detest. Oh, why do men like tailors insist on being paid? And why so many wailers amid the marts of trade? Why do they always chatter of things that do not matter? Why do they splash and splatter in language that's decayed? "You ride in your four-wheeler," the village banker cries, "but you should pay the dealer from whom you bought your pies; if one has paid the tinner, the webster and the spinner, the fletcher and the skinner, joy riding then is wise. But if a man be owing for milk and garden sass he then is wicked, blowing his coin for sparkling gas; and this the hosts are doing, all heedless they are choosing, while owing for the bluing, alack, and eke alas."

WALT MASON.

LONDON NAMED FOR TAVERN.

Piccadilly, known the world over as a famous thoroughfare of London, received its name from a tavern several centuries ago. The tavern, in its turn, took the name from a tennis court that was near by and much frequented by members of the King's household.

The tennis court acquired the name because of the number of both men and women who frequented it wearing a "pickadilly," or ruff.

The name, then, was originally the name of a shirred bit of silk or other stiff material that was gathered along the edge of the cloak, bodice or jerkin and brought together under the chin, forming an outstanding collar or ruff often six or eight inches wide, and in some cases dandies went to even greater extremes and extended their "pickadilly" a foot or more.

Queen Elizabeth made the ruff almost historical by her constant wearing of it at court functions and to have her portrait painted.—[Tit-Bits.

QUESTION OF BIRTHPLACE.

Prof. Frank C. Caldwell, having given with some detail the story of the academic career of President Farrand of Cornell—rather "checkered career," as President Farrand afterward remarked—when he introduced the president at the Chamber of Commerce forum last week, it reminded Dr. Farrand of an incident during his residence in Colorado. Under somewhat similar circumstances a distinguished visitor was being presented as a native of Keokuk. The visitor stated that he ought to explain that there was some dispute about the place of his birth. Some said it was Keokuk and others that it was Montrose, a neighboring town—the people of Keokuk insisting that it was Montrose and Montrose people that it was Keokuk.—[Columbus Dispatch.

THE LANCER.

With the city going into the film industry to boost municipal projects, politics are getting more entertaining and expensive than ever. We shall probably have scenarios written for both sides of every controversy now, and instead of harking to the old fulsome political eloquence we can get it peacefully via the silent drama. If this Colorado Dam propaganda stunt gets over—and to be square the city certainly ought to provide scenarios on both sides of the controversy, with snappy sarcastic subtitles—we shall soon have the teachers filming a halcyon Arcadia in which the Board of Education is sternly disciplined and teachers' soviets carry off the triumphs in every encounter. And the library site and the sewage disposal ought to prove inspirational, especially if run as screaming comedies.

And if for projects, why not for candidates? A couple of films showing the domestic and commercial life of ex-Mayor Snyder and Mayor Cryer, faithfully portrayed and duly embellished with such romance as their lives may have offered, would have made the recent election infinitely more attractive. Their Majesties of Belgium might have done so much for Snyder.

And the judicial candidates could have a wonderful time running in exciting court scenes, with close-ups of themselves and the current attractive murderess, with cut-backs of the sweet domesticity of their home lives when off the bench.

Yes, altogether, the possibilities are quite thrilling. And it would be such a change from the ordinary crook drama. However, it is just as well to remember that "what the eye doth not see the heart doth not grieve." But, then, of course, the politicians would never do quite so frank as the professional film people. Although, if they start exposing the truth about each other, we may need that censorship board, after all.

If there was one book we thought we could safely leave lying around the house it was the dear old Congressional Record. But, since Congressman Thomas L. Blanton of Texas "caused to have printed" in its sacred pages "filthy, indecent and obscene language" as an "extension of his remarks," we shall have to lock it up with our editions of Rabelais, the Count de Grammont and Elinor Glyn.

Mr. Blanton appears to be one of those nasty little boys, grown up, who take so much delight in writing shocks on the walls of lavatories, for which the best cure is a pronounced application on the old historical spot.

A news item informs us that the little millionaire boy, Craney Gartz, of Altadena, has grown up. A pretty actress is suing him for the return of a gift automobile, which he did or did not give her, as the case may be. And there was a time when Craney gave promise of originality.

The British delegates are perfect gentlemen. They have elected to observe the Eighteenth Amendment while in this country and remain officially dry during the Disarmament Conference. Which, of course, is a delightful deference to the host country—but it is quite a question whether John Bull sober or John Bull mellowed will prove the greater advantage under the circumstances.

Edison says that only 2 per cent of the population has sufficient intelligence to understand a plain, clear statement, because only 2 per cent of them have any imagination. "If the people of the United States had imagination they could understand a thing the first time they were told and act at once," says the seer.

Which sounds very profound, but, my dear sir, there is a good deal to be said for masterly inactivity. In the first place, we may resent being "told" and, while understanding perfectly, still prefer not to act upon the command. And somehow we do occasionally seem to have enough imagination "to act at once," often to pass 3000 "acts" in one session, which are based so exclusively upon imagination that we miss the enforcing reality. And one of our most famous constitutional amendments appears to be so abundantly imaginary that even an Edison would have some difficulty in reducing it to practical exactitude.

But the country seems to be in a bad way. What with Edison telling us we have no self-government, no intelligence, no imagination, and with Elinor Glyn telling the women they have no hearts, no souls, no morals and no manners, we do seem to be a no-account lot. Yet both Edison and Elinor found us intelligent, imaginative and spiritual enough to appreciate both of them in their diverse fields and make them rich.

Prof. George H. Weber, former German professor at the U.C., lost his job during the war because he was accused of "hoching the Kaiser" at a dinner party at his own home, although he said he didn't. The question now arises as to his reinstatement.

As the Kaiser seems to be so efficiently hoched, with never a soul craving to buy the ticket even at a discount, Dr. Weber's best bet would seem to be to take full credit for the incident. Every little hoch must have helped.

The street car was crowded and a buxom maid was hanging on a strap near a little man in a seat.

"You ladies," he said sarcastically, "has got to take your equality both ways now, ain't you?"

The girl looked him over, smiling.

"Quite willing," she grinned—"mentally, physically, morally. Don't dream of getting up."

"I ain't got no use for these modern women," he informed the car impartially.

And everybody smiled. Yet something somewhere had spoiled his just triumph. This sex-war stuff can be very discouraging to its most ardent proponents—either sex. And yet Edison says we have no imagination.

It is proposed to enact an ordinance to put an end to love-making in unlighted automobiles. How should such a law be enforced? Why should Los Angeles be made the laughing stock of the nation? There will be spooning in automobiles as long as the machines are made. And this is not saying that the habit is almost a scandal. There is no gainsaying that, but the remedy does not lie in a law.

WOMEN ESCAPE LEGAL HANGING

ree Executed by California Vigilance Committees.

Put to Death Here for Murder of Husband.

Sentenced to Pay Lives Dodge the Gallows.

BY J. M. SCANLAND.

An exhaustive search of the numerous histories of California and analysis of the counties fails to reveal a report of the legal hanging of a woman in California for murder. It is possible, however, that there may have been a few such occurrences, but the historian seemingly failed to register them. Very few have even been sentenced to death and these escaped the hangman's noose by pleas of insanity.

Three women have been executed in this State, but by vigilance committees. The first was a Spanish woman—the first woman executed in the State. It occurred in Los Angeles in 1836. The next was a woman, executed by Americans, and the other was a negress, executed also by an American mob. One of the very few women sentenced to death by juries was Laura D. Fair, in San Francisco, and she escaped on a plea of insanity.

The first woman hanged in the State, and the second to be executed according to records, was ita." That was the only name she was known by. The tragedy occurred in the mining town of nieville, on July 5, 1851. She and her supposed husband operated a saloon and gaming house. She was 24 years old, pretty, and slender. She had large black eyes and a jovial manner. She was an expert monte dealer, and always dressed in the brightest Mexican costume.

SLAYS ANNOYER.

During the absence of her husband or protector, a man named Conner, kicked down the door of her bedroom. She immediately seized a large, double-edged bowie knife which was on a table near and plunged the blade into Con- breast. He fell dead in the doorway.

Within an hour about 2000 men met in the public square, and decided to hang her. They shouted "hang her; woman, or no woman!" A vigilante court was organized, and the woman brought forward. She pleaded her case, and there were cries, "Greaser lies!" A man who attempted to defend her, and stated that she was protecting her person, was threatened with a rope.

The woman was led to a gallows that had already been prepared. She was told to prepare for death. She prayed a moment, made the sign of the cross, tossed her hat to the crowd, mounted the platform, coiled up her long black hair, put the rope around her neck and exclaimed "Adios!" The affair was denounced throughout the State as a brutal outrage.

WHIPPED TO DEATH.

In the same year a negress burned down a hospital near Stockton. She confessed that she did it through spite. The vigilantes decided upon hanging her, but she fell before the jury, and prayed for mercy. The verdict was changed to 100 lashes. The woman died after receiving about fifty lashes.

Of the very few women legally sentenced to death in California, the case of Mrs. Fair is the most noted. This occurred in San Francisco about half a century ago. Little is known of her early life. She had been an actress, but, failing, adopted the system of marrying for money, and wedded four husbands. The first three divorced her, and the fourth, W. D. Fair, committed suicide.

Then she tried hotel-keeping. She shot and wounded one of her boarders. She was defended by Col. A. P. Crittenden, another boarder, and acquitted. Later she insisted that Crittenden should divorce his wife and marry her. This he refused to do. She waylaid and killed him in the presence of his wife and children. She was sentenced to be hanged, but in a new trial was acquitted on the plea of insanity. Soon afterwards another medical expert swore that she was entirely sane.

EXECUTED HERE.

The case of Maria Rosa Villa, the first woman executed in Los Angeles, and perhaps the only one, was similar to many that have occurred in this city since that time except as to the ending. She had quit her husband, Domingo Feliz, owner of the Feliz rancho now known as Griffith Park, and was living with her affinity, Gervais Alipaz, a gambler, in this city.

Finally, the alcalde brought about a reconciliation, as he thought. Mr. and Mrs. Feliz were returning to their home, both riding the same horse, and followed by a little dog. At an understood signal, the woman stabbed her husband in the back, and jumped off the horse. Alipaz hastily rode from ambush, and threw a lariat around the body of the man as he was reeling from the horse. Alipaz and the woman dragged the body to a ravine, threw over it some brush, and hastily rode away. At the investigation, it was noticed that the dog growled at the murderers, and at no one else. A searching party rode out, and was followed by the dog. When the spot was reached where the murder was committed, the dog turned from the road, ran down into the ravine, stopped at a pile of brush and began to moan. The brush was removed, and the body of Feliz was found.

The murderers were arrested, and the woman confessed, also accusing her paramour. They were placed in jail, near the plaza. A vigilance committee took the prisoners out and shot them to death—the Spanish method of executing criminals.

ATTACKS CITY'S CINEMA SLHEME.

Complaint Filed to Prevent Deal with Film Company to Film Aqueduct.

An attack on the legality of the Board of Public Service entering into a contract with a motion-picture company to take pictures of the Aqueduct, power houses and water plants, was made yesterday in a suit by C. B. Minter. He seeks to have the board restrained on the ground that such a contract will be illegal, contrary to the provisions of the city charter, a waste of public funds and a breach of trust. The complaint, filed by Attorney Leonard M. Comegys, states that the expenditure of $25,000 as proposed, would be an irreparable injury to the taxpayers.

TRIPPET TO HEAR CASES THIS WEEK.

JUDGE BLEDSOE IS BUSY IN SAN DIEGO COURT HEARING PROHIBITION VIOLATIONS.

The business in the local Federal courts this week will be confined to a single department—that of U. S. District Judge Trippet. Judge Bledsoe will be in San Diego all of the week trying violations of the liquor law.

One of the features of the week will be the trial of Felix Tortes, charged with the murder of John Largo, an Indian policeman employed on the Cahuilla Reservation, Riverside county. The killing of Officer Largo occurred on March 22, and grew out of differences between the men on account of litigation in the Riverside county courts, involving an Indian ward of Mr. Largo.

Morris Wolfson, who pleaded guilty to concealing his assets from the receiver in bankruptcy, will be up for sentence in Judge Trippet's court tomorrow afternoon, but on account of the absence of Asst. U. S. Atty. Dickson, who is engaged in court in San Diego, the matter is likely to go over until he returns.

When Wolfson pleaded guilty last Monday, he made some very sensational charges involving the ethics exercised by a well-known member of the local bar, Wolfson declaring under oath that the attorney had advised him to default on his $8000 bond given in U. S. Commissioner Long's court, advice which Wolfson took, but he was apprehended as he was boarding a train for New Orleans. An investigation of Wolfson's allegations has been under way this week.

JURORS SOON TO DECIDE.

Tangled Skein of Notorious Murder Mystery to Be Given to Court for Final Unravelling.

waive extradition and return to Los Angeles immediately. Deputy Sheriff Nolan left on the first train to bring him back. Newspapermen traveling in automobiles over almost impassable roads arrived in Las Vegas a few hours ahead of him.

Mr. Nolan talked with Burch in the little jail in Las Vegas and told the newspaper men Burch admitted knowing Mrs. Obenchain, said the mysterious cousin who sat in his room was Mrs. Obenchain, admitted renting the automobile and said the long package he carried out of the hotel on the night of the murder was composed of old newspapers which he threw out somewhere "on Wilshire Boulevard." He denied he killed Kennedy.

WITNESSES FOUND.

He was brought back. Other newspaper reporters, co-operating with the authorities, in the meantime, found witnesses in the Glen who heard the shots. Otis M. Wiles, Times reporter, turned over to the Sheriff's office two twelve-gauge shotgun shells found between the place where Kennedy's assassin stood and the place some distance away where a car had been hidden. There, Mr. Wiles found tire tracks showing tires of two different makes were on the car that stood on the spot. Ralph Cummings told the Times reporters he saw an automobile, lights dimmed, parked 125 yards south of the cottage between 8:45 and 9 p.m. on the night of the murder.

The officers found that Burch, under the name of G. L. Jones, rented an automobile from the Parsons Brothers Auto Livery, 116 West Ninth street. There he gave his address as 502 South Mathews street, which was formerly the residence of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Erredge uncle and aunt of Burch. This automobile, a Dodge roadster, was in Burch's possession Thursday, August 4, and Friday, August 5. On Thursday its speedometer registered forty-five miles. On Friday it registered forty-four miles and that day, Dick Parsons and Lynn Keith, proprietor and night manager of the establishment, later told the officers the Dodge roadster was taken out by Burch at 7:30 and returned at 11 p.m. The automobile was equipped with a hub speedometer.

STATE'S EVIDENCE.

The State will try to show, in taking the jury over its "road," that the distance from the garage to Beverly Glen cottage is twelve miles; that it is eight miles from there to the long wharf at Santa Monica. That Charles Summar of 1707 South Vermont street saw Burch in a Dodge roadster equipped with an odometer driving furiously along the road skirting the ocean near long wharf about 10:30 o'clock the night of the murder; that William Wylie, a camper on the beach, found floating in the water near the long wharf the stock of a twelve-gauge double-barrel shotgun. The gun had no number, but bore the name of T. Barker. It is expected to be demonstrated that Mr. Wylie discovered the shotgun stock approximately sixteen hours after the crime; that Joe Singer, a Los Angeles gunsmith, said the stock was in condition to have been fired, and that the firing pins had certain characteristics. The State also will try to show that the shells found by Mr. Wiles have depressions in the detonating caps corresponding to the characteristics of the firing pins; that A. E. Rosenthal, a pawnbroker of South Main street, sold the T. Barker gun between July 25 and July 28; that Arthur Burch was the man who bought the shotgun; that the stock of a T. Barker shotgun was left at the gun shop of R. C. King, 125 North Main street, July 27, to be repaired; that the man gave the name of Barker and that the man was Arthur Burch.

THREAT CHARGED.

The State, in addition, will attempt to prove that Mr. Haley, the hotel proprietor, at first described the mysterious "cousin" of Mr. Burch as a dark-haired, tall, slender person and subsequently identified Mrs. Obenchain as Burch's visitor. That Burch received a telephone call from this "cousin" on the afternoon of the murder; that a hat described by Mr. Haley as worn by the "cousin" was found in Mrs. Obenchain's possession; that Mrs. Obenchain waited a week in San Francisco for Kennedy to come to marry her; that Belton Kennedy told his father, John D. Kennedy, Mrs. Obenchain threatened to kill herself if he did not marry her; that she sent a trick telegram through Burch in Chicago to Kennedy's home to disarm the suspicions of Kennedy's parents that she was in California; that Mrs. Obenchain wired for Burch to come to Los Angeles; that on his way to California Burch told Mrs. James M. Warren, wife of a Santa Barbara banker, who was on the same westbound train with him, "I am going to California to see that a certain party friend of mine gets justice. If the man doesn't treat her right I'll get him."

THORN IN KNEE.

On the road which the State will choose to travel the jury will be shown that Dr. J. J. Finley, a physician at that time confined in the County Jail, removed from the knee of Burch a sharp thorn a few days after Burch was brought back from Las Vegas. That Malcolm McLaren, private investigator for the District Attorney's office, picked a bush with similiar thorns near a spot where Kennedy's assassin stood.

In the possession of the District Attorney's office are documents, letters, telegrams, diaries and other papers which may contain other evidence. An interesting light on the relations between Mrs. Obenchain and Mr. Kennedy is thrown by an extract from a letter written by her to him and which Mr. Woolwine has.

"We both should have been honorable and big enough to have played square after I was married," it reads. "Mr. O. has done more for me than anyone else ever would. He is honorable in every sense of the word and too big ever to resort to an untruth. I am not worthy of him—but the least that I could have done was to have paid my bargain. But I listened to you. I believed you loved me—and I loved you."

CONFESSION OBSTACLE.

Perhaps the most difficult turn in the State's road will be the attempt to show that Burch confessed the slaying of Kennedy and implicated Mrs. Obenchain in a story to Capt. Chandler Sprague, a reporter for a local newspaper. This confession, so-called, was kept quiet for four weeks by Mr. Sprague while he was endeavoring to obtain Burch's O. K. on it. Forty-five hundred dollars in cash was offered by Mr Sprague to Burch for the use of the story, the State will have to confess. This "confession" dove-tailed in every respect with the available evidence for the prosecution, excepting that Burch was quoted as saying he tried out the shotgun in Santa Monica and sawed off twelve inches from the barrel. This piece, the "confession" said, Mrs. Obenchain threw in the waters of Westlake Park. In addition to the so-called confession the State has in its possession seventeen pages of transcript of a conversation between Burch and Capt. Sprague. This conversation was recorded over a dictaphone in the County Jail to which Capt. Sprague led Burch for the purpose of making the record in anticipation that his story when published would be denied. What other evidence may be contained therein is unknown to the public.

ROAD OF DEFENSE.

The road which attorneys will seek to show the jury, unlike that of Mrs. Obenchain, does not run parallel with the State's road. It leads in the opposite direction from the Beverly Glen cottage on the night of August 5. The defense that has been prepared under the guidance of Messrs. Schenck and Kittrelle, based upon the repeated assertions of Burch that he is innocent of the crime and his explanations of his movements and actions, has not been disclosed. From indications, however, it has become apparent that his road will be of equal length. Forty-four miles on the speedometer could have taken him away from Third and Broadway in many, many directions. His road will lead, figuratively speaking, to Evanston, Ill., to other localities where bushes with thorns similar to the one extracted from his knee are known to grow.

Burch has indicated that he will be able to explain in detail his actions on the night of the murder, his arrival in California, his remarks on the train, his renting of the room at the Russell Hotel, where he registered under his right name and did not attempt to conceal his identity. Investigators for Burch say that Rosenthal, the pawnbroker, did not and can not identify Burch as the man who purchased the gun; that King, the gunsmith, did not and can not identify Burch as the man who left the stock to be repaired; that witnesses will be produced to testify that the District Attorney's office admitted King said the stock recovered from the water at Santa Monica was not the stock he repaired; that another 12-guage shotgun was fished out of the water at Santa Monica by two boys, named Mooney, in the presence of witnesses; that Summar denied he had identified Burch as the man he saw on the beach road on the night of the murder, explaining he could not have seen him because of the glare of the headlights as they traveled in opposite directions.

MAY EXPLAIN TELEGRAM.

The defense can show, the investigators say, that the telegram sent by Mrs. Obenchain to Burch, asking him to notify Selma Cullander at Evanston, a nurse friend of Mrs. Obenchain, to come here was the result of a previous arrangement and that Burch came here for a vacation, having discussed with Mrs. Obenchain his plans to take a rest long before the murder; that the reason for his departure from Los Angeles was a previous arrangement at his place of business in Chicago; and, that Burch actually planned to be in Chicago on August 8 was shown on a typewritten memorandum given to Joe Thoynzki, elevator man in the Shops Building, 7 North Wabash avenue, where the Pathescope Company with which Burch was identified, was located. This company went into the hands of a receiver June 25. About July 25, Mr. Thoynzki will be able to testify, Burch said he was going away and left a written memorandum saying, "William A. Burch, 1018 South Wabash avenue, after August 8, see Arthur C. Burch, 1537 Ravenswood avenue, care of A. L. Hanfen Manufacturing Company."

The defense will be able to point out that Burch, had he planned the murder, could not have foreseen weeks before in Chicago when, where and how he was going to kill a man he had never seen before and yet figure the exact date of his departure from the city; that Mrs. Obenchain's diary does not contain any references to Burch, although it is a faithful report of everything that has transpired, and that Birch was just a good pal of Mrs. Obenchain.

WITNESSES READY.

Investigators of the Burch defense maintain that they have found witnesses who will testify they were in the immediate vicinity of the Kennedy cabin at the time of the shooting and that they looked out on the road when the shots were heard but did not see either Burch get into the automobile or see the automobile parked where the State will try to show a car was parked. The defense may charge that these witnesses told their story to the District Attorney and were told their testimony was not needed. The defense plans to produce a witness who will testify he looked out toward the Kennedy cottage immediately after the shots and did not see Burch or anyone else running away toward the road, as the State will try to prove.

The defense has been in touch with a witness who gave the information that on the night of the murder, a few minutes after the time set by the State for the crime, a man dashed out into the road some distance away from the cottage and stopped the witness' automobile. He offered to pay heavily for being taken away.

CAR IS RECOVERED.

Early in the investigation the authorities were working on the clew that may be of some importance to the Burch defense. A Mitchell automobile, No.188-917, belonging to Donald L. Simpson was stolen from in front of 9123 Fountain avenue, which is close to the Kennedy cottage, on the night of the murder. This automobile, it is said, was latter recovered by the Santa Monica police on the Palisades a short distance from where Wylie says he found the shotgun stock. A night watchman saw two roughly-clad men, answering the general description supplied by Mrs. Obenchain of the two ragged strangers, tinkering with this automobile in an effort to make it go. When the watchman approached them they fled.

The defense points out that when Burch's trial is called he will not know the details of the charges against him because no transcript was ordered made by Mr. Woolwine of the grand jury transcript as provided by law. Some of the defense, then, may have to be produced by Burch's attorneys after the prosecution puts on its case. The motive for the crime, while not the essential, is an important part of the prosecution's attack, and it is known the defense has obtained some startling information regarding Mr. Kennedy's past life. An attack on Mr. Kennedy four years ago by unidentified assailants said to have grown out of his acquaintance with a woman known as Gladys and a man known as Clyde has never been satisfactorily explained.

SUIT OVER RAM OFF CALENDAR.

Action Due to the Death of Trained Butter May be Settled Out of Court.

The suit of J. C. Flores against Mack Sennett, Inc., involving the death of a trained butting ram, may be settled out of court. When the case was called in Judge Crail's court yesterday it was stricken from the calendar. The plaintiff, who asked for $3000 damages, stated that the ram was rented to the defendant for $5 a day. While in the company's custody, it was injured fatally while being transported in an automobile.

Mr. Kennedy is known to have carried a gun since that date. A large amount of testimony is available and the defense asserts that he was in constant fear for his life. A sensation equal to any so far produced in the case is not unlikely before it is closed, the defense says.

The developments in the case have shifted with such rapidity, so many facts in the case are not generally known and legal phases of the situation are so complicated that the exact road Burch will ask the jury to take, as his way out of the circumstantial net in which he has been enmeshed is difficult to be charted in advance. One point is certain. Burch, according to his early indications, expects to prove where he was on the night of the murder and that point is somewhere within a twenty-two-mile radius from Third and Broadway, where he left at 8 o'clock Friday night, August 5, with a long package under his arm.

And the road of Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain. Where does it lead? It is by far the most complicated of the three, for it winds through the innermost recesses of her heart back and forth across the country; back into the past of her life and the life of J. Belton Kennedy. Geographically, the road may parallel that of the State. It leads, from the lobby of the Alexandria on the afternoon of Friday, August 5, to the beach near El Segundo, to Brentwood, to the Glen cottage. Her road is her story to the officers immediately after the tragedy.

MRS. OBENCHAIN'S "ROAD."

Plus the one outstanding assertion that the man who killed Mr. Kennedy killed him whom she held nearest and dearest to her heart, witnesses, should they be called, can testify, her attorneys say, many facts that will convince the jury that her road is as true and probable as that of the prosecution.

M. Louise Wilson, who testified before the grand jury, can tell of the ardent love of Mr. Kennedy for Mrs. Obenchain, of the intense hatred of his parents toward her and of the many efforts she had made to cut Mr. Kennedy out of her life. The decoy telegram, Mrs. Wilson can explain, only demonstrated Mr. Kennedy's love for Mrs. Obenchain, for it brought him to Mrs. Wilson immediately after he received it. She can testify how Mr. Kennedy pleaded to learn where Mrs. Obenchain was and how happy he was to learn she was in Los Angeles. This and other similar testimony will go a long way toward contradicting the theory of the State that Mrs. Obenchain and Burch plotted Mr. Kennedy's death because he would not marry her.

FRIEND TO TESTIFY.

Mrs. Frank Demond, a friend of Mrs. Obenchain, who returned from Honolulu to appear as a witness for her, is expected to be able to give similar testimony. Mrs. Obenchain's stay in San Francisco, her attorneys say, can easily be explained. Her telegram to Burch asking him to come with Selma Cullander is not inconsistent with her previous stories, her attorneys say. Mr. Kennedy, Mrs. Obenchain can testify, begged her on his knees, just one week before the murder, to marry her and threatened to kill himself with the revolver he carried if she did not become his wife. Her attorneys can produce witness after witness, they say, to show there was a large shadow over Mr. Kennedy's life and that many others could have had a motive much stronger than she possibly could have had for the crime.

In the very batch of correspondence now in the District Attorney's office is a letter in which Mr. Kennedy, writing to Mrs. Obenchain, said:

"Do not think me cold, ungrateful, ah—no—'Tis only that I wander in the dark and ah—Madalynne, I cannot see the light. I know it lives, but the darkness is smothering me. If only I could lift the black mantle away and up from my shoulders and step out into the glorious days."

Other letters signed Talapsone, a name coined by Mrs. Obenchain for those she loves, are in possession of the defense. The very evidence that the District Attorney's office might be able to produce to show Mrs. Obenchain's close relations with Kennedy can be turned into proof of Mr. Kennedy's love for her.

Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Obenchain's confidant, can testify to a conversation with Mrs. Obenchain in which she informed her she had an engagement Friday afternoon to go out driving with Mr. Kennedy and would not be back until 7 o'clock. The State will have to show that Burch did not get the automobile in which it asserts he traveled to Beverly Glen until 7:30 p.m., and that the crime could not have been planned until much later.

Mrs. Obenchain's diary, now closely guarded by the District Attorney's office, contains entries which verify the most essential portions of her story. The scene in her room with Kennedy, the various telephone conversations with him and other important points are corroborated there.

"If I could die tonight. B (Belton) is false," is written in the diary under the date of July 16. Then come the entries of reconciliation and finally the entry on August 5, "Belton called. Wants me to go to beach this afternoon."

Mr. Kennedy's life, the mystery surrounding his fear of others and a hundred and one other things can be turned to her defense. The so-called confession of Burch, the attorneys will maintain, is inadmissable against Mrs. Obenchain.

Such are the roads of destiny for Madalynne Connor Obenchain and Arthur C. Burch.

Which will the jury choose?

165,000 Families Now Read
The Sunday Times

Approximately 45,000 new families have joined the reader-family of the SUNDAY TIMES during the past two months. This is largely due to the fact that Southern California people refuse to pay war-time prices for newspapers. THE TIMES, notwithstanding its greater intrinsic value and the addition of costly new reader features, is the only Los Angeles newspaper to give subscribers the benefit of reduced price of white paper.

Times' carrier-subscribers now enjoy a rate of 90c per month instead of $1.05.

Times' advertisers are given additional circulation equivalent to a 25% reduction in advertising rates.

THREATENED BY VAST HOBO ARMY.

Sweep Toward Southland of Restless, Homeless Men Said to be Larger Than Marked Tramp Across Country of Coxey's Ragged Ruffians.

BY JOHN N. BLACKBURN.

A vast army—if such a disorganized legion can be dignified by such a name—has for a month past been advancing upon Los Angeles. To say these nondescript crews are marching would be incorrect, for they are coming here from several directions, not on foot nor in prairie caravans, as did the Argonauts, but on top of, under and in freight cars. It is a bigger movement of restless feet and homeless men than in 1893, when Coxey's army swept across the country to the national capital for something they knew not what.

The two startling things about this unusual travel are that on certain railroads trainmen are inviting them to ride and that about half of these men engaged in hopeless travel are made up of that class for whom no community hangs out the "welcome-to-our-city" sign — hobos and I.W.W.

About half of the remainder, from such information as is obtainable, are workingmen who are escaping from idle sections in the East and Middle West. Others are seeking the warmer climate of the Southwest and still others are simply hunting new fields, having given up good jobs and responding to itching feet. These last named are embryonic hobos, who are feeling the attraction of the wanderlust.

HELP NO-STRIKE ACTION.

It was perhaps because of this vast movement of men throughout the United States that union leaders were induced to issue orders calling off the trainmen's strike. From information gained last week in an investigation made by Sheriff Traeger in a tour of the county, cooperating with other peace officers in Southern California, and an independent inquiry by the District Attorney's investigators, it is safe to say that the strike leaders saw the handwriting on the wall. They realized that the I.W.W. were hovering about, in fact, had already made elaborate plans to join in breaking up all unions that took part in such a strike, and to swell the ranks of the more radical, outlaw organization.

The senational part of this travel, so far as Los Angeles and surrounding sections are concerned, is that it is estimated that 600 men of varying types, from the I.W.W. agitator to the man actually seeking work, are coming into this city every day and have been for a month past. Sheriff Traeger has been investigating for some time past, working in co-operation with railroad agents and District Attorney investigators have been doing likewise. Two weeks ago John Dymond, formerly an I.W.W., now an investigator for the District Attorney, accompanied by another detective from his office and several Southern Pacific agents swooped down on box cars at Saugus, where these travelers stop to sun themselves, and from two trains lined up 403. Everyone was searched and, strange to say, not an I.W.W. card or credential was found, though several were known to be I.W.W. agitators, part of a crew sent to California from headquarters in Chicago to be ready to take advantage of the strike situation here when the unions had failed, and make as much trouble as possible for Los Angeles and other cities in this State.

SIZES UP SITUATION.

While the officers were there a freight train pulled up, with hobos of many grades and descriptions, sitting complacently on cars. A brakeman sized up some of the lot waiting at the Saugus stockyards.

"Which way you going, fellows?" he asked.

"Going south," came a chorus.

"All right, get on and ride," was the invitation.

It was the same way with trains going north, for not all of the 600 coming here daily decide to stay. It is estimated that about 400 a day are leaving the city. Most of these are hobos, while about 100 or so are men actually seeking work. In spite of that, it is asserted, over 1000 actual hobos have been added to loiterers of certain sections of the city within the past month.

This movement of men is not confined to the United States, for recently a government order was issued in Mexico for railroads to carry such travelers on freight trains. The theory back of this, as is probably that of the railroad companies, is that wherever these hobos stop they destroy property, causing damage to the community and the railroad company as well.

DON'T STAY LONG.

The hobos do not stay long in one place, unless there are vast crowds of them, as it is believed was to have been the case in Los Angeles if I.W.W. plans had been carried out. They know that a hobo soon "wears out his welcome," and the best way to get what they call an easy living is "to keep moving."

That trainmen feared the out-and-out hobo and I.W.W. would take their places if a strike were actually put into effect, is indicated by their change of front to the latter. The trainmen knew that the hobos hate them and would be glad to take opposite sides in a strike, and that is said to be one of the reasons for the unusually heavy freight-train travel. They kept them moving.

At Lancaster, Sheriff Traeger, accompanied on his trip by Deputy Sheriff Larimer, chief of county constables; Deputy Sheriffs Patton and Ball, and a Times reporter, found a startling situation. The valley route of the Southern Pacific comes through there with a dozen or so freight trains a day, and each train is loaded with nonpaying passengers

James E. Davis, editor of a newspaper at Lancaster, says that he can look out of the window of his office any day and count at least fifty hobos, with a sprinkling of men in overalls of mechanics, on a passing freight train. When the trains stop, as they all do, for water, these men make no move to get off, or to evade the brakemen.

WANDERLUST VICTIMS.

J. W. Smith, station agent at Lancaster, says that these hobos are religiously kept off passenger trains. He said his wife, whose home is near the track, has given sandwiches to hundreds of young fellows who seem to have been caught by the lure of the wanderlust. While Mr. Smith was talking several of these fellows walked up and boldly examined the train schedule of the day. One had a kit of tools thrown over his shoulder. He might have been a mechanic, but then, too, his kit may have had burglar's tools, for his companions had nothing to carry.

The routes by which these hobos and others are coming here are The Southern Pacific valley line, about 300 a day; the Southern Pacific coast route, about 150 a day; the Southern Pacific southern route, via Arizona, about 100 a day; the Santa Fe and Salt Lake, over a joint track through Barstow, about fifty a day. Most of the latter are stopped at San Bernardino, where the county is giving those who desire work some employment at a minimum wage, and putting those who don't want any kind of labor to the job of breaking rock for county roads.

TO POLICE COUNTY.

It was to work out his plan for proper policing of the county through the aid of a citizen police, or efficient special deputies of repuable citizens, that the Sheriff went to Lancaster and other towns in the northern part of the county, making the first portion of his plan to map the county to catch bandits, head off hobo gangs and maintain peace in any emergency. At the same time he investigated the hobo situation.

The deputies for emergencies of this character are Evan L. Evans, county road foreman at Palmdale; J. E. Jones, Palmdale druggist; M. T. Shuffleton, garage man at Palmdale, who shot and killed a bandit-killer last spring; Bert Pherson of the Edison plant at Elizabeth Lake; C. W. Shirey, Lankershim; W. A. Dodrill, Oak Garage, Mint Canyon; J. E. Davis, Lancaster editor; R. B. Cameron, Lancaster newspaper owner; J. B. Webster, Lancaster; J. P. Flagg, Lancaster; E. A. Kneip, Lancaster hotelman. Olcutt Bulkley, veteran justice of Lancaster, is co-operating in the plan.

Realizing the seriousness of the presence of a large number of idle men in the county, Sheriff Traeger has recommended to the Board of Supervisors a threefold remedy, and suggests that it be widely advertised along railroad routes leading to Los Angeles, so as to turn this tide of hobos and other travelers on frieght cars away from here.

SHERIFF'S REMEDY.

The Sheriff suggests that the board establish a rockpile inside a stockade, surrounded by a high wire fence and guarded by half a dozen or so men, and including night-time shelter for those who do not desire to work. That is, put them to work breaking rock for county roads not otherwise to be built.

He also suggests that men who desire to work be given employment in honor camps, such as the one now maintained in the Malibu district, paying them a small wage. He also urges that some central committee, representing various civic organizations, be formed to find places for men who can become reliable citizens.

Then, he adds, let those men know, long before they reach the county line what they might expect—the rockpile if they are coming here expecting to bask in the sunshine and live without labor off the community.

Gun Club, Aided bv Government, Seeks Members.

Of particular interest to ex-service men and to patriotic men over 16 years of age, is the announcement by the Southern California Gun Club, through its president, Marvin Young of 2933 South Western avenue, that the club is seeking members.

The government, in order to promote preparedness among civilians through the National Rifle Association, sustains affiliated rifle clubs by granting arms and ammunition to the members. In return the government asks that these be used in target practice. No military duty or obligation either for the present or the future is required.

Through arrangements with the National Guard, the club will use the government range at Eagle Rock, until further arrangements are perfected.

WILL GIVE SERIES OF SAFETY LECTURES.

CHAMBER COMMITTEE PLANS TALKS FOR OWNERS AND MEN IN FACTORIES.

A series of six lectures for owners, superintendents and foremen of manufacturing plants has been arranged by the department of safety and fire prevention of the Chamber of Commerce. The first lecture of the series will be given on Wednesday, November 9, at 7:30 p.m. in the assembly rooms of the Chamber of Commerce Building. The following lectures will be given every Wednesday night through December 14.

The course is not prepared for the general public, as highly technical questions are to be discussed.

H. M. Wolfiin, superintendent of the Safety and Industrial Accident Commission of California will be the first speaker. William J. French, chairman of the Industrial Accident Commission of California; W. H. Whalen, superintendent of the Southern Pacific, and other authorities along safety lines will be among the speakers.

The series of industrial lectures has been planned by the newly appointed manager of the chamber's department of safety and fire prevention, John Maxfield. This work is being conducted in connection with the city's safety campaign.

SAYS MOST OF EAST PLANS TO COME HERE.

STEAMSHIP OFFICIAL BACK FROM CHICAGO ASSERTS TREK TO BEGIN SOON.

Every two out of three persons east of the Rocky Mountains are contemplating residence in Southern California and every one out of 100 persons contemplates visiting this part of the State this or next winter.

This is the information brought back from Chicago by Roy V. Crowder, general passanger agent of the Los Angeles Steamship Company, who attended the Transcontinental Passenger Association meeting in Chicago last week.

"Every railroad in the country will be taxed to capacity this winter and coming spring," said Mr. Crowder. "The Yale and Harvard will figure prominently in this big activity.

"Southern California will hum with visitors within a fortnight. Everybody and his relatives want to see the beauties of Southern California. They have had the desire for years and are saving for a visit to Southern California."

MAYOR AT BANQUET.

Discusses Needs of Great City at Business Men's Meeting.

Mayor Cryer addressed 250 persons at the initial banquet of the South End Business Association held in Burke's Hall Thursday night. His subject was, "The Needs of a Great City," and he discussed adequate police protection, public library sites, the proposed union railroad terminal and better sewer facilities.

M. A. Shuster, president of the association, which was organized about a year ago, presided, and Fred Swensen, superintendent of branches of the California Bank, spoke on "Co-operation."

A ninety-day membership drive was instituted as a result of the meeting and $300 in prizes was donated by west-end merchants for winners in this drive.

First Meeting of Industrial Chorus Friday.

The industrial chorus of the Chamber of Commerce will hold its first meeting in the assembly rooms of the chamber, 130 South Broadway, next Friday from 7 to 8 p.m.

All employees in city or business offices, factories, stores and adult members of the families of workers are invited to join the first choral unit. No expense is connected with the membership in singing units and the only object of the Bureau of Industrial Music of the chamber is to develop individual ability through choral practice. The best standard music will be sung and thorough training will lead to the development of oratorio music by mixed choruses.

Rehearsals will begin promptly at 7 p.m. and close sharp at 8 p.m. in order that other evening appointments may be kept by those attending practice.

Soloists will present a brief musical program at each rehearsal. Members of the orchestral units will be called together at an early date.

OLD-TIME FISHERMEN AT BIRTHDAY DINNER.

TORRANCE FEAST REVIVES MEMORIES OF BAIT CLUB FORMED YEARS AGO.

Mrs. Louis C. Torrance of South Kenmore avenue gave a birthday dinner recently at which a few of Mr. Torrance's old-time fishermen friends were guests. Those present were ex-Mayor Rose, Emil Kayser, A. H. Conger and Harry Pyle.

Twenty-nine years ago there was formed in Pasadena what was called "The Pasadena Bait Club," its ostensible purpose being to catch trout with some kind of bait, and a log cabin was built on the west fork of the San Gabriel River.

Among the members were W. S. Wright, W. R. Staats, J. S. Torrance, F. C. Bolt, Dr. Palmer and Walter and Webster Watkyns.

The club has been maintained through all the intervening years, although many of the members have died. Now only three of the original members make their annual pilgrimage to the cabin.

Many interesting events have occurred over these twenty-nine years. Trout are smaller and the streams are going dry, but fishermen still are fishermen.

MUSICIAN RECOVERING.

Word was received from Tucson, Ariz., yesterday by the family of Harold H. Darber, violinist of the Philharmonic Orchestra, who developed tubercular trouble last winter, to the effect that he is now much better and on the road to recovery. Mr. Darber had not been able to leave his bed for seven months, and was taken to a sanatorium in Arizona about ten days ago.

TO GIVE PLAY IN PALM OASIS.

Gift of Fire is Theme Which Mary Austin Develops.

Drama to be Presented With Unique Sunset Effect.

Many Parties Being Formed to Attend Desert Festival.

The beautiful oasis at Palm Springs is to have a festival of its own in Mary Austin's Indian fire play is to be produced by Garnet Holme next Saturday and Sunday afternoons at 3 p.m. The herald announces that the play will be given in the midst of the desert "about the time the sun sets" and this is true of the place where the performance is to take place, for at that time the sun disappears behind San Jacinto, leaving the canyon in shadow. The rest of the desert is in brilliant sunshine, and the sunset effects of brilliant coloring are reflected in the eastern heavens above the great white sand-dunes.

The desert play is to be an annual affair and resembles in its remoteness the mountain play, which is given yearly on the summit of Mt. Tamalpais. The stage is set close to the foot of a rugged cliff at the base of San Jacinto and is covered with great boulders, having as a background vast stretches of sand and desolation.

SUITED TO SETTING.

Mrs. Austin has written a play well suited for such a setting. It relates how man in prehistoric times won the gift of fire and then through their own misdoings lost the possession of it. William Stevens, clever young Shakespearean actor, is to take the part of Evind, the Fire-bringer, Jeffrey Williams, formerly of the Alcazar Theater, portrays Toomayah through whose influence the divine power is lost; Mrs. William Severance is to be Laela, the Indian maiden, who gives up all for the sake of the banished Evind. Miss Madeline Wynne is the fire spirit and Miss Mary MacCracken, the faithful coyote who attends Evind to the end. Kenneth Carter, Russell Stimmel and Miss Mildred Wheat, of the Pilgrimage play are also in the cast.

Parties are being formed in all parts of Southern California to attend the festival. In addition to several excellent hotels there are numerous camping places on the desert, with good water.

One of the most remarkable features of the canyon, which is called Tahquitz, Indian for devil, is an echo of startling distinctness. Part of the fire ritual is the call of the chief to the mountains, which is answered back from the cliffs at the side of the canyon.

The Board of Trade of Palm Springs is assisting in the production, hoping that the play may attract many people to visit the desert, whose beauties are a closed book to so many. It will be possible to motor into the desert, witness the performance and reach the near-by towns in time for dinner. The ideal method will be to camp out and witness the glories of the sunrise on the desert sands. Mr. Adler of Palm Springs and Mr. MacManus have taken charge of the approach to the canyon and are busy clearing up spaces in which machines may be parked.

Will be seen in Desert Indian Drama.

Mrs. William Severence as "Laela" and William Stevens as "Evind."

PRICELESS .. BOOKS .. IN .. LIBRARY .. HERE.

Old Volumes by British Historiographer in County Law Collection.

THERE are many rare volumes in the county's $250,000 law library, but among the rarest are four books by Thomas Madox, late His Majesty's historiographer.

These volumes were acquired in London by Thomas W. Robinson, the librarian, and are considered priceless. Although 180 years old, they are still authorities on the matters covered in them.

The volumes are "Baronia Anglica" (a history of land and baronies;) "Formulare Anglicanum" (charters and instruments of divers kinds;) "History of the Exchequer," and "Firma Burgi" (rights and titles of towns and boroughs of England,) consistituting one great work.

The county law library contains 60,000 volumes. It is one of the best in the West. To accommodate the books requires 10,000 square feet of floor space. It contains the laws and decisions of the courts from every State in the Union, and Great Britain and all of her dependencies. It represents a collection of more than a quarter of a century, mainly accomplished by Mr. Robinson, who is an encyclopedia of law, consulted by attorneys from all over the country. All of the South American countries are also represented in the library. More room is desired for this very extensive and valuable library.

REVAMPED PORT BODY IN SESSION.

New Commissioner Says Harbor Must be Made Real Outlet for Southwest.

The newly reorganized Board of Harbor Commissioners held its first meeting yesterday with President McKee, whose appointment was confirmed by the City Council on Friday, presiding, and the newly appointed commissioner, Otto B. Kibele, who was chosen by the Mayor and confirmed by the Council for the place made vacant by the promotion, in attendance with Commissioner Richards.

Enthusiasm over the future of Los Angeles Harbor marked the first meeting of the new board. Commissioner Kibele, who has a national reputation and standing as a shipbuilder and harbor authority, said:

"Los Angeles Harbor has a wonderful future, and I shall do all in my power to keep our development program moving along. We must provide facilities so that Los Angeles Harbor will be the open door for handling of Southern California products and so that materials produced in all of the Southwest can be sent to all parts of the world. The steps under way by the California Fruit Growers' Exchange to send our citrus products from Los Angeles Harbor in steamers operated by the growers is a most important one, and we shall do everything we can to aid in providing the necessary facilities at the harbor so that this fruit can be stored and sent direct to the markets of the world.

"The extension of the breakwater to Long Beach is of prime importance, and we plan to call to the attention of the United States government the necessity of making this extension so as to provide necessary sheltered anchorage for the vessels of the Pacific Fleet. We are grateful for the co-operation of Admiral Eberle, commander of the Pacific Fleet, in placing before the government the necessity of making this extension."

The board is now having dredging work done in slips No. 1 and No. 5 on the east basin, but will let no additional dredging contracts until prices have been reduced.

HIS OPENING.

"The college graduate," said President Hibben of Princeton at a tea, "sets out from college to conquer the world. Yes, he sets out with a very big opinion of himself, but the poor fellow soon gets taken down. A college graduate, the day after commencement, swaggered into a bank and asked to see the president. He was told to wait in an anteroom where a small boy was chewing gum. 'Boy,' he said after a bit, 'do you know if there's an opening in this bank for a college graduate?' The boy, chewing grimly, answered: 'Dere will be if dey don't slip de extra five-spot wot I'm askin' fur in me next pay envelope.' "—[Argonaut.

WINNERS IN WAD CONTEST.

Everybody Busy Providing Adventures for Local Comic-Strip Family.

Following are the winners in The Times' weekly contest ending last Thursday for ideas for a local comic strip centering about the adventures of the Wad family:

First prize, $10—C. H. Lore, 320 Ximeno avenue, Long Beach.

Second prize, $5—Rollin Van Amburgh, 1070 Elm avenue, Long Beach.

Prizes of $2 each for available ideas in addition to the above: Bob Crosby, 3801 Denker avenue, Los Angeles; Mrs. Bernice R. Palmer, 246 North Satsuma avenue, Eagle Rock City; Clyde C. Hurley, 1016 South Mariposa street, Glendale, and Bruce Russell, 2116 Fourth avenue, Los Angeles.

The adventures and misadventures of the Wad family have become a household institution in Southern California.

Contrary to the usual fate of great public characters it has been the happy experience of Mr. and Mrs. Cicero Wad and their family, and especially of Cousin Titus Wad, to become more and more popular as time goes on. So much so, in fact, that last week's contest was the biggest of them all.

It seems that father, mother, the children and even grandfather and grandmother are interested in the Wads, and the home cartoonists are scattered all over the Southwest—into Arizona, New Mexico and Nevada.

Of course, there are hundreds of suggestions sent in by Los Angeles readers of The Times and Mr. Cicero Wad finds his time taken up from early morning until late at night looking over the great pile of ideas and drawings on his desk.

A contestant should not be discouraged because his or her idea does not win a prize on the first attempt or two. Great care is used in reading each suggestion and, while the editors do not claim to be infallible, chances for mistakes in judgment are reduced to a minimum.

Each week many good ideas are eliminated in the final selection of prize winners. It should be understood, therefore, that rejection of an idea does not mean that it did not merit or receive serious consideration.

There are dozens of reasons why a good idea might not win a prize, so don't be discouraged. And then there are hundreds of excellent reasons why you should not attempt to "put over" a poor suggestion.

Hundreds of ideas each week are discarded because of carelessness or because the ideas are patently not original, or not properly adapted to the peculiarities of the various members of the Wad family. It is conceivable under certain circumstances that an "ancient" wheeze or situation can be adapted to local conditions, but if such a scheme is submitted it must be so well arranged as to have the virtue of novelty.

Each contestant should bear in mind that a comic cartoon must be simple and fairly obvious in order to appeal to people who desire to be amused rather than bewildered by a supposedly laugh-provoking situation.

Therefore, when preparing your suggestion it should always be the first endeavor of a contestant to have his suggestion lend itself easily to an understandable illustration.

A large number of those submitting ideas seem to be under the impression that a comic strip consists merely of a dialogue between two persons—such as occurs between a couple of comedians in vaudeville. This is nothing more than an illustrated joke—sometimes good—but not desirable as a regular daily diet of fun.

Wad comic strips, in order to accomplish the exact purpose for which they were created, should deal with local conditions or situations or, at least, the ideas submitted should describe local scenes and places.

Universities to Aid Salvation Army Campaign

The two great universities of the Southland yesterday notified the advisory board of the Salvation Army that they will participate in the one-day appeal to be made on Saturday, November 12, for funds to relieve needy women and children of Los Angeles during the coming winter.

The University of Southern California will enter three teams, aggregating 150, and at the University of California, Southern Branch, an equal number have volunteered.

Fred A. Miller, managing director of the California Theater, who a year ago gave a cup in a similar contest—a trophy now highly prized by the Southern Branch of the State University—yesterday offered a like prize to be awarded to the college which secures the greatest sum for the Salvation Army this year and it is certain that competition will be keen.

"In my mind, the Salvation Army is one of the most faithful, useful and efficient means of doing good in the community and I am glad to stimulate any activity it initiates," said Mr. Miller.

Bread Week is Extended Here by Mayor Cryer.

"Bread Week" having proved a tremendous success, Mayor Cryer issued a proclamation yesterday announcing the extension of the observance of the period of another week, beginning next Monday. Mayor Cryer's statement to the public follows:

"Owing to the fact that the public interest has been aroused in the observance of Bread Week, and there is a request that the time for its observance be extended, I have acquiesced in this desire, and at the request of the parties interested I hereby extend the time for the observance for the period of one week, beginning Monday, the 31st inst."

SNAPSHOT ORBS.

Instead of Exchanging Portraits Lovers Give an Eye for an Eye.

"What a beautiful eye you have!"

This greeting no longer means that a crape wreath or a blue doughnut has been stenciled on your orb. It is becoming the common way of complimenting a friend in England, since eye pictures have set society in London agog.

No longer does the man with the camera take in the whole face when he tries a close-up with his lens. He focuses the Brownie on one eye and its accompanying eyebrow. Then a friend has her eye taken and pictures are swapped in "eye for eye" fashion. Indeed the new modern Lochinvar no longer gives his maiden fair a dull ring. He hands her his eyes with the hail, "Here's looking at you."

The famous beauty photographer, Mr. Hoppe, has taken snaps of the eyes of some of the more prominent leaders in English state and social circles. He regards it as invaluable in mind study as a denoter of character. All photos taken of the eye are enlarged and when a number are placed side by side even lifelong friends or the owners themselves cannot recognize their own eyes.

The pictures of the eyes never give a clew to the sex of the person to whom they belong and the eyes are as different as the lines of the thumbs. Some are dreamy, some are sharp, some are stern, others are indifferent and some are laughing eyes. The innermost traits are displayed through a study of the pictures, and it's a wonderful discovery at that.

A man in America can now really "give my right eye for a drink." It is possible to "drink to me only with thine eyes." Others can "see ourselves as others see us." And no doubt America will adopt the fad.—[Boston Post.

REVOLT SHAKES FASHIONDOM.

Edicts of Paris Mode Monarchs Losing Power as Miss Los Angeles Defies Them and Sets Up Style Government Suited to Southland.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

Paris, that citadel of Fashion's queen, whose supremacy has gone unchallenged for, lo, these many decades, whence her royal proclamations and edicts were issued and obeyed wherever a female and a store and dressmaker could be found in combination, is confronted by a curious and disconcerting "unrest" in that part of her dominions on the Pacific known as Southern California. It is this new discomforting doctrine of "self-determination" which is not only proving politically embarrassing but has started a sartorial demoralization.

Time was when Southern California was one of her most loyal and lavish sycophantic subjects—when a sartorial proclamation had but to be breathed in Paris for it to be put into instant execution in Los Angeles. But now a subtle disaffection, an insouciant rebellion, is afoot in that once loyal Pacific dominion. She is not only talking "self-determination" and "independence," but she is defying the decrees that come out of Paris to an extent that amounts to a sartorial coup d'etat.

And there is consternation in Fashion's capital. They are trying to track this disaffection to its source. It is ascribed partly to the machinations of the cinema beauties, who have formed themselves into a sort of sartorial intelligentzia, with minds of their own, at least on this one subject; and partly to the climate, which is much too enchanting to be handicapped by rules and regulations pertaining to lesser climates; and partly to our intellectual club women who attain such amazing self-possession in this quarter of the globe. But the fact remains that something, somewhere, is challenging the supremacy of Paris in sartorial matters, undermining her prestige, ignoring her edicts, scorning her commands.

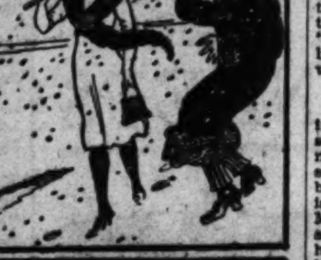
MERCHANTS SEE SIGNS.

The merchandise magnates of the big Los Angeles stores find themselves startled into recognition of the new condition—and are losing no time in readjusting their wares accordingly.

"A hat, Madame? All Paris is wearing black this season. The chic black chapeau for every occasion," beams the capable saleswoman in the "French" room of the millinery department of one of our largest stores.

"Well, I don't like black. And this isn't Paris anyway. Show me something in bright colors, with a shady brim," says Madame comfortably.

"But Madame, everything is of the small, tight-fitting style this season. The shady brim it is not seen in Paris. . . ."



"Pour L'Amour de Mickael!!" Ah La La! Zey are doing zis in ze Los Angeles town.

"No? Well I want a shady brim to shade my eyes in this sunny climate, and they are more becoming to me, anyway," remarks Madame, with shocking independence, the while the saleswoman gasps at this heresy.

"And so it goes," explained one of these store magnates to me. "Of course we still sell a good deal of imported stuff, but half the time we are forced to make modifications and designs to meet out customers' individual requirements. And out here the women insist upon bright colors, no matter how somberly fashionable black may be in Paris. And our Paris buyers have been forced to recognize these specific demands, so that Paris herself has to cater to Southern California trade. It isn't only our film actresses who insist upon this independent individuality, but the visiting and resident women as well. It's in the air."

TO ALL APPAREL.

And this does not apply just to hats—it applies to every kind of apparel. Paris, we are told, is wearing the heavy dark long-coated, fur-weighted tailored suit. Nobody dreams of wearing sports clothes in Paris, except perhaps for the beach in the height of summer. But the Southern California climate calls for sports clothes—and even Paris herself is compelled to design chic sport clothes expressly for the trade here. Our merchants load up on vast quantities of expensive sport clothes and sell the lot every time—when they are "not being worn" by the sartorial elect anywhere else.

And the germ of insurrection is spreading, spreading. Paris trembles for her prestige. For these screen beauties of ours have a nice understanding of what is becoming to their own particular styles. Paris may issue proclamations galore on, say, the subject of long full skirts, but of a Pauline Frederick or a Gloria Swanson or a Bebe Daniels or a Betty Compson considers she looks best in the slim narrow trim style—why she just wears 'em trim and narrow in and out of the pictures and that's all there is to it. And when Mrs. Smith of Brixton, near London, or Mrs. Jones of Sydney, Australia, sees these trim and narrows on her pet film favorites—well, Paris must be all wrong, that's all.

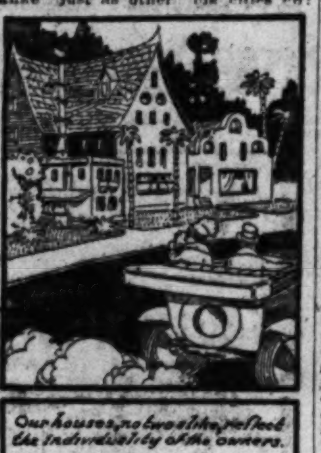
COSMOPOLITAN CITY.

And that's how this subtle insurrection propaganda works. Moreover, we have women from everywhere in the world in Los Angeles, who have not only imbibed the sartorial disaffection of our climate, but have seen these screen beauties in the flesh all defying the Paris fashions to suit themselves—and they return to their homes with their former slavish respect for Parisian proclamations considerably weakened. Thus the germ reaches Red Gap and Timbuctoo and Thursday Island not only on the screen but in the flesh. And if all of them haven't quite the courage to go in for strict "self-determination," they are just as apt and rather more so to follow the Los Angeles lead with her internationally famous "models" than the Parisian lead with her mere professional mannikins.

So it can readily be seen why Paris trembles for her sartorial prestige, how that disconcerting Los Angeles has precipitated a sartorial crisis, and how, instead of Los Angeles advertising Paris, Paris is now compelled to a very large extent to advertise Los Angeles. And whenever a great Parisian fashion house declines to bend to the new conditions—it just loses the Southern California trade, that's all—and Los Angeles chips in with an ever-increasing number of original designers herself. Another dynasty tottering!

ORIGINALITY RAMPANT.

Of course this independence in the matter of fashions is all part and parcel of the independence and originality that is rampant everywhere in this sunny clime. Take architecture, for instance. Do we slavishly build rows of houses all alike just as other big cities do? We do not. You can drive down a boulevard for miles and never see two houses alike, but each represents the individual taste and requirements of its owner. And do we all meekly adopt the vogue in furniture that happens to be stylish in New York, Paris and London? We do not. We furnish for California, for comfort, and for our individual artistic tastes and we gaily mix 'em—periods, styles, draperies, woods, size, quality and cost to suit ourselves and the "interior decorators" be sugared.

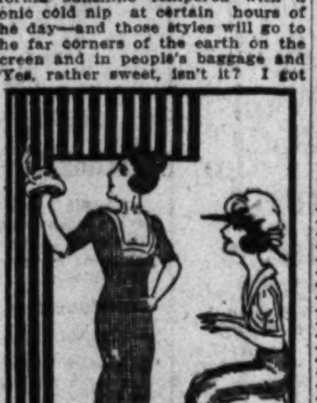


Our houses, no two alike, reflect the individuality of the owners.

We are not afraid to try anything new in Los Angeles, whether it's a vast engineering undertaking, an industrial innovation, a freak law or a new method of raising babies or carving out appendixes. We have this doctrine of "self-determination" furiously developed, and it "isn't done" because we are promptly prepared to see that it is. And we get away with it every time.

FIFTH SEASON.

And at the moment we are busy instituting a fifth season, sartorially speaking. Our climate again. You may tell us there are only four seasons on the calendar, but we know better. In sunny California there is a period between January and March when winter hats and suits are inappropriate, but the spring hasn't set in in Europe, so Paris holds out on the new spring styles. Very well, then. But at that period Southern California is the mecca of the tourists from everywhere in the world—we have a season of our own in full blast and everybody with money to spend. So we are going to institute an extra little mid-season fashion show of our own, with everything appropriate to California sunshine tempered with a tonic cold nip at certain hours of the day—and those styles will go to the far corners of the earth on the screen and in people's baggage and "Yes, rather sweet, isn't it? I got it in Los Angeles," will be substituted for "Yes, dear, straight from Paris."



Straight from Los Angeles.

And as we once stewed in furs in Los Angeles because it was winter in Paris and New York, as we once carried the burden of weighty suits because it was bleak in Europe, it is not at all far-fetched to picture them freezing in spring finery in Europe because the sun is shining in Los Angeles.

Tournament of Roses Project Given Indorsement.

Will be Most Modern Athletic Plant in World.

Underwriters of the $1,000,000 Tournament of Roses stadium to be built next year at Pasadena subscribed during the sale last week for approximately 20 per cent of the five and ten-year stadium seats, according to announcement made yesterday by A. J. Bertonneau, chairman of the committee handling subscriptions for the project.

Following the sale of seats to the underwriters, which closes Monday night, 5000 seats will be offered for public subscription Tuesday morning. Enthusiastic indorsement of the committee's plans to finance the stadium was given yesterday at a luncheon held by the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce in honor of visiting secretaries of Southern California chambers of commerce.

In his drive for subscriptions for the stadium seats Mr. Bertonneau has the co-operation of J. J. Mitchell, president; A. T. Welles, vice-president; J. W. Wood, treasurer; Mrs. R. C. Bartow, manager of the Tournament of Roses; prominent bankers, other business men, and members of civic bodies throughout Southern California.

TO BE MOST MODERN.

When completed, this stadium will be the most modern structure of its type in the world, its backers say. It is to be constructed on a thirty-acre site, with a seating capacity of more than 55,000. The stadium field will be 275 feet wide and 475 feet long, which will provide space for a quarter-mile running track.

The stadium will be built of reinforced concrete and the seats will be of wood. Every facility for the success of the annual Tournament of Roses national football game and other great events to be held, has been provided for by the plans of Myron Hunt, the architect, who will supervise the construction of the stadium, which in many important features will resemble the Yale Bowl.

A unique plan has been formulated by the Tournament of Roses committee to finance the project. Two hundred and ten boxes—six seats in each box—will be leased for ten years for $1200 a box, plus war tax of $120. For $100, plus war tax of $10, one of 500 select seats can be purchased for ten years and 5000 additional seats will be sold for five years for $50 each, plus war tax of $5.

MANY ADVANTAGES.

Other advantages obtained through the purchase of these leased seats include a membership in the Tournament of Roses for the terms of seat reservation; the right of access to the seats for every event held in the stadium, and a coupon equal to one-fifth of the price of five-year seats or one-tenth in the case of ten-year seats will be given to all purchasers. These coupons will be accepted in exchange for the coming New Year's game and when so used will count as one year of the term for which the seat is purchased.

It has been announced by the Tournament of Roses that the money and notes received for the sale of these seats will be placed in depositories named by the Pasadena Clearinghouse Association. These funds are to be used only for the erection of the stadium. Application for the selection of seats may be made at the Tournament of Roses offices in the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce Building.

Whirlpool Foils Camera-man.

The grip of a real rapid—the Rock Island—on the Columbia River, is graphically portrayed in the October issue of Sunset by Lewis R. Freeman of Pasadena who strayed a little from his native habitat to find new subjects for his lens. Mr. Freeman thus describes, in part, the descent:

"I was just about to register 'nonchalance' when I suddenly felt the thwart beneath me begin to push upwards like the floor of a jerkily-started elevator, only with a rotary action. Fanning empty air with both oars, I was saved from falling backwards by the forty-five degree up-tilt of the boat. Way beneath me—down below the surface of the river—Armstrong, pop-eyed, was leaning sharply forward to keep from being dumped out over the stern. Roos, with a death-grip on either gunwale, was trying to keep from falling into the Captain's lap. Round we went like a prancing horse, and just as the boat had completed the hundred and seemed to drop away beneath her momentarily up-river, something seeme to drop away beneath her bottom, and as she sunk into the hole there came a great snorting "ku-whouf!" and about a barrel of water came pouring its solid green flood over the stern and, incidentally, the Captain. A couple of seconds later the boat had completed her round and settled back on a comparatively even keel as hard-piled oars and paddle wrenched her out of the grip of the Thing that had held her in its clutch. I saw it plainly doing its dervish dance of dissappointments as we drew away."

EXHIBIT OF ART WILL CONTINUE.

Display at Exposition Park Will be Kept Open Two Weeks Longer.

Owing to the large attendance at the twelfth annual exhibition of the California Art Club, held at the Los Angeles Museum, Exposition Park, and the great interest shown by the public in the exhibition, it will be extended two weeks and will not close until November 12.

The exhibition includes sculpture, oil paintings and miniatures. More than 100 paintings and pieces of sculpture are on exhibit and the show is considered by far the best and most interesting the California Art Club ever has held.

EXPENSIVE TO STOP.

From 500 to 750 Pounds of Coal Used When Locomotive Halts.

Perhaps the greatest waste of coal is by our railroads. At the present time the country's carriers use about 27 per cent of all the bituminous coal produced in the United States each year. If this tonnage were placed in standard coal cars and coupled in a single train it would have a length of 26,260 miles. If moving at a constant speed of twenty miles an hour, this train would require fifty-five days to pass a given point. Such a volume of coal would be sufficient to pave a roadway from New York City to San Francisco, one foot in thickness and one-half mile wide.

The railroads are badly in need of locomotives and cars. If our transportation lines were to effect a saving of 2 per cent in their annual consumption of coal, the amount thus laid aside would be sufficient to purchase several hundred modern locomotives and thousands of freight cars. For each 1 per cent of fuel saved the railroads of the United States effect a direct gain of about $5,000,000, while the indirect saving amounts to a sum that is equally as great. Of all the coal that is used in the firebox of a locomotive, only 6 per cent of the total value of the fuel is applied to the work of moving the freight or passenger cars.

When a pound of coal is burned in a freight locomotive at ordinary freight train speed, it will furnish sufficient energy to carry one ton fifteen miles. An ordinary passenger locomotive consumes a pound of fuel for every fifty-two feet it travels. Each unnecessary stop made with a heavy freight or passenger train represents a fuel loss of from 500 to 750 pounds of coal, depending on the weight of the train, the length of the stop and the grade conditions. A brake line air leak on a train of fifty freight cars has been known to cause a loss of as much as 2540 pounds of coal in a ten-hour period. The loss of coal each time a modern locomotive pops off for five minutes is about seventy-five pounds. If locomotive firemen were to save a little more than one shovel of coal out of each ton used, the total saving would be equal to nearly 1 per cent of all the coal handled.

The ultimate in fuel economy on our railroads is a long way off. Railroad practice in many parts of our country is far from being modern. For example, the brick arch, if applied to an American locomotive and properly operated and maintained, will save approximately 15 per cent of the locomotive's fuel; yet some of the largest roads in the country are only now commencing to equip locomotives with this well-known fuel-saving device.—[Floyd W. Parsons in World's Work.

HUMANITY IN COURT.

Courts are not pleasant places to be—especially to the prisoners at the bar. Hence the seven men arrested the other day for sleeping in an empty building in North Michigan avenue must have received the surprise of their lives when they appeared before Judge Charles F. McKinley in the Chicago-avenue station.

They had ample reason for expecting fines. But when Judge McKinley had heard their story—that they were from the West and out of work, he ordered food for them, and jobs were procured for all. Then the judge reached down in his pocket and pulled out $7, giving $1 to each, as he explained, "for carfare."

They had come to the cruel city and found it kind. They had been taken to a police court, and found not only justice but charity.

Such things warm the heart.—[Chicago Tribune.

Built to Order.

"What's the matter with Smith? Got lumbago or spinal curvature or something?"

"No; he has to walk that way to fit some shirts his wife made for him."—[Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Is That It?

"Many a live wire would be a dead one if it wasn't for his connections," remarks an exchange. Meaning that the ohm folks supply the currentcy—Watt? —[Boston Transcript.

PICTURE INDUSTRY MAKES NEW THIRTY-ACRE PARK.

First Unit of Eight Finished; Lakes, Streams and Scenic Beauties in Heart of City.

That a thirty-acre tract of undeveloped land could lie hidden in Los Angeles city, well within the city limits and in the heart of an improved and popular residence district; that for a year this tract could have been the scene of building operations and landscape embellishments on a large scale; and that both land and improvement work could have escaped publicity of any kind, is a remarkable fact.

This thirty acres, with certain minor overlappings, is roughly bounded by First street on the south, Vermont avenue on the west, Beverly Boulevard (which is the westward extension of Temple street) on the north and by Virgil avenue on the east. Virgil avenue is the first street west of Hoover. Four car lines pass within a block of it, and it is 300 feet east of the great automobile traffic of Vermont avenue; yet it is so hidden from the casual eye, and so unsuited to subdivision by reason of pools and streams and springs, that the rushing crowd has given it no attention.

It remained for the artistic eye of a motion-picture man, who combined construction and engineering education with his artistic temperament, to see the possibilities of this home-surrounded acreage, and to use it as the basis for an advance in the motion-picture industry. This forward step is forecast in the turning over of the first completed unit studio to a producing company, which will be done within two or three weeks.

J. E. Bowen, since 1912 associated with the motion-picture interests here, is the man, and the Cosmoart Pictures Corporation, with a capital of $500,000, all paid in and none open for public subscription, is the commercial studio that has escaped publicity while for a year the work of developing the tract, bought from the Clark-Sherman land interests, has been proceeding, the first unit studio being completed and the second well under way.

The natural scenic characteristics of this thirty acres, with remarkably little help in the way of artificial engineering but a good modicum of landscape gardening, solve 90 per cent of the problems and expenses of "location" finding, transportation and time, for with the exception of long stretches of beach, battleships and ocean steamers, long, rugged coast perspectives and a very few others, this thirty acres in the heart of a Los Angeles residential district is by nature and the improvements added, susceptible of picturing every outdoor, land and water, and indoor scene that may be required in the vast majority of pictures.

Within a space of a few hundred feet are natural forest, jungle, swamp, lake, river, brook, cascade, mountain torrent, rocky cliffs, bridges, lagoons, farm land, flower beds; snow scenes produced with a wind machine and salt can be filmed while within a stone's throw a blazing desert is being done; and in a confined section of one of the streams ice and skating on a coating of paraffine can be pictured at the same spot where within a few hours lovers may be spooning in a gondola or the villain may be drowned through upset of his canoe.

THE SITE.

The very features that operated against the availability of this thirty-acre site for residence subdivision made it ideal for picture production and location. Originally a haunt of and propagation-spot for mosquitoes in its swampy lower spots, these have been evicted and their swamp turned into clear lakes and running streams. Two lakes of over seven acres have been created. One of these is at fourteen feet higher altitude than the other, and cascades, torrents, etc., can be turned on at will when required. A half-mile of stream is provided for river scenes, brooks, hunting, ducks, geese and swans, fishing, canoeing, boating and dock scenes, all natural except the scenery, buildings and wharves.

The water comes from twelve inches of springs, which feed the upper lake, together with the overflow from the city's Lucille reservoir. The lower lake is fed by thirty-nine inches of natural springs and receives the overflow from Silver Lake reservoir. A permanent contract with the city provides for the maintenance of these open ducts as relief for the reservoirs named. The land is sharply rolling, heavily wooded in spots, and will require a minimum of artificial construction. A Rocky Mountain scene is to be built, a modern street frontage is to be placed on the Virgil avenue side, in conformity with the actual residences of the neighborhood, and an agreement has been signed with the City Engineer to co-operate with the city in beautifying the frontage so as to hide its identity as a motion-picture location.

PLAN AND PLANT.

The producing and laboratory portions of the plans of the Cosmoart Pictures Corporation, embrace the erection on the Beverly Boulevard frontage of eight separate unit studios, each of which is to be so constructed as to serve in the pictures when occasion demands, as a type.

The first unit is finished, as a Spanish convent. This building is two stories, 135 by 95 feet, stucco exterior in orange yellow, the color giving best results in photography. This building comprises a stage 135 by 65 feet, the full length and height of the structure. Ranged at one side of this stage are over thirty rooms on two floors, embracing camera department with fireproof vault and dark room, draughtsman's offices, lavatories, auditor's office, executives' and manager's offices, rooms for the director and assistant, hand property, two suites for stars, wardrobe room and twenty dressing rooms for extras and regulars.

Each of the eight units to be rushed to completion, will be identical with this first one in their interior arrangement, but each will be a radically different type in its exterior treatment. The second unit, already approaching completion, is to represent a North Italian villa. The third is to be an English Tudor ducal seat; the fourth a Holland Dutch home by the waterside; the fifth a Venetian palace on a canal; the sixth an American Colonial residence; the seventh a French chateau, and the eighth an American hunting lodge. As each can serve in pictures when apropos, the buildings serve both the purposes of utility and scenic value. At the entrance is a thatch-roof Scotch cottage, now serving the purpose of office.

Mr. Bowen says seven applications are on file for rental of the first unit, but it has not yet been allotted, although he declares production will be under way within two weeks.

LABORATORIES PLANNED.

After the completion of the eight producing units the plans contemplate the erection of a laboratory building, a period furniture factory, an electric fixture factory and six store rooms for moving-picture supplies, making the entire enterprise self-sufficient and self-supporting, as a virtual combination of eight producing studios with laboratory and supply house accompaniments.

All the buildings are designed by

BIG BUILDING SOON TO RISE.

Plans Completed for Spring-Street Improvement.

Will Represent Investment of Million and Half.

Structure to Take Name of Mortgage Company.

Preliminary plans for the modern twelve-story, class A business and office building, to be erected at the southwest corner of Eighth and Spring streets have been completed, and ground for the structure will be broken within the next thirty days, it was announced yesterday by W. G. Lane, president of the Lane Mortgage Company, which is financing the project. The building will be known as the Lane Mortgage Building, and the entire second floor will be especially designed and equipped to house the offices of this firm.

The project will represent a total investment of approximately $1,500,000, according to Mr. Lane. Recently a ninety-nine-year lease on the site was obtained by the San Joaquin Valley Hotel Corporation from Arthur L. Stoll, Mary E. Stoll and Estella B. Krowl. In this transaction, the lessors were represented by E. C. Iddings of R. A. Rowan & Co., while the Lane Mortgage Company, represented the lessee. The corporation which holds the ground lease is headed by W. W. Paden, as president, while C. H. Price is secretary of the company.

The site for the structure has a frontage of fifty feet on Spring street, with a depth of 155 on Eighth. The main entrance, leading into a large lobby, will be placed on the Eighth-street side, and the upper floors will be served by three high-speed elevators. The ground floor will contain eight storerooms, for which a number of leases have already been made.

According to the present plans for the structure, the exterior of the first two stories will be finished with terra cotta, as will also the upper two stories. The finish of the remainder of the exterior will be of tinted plaster and concrete.

No attempt will be made to divide the upper floors of the structure into offices at the present time, since it is the plan to install office suites to suit the wishes of the tenants. The second floor, however, will be finished in banking room style for the mortgage company, after which the structure will be named. Reinforced concrete and steel will be used in the erection of the building.

Work on the structure will be carried forward as rapidly as possible, and it is planned to have it completed and ready for occupation during the latter part of next summer. About eight months, it is estimated, will be required to erect the building.

The Lane Mortgage Company has been engaged in the investment banking business for the past fifteen years. Prior to the establishment of the firm in Los Angeles, Mr. Lane operated a mortgage business in Kansas City, Mo., where he was located for many years. The firm specializes in realty loans, particularly on properties located in the downtown business district.

Architects are now engaged on the preparation of the final plans for the Spring-street improvement, and it is expected to have these plans completed and ready for building operations within the next month.

JOINS REALTY FIRM.

E. A. Weber, who for the past ten years has been associated with W. I. Hollingsworth and Company in the capacity of manager of the house and lot department, has joined the forces of Metcalf and Ryan, whose house and lot department he will manage. Mr. Weber is well known among realty men of the city, having been associated, previous to his affiliation with the Hollingsworth Company, with Robert Marsh and Company for nearly a decade.

Weaver Will Build Bigger Roofing Plant.

Complete destruction by fire last week of the Weaver Roof Company's manufacturing plant, owned by President Sylvester Weaver of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, although it has not stopped the service of the company to users of roofing, who are being taken care of from reserve supplies, has made necessary the hastening of building plans which the company has had under consideration for some time.

Approximately five acres are owned by the Weaver Roof Company at the corner of Slauson and Poyle avenues, in the Huntington Park district adjoining Maywood. While not yet ready to announce definite plans, President Weaver stated yesterday that it is improbable he will rebuild on the old site and that he is veering toward a decision to erect a modern roofing plant on the Huntington Park property.

In any event, the new plant will be an extension of the former one, with increased facilities conforming to the enhanced importance of the Los Angeles market for building materials, says Mr. Weaver, and as soon as plans are completed the information will be forthcoming.

EXETER PROPERTIES SOLD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

EXETER, Oct. 28.—Vaughn and Balaam report the following recent sales in Exeter: Ten acres planted to oranges and grapes, by Carl Noel, to W. F. Johnson, for a consideration of $10,000; ten acres of raw land belonging to Roland Ross, situated five miles southwest of Exeter on the highway, to Harry Britten; three small residences to different parties, the total sum amounting to about $8000; and one residence belonging to Hogan and Vaughn to Mrs. Louise Balaam.

NEW HIGH RECORD MADE.

Total Value of New Construction Work Started This Month Will Be Nearly Ten Millions.

The October building activity in Los Angeles will not only exceed all previous records for any single month in the history of the city, both in the number and the value of permits issued, but it will also assure the standing of the city as the third in the country in point of volume of building operations, according to figures given out yesterday by the local department of buildings.

According to these figures, up to and including Friday of last week, 4245 permits were issued, carrying a total valuation of $9,296,105. With two more days to go, and with permits being issued at the rate of about $400,000 per day, this means that the October record will closely approximate $10,000,000.

At the present rate of construction, a gain of more than $1,000,000 over last month's record is already assured. During September, the previous high month, permits valued at $8,303,665 were taken out.

The enormous volume of building within the confines of Los Angeles continues to be founded on the smaller and less expensive structures, with permits for homes, during October, again taking the lead. It is estimated that about 60 per cent of the permits, this month, will be for dwellings of various types, while the remainder represents stores, garages, warehouses and other commercial structures.

This means that accommodations for more than 2500 families will have been provided during the past thirty days. At the generally accepted rate of five persons to a family, the month's totals indicate accommodations for more than 12,000 people are under way. In September, according to an estimate made by C. V. Welch, chief clerk of the building department, dwellings to accommodate more than 10,000 people were started. Since the first of the year, housing facilities for between 5000 and 10,000 people per month have been provided, a significant circumstance in view of the fact that realtors report comparatively few untenanted houses, and an active and growing demand for accommodations.

HELD THIRD PLACE.

During the first seven months of the year, Los Angeles consistently held third place among the large cities of the country in point of the volume of construction work. On the basis of building activity during the past two months, and of new construction work in prospect during the next two months, Los Angeles

NEW GOLF CLUB FOR SOUTHWEST.

Large Tract Purchased by Local Syndicate.

Plans Include Building and Eighteen-Hole Course.

Forty Acres to be Subdivided Early Next Year.

Material aid to the development of the southwest section of the city is forecast in the recent organization of the Western Avenue Golf Club at Western and Manchester avenues. Backed by a syndicate of local men, 155 acres of high, rolling land, with a magnificent view over the city, has been purchased by the club. Forty acres of the property extending half a mile north of Manchester along Western avenue, is to be subdivided and sold early next year. The remaining 115 acres will be used for an eighteen-hole golf course, with a clubhouse situated about 700 feet west of Western avenue on Manchester.

Inglewood is also actively interested in the project, since the links are to be located only a few miles away. Bankers, merchants and professional men of the suburban community have joined. Among the suburbanites who have taken shares in the golf club are: F. A. Zillgitt, president of the Citizens Savings Bank; W. G. Brown, president of the Inglewood Chair Factory; Casper Wilhelm, secretary-treasurer of the Inglewood Chair Factory; Lyman O. Calkins, president of the Inglewood Mercantile Company; Roy A. Bush, cashier, Inglewood Savings Bank; Thad Shaw, editor of the Inglewood News.

STREET-CAR LINE.

With the opening of 160 acres directly across Western avenue and along Manchester by Carlin G. Smith, and the development of Vermont Heights, west from Vermont along Manchester by F. H. Dolan, it is expected that the street railway company will exercise its franchise along Eighty-second street from Vermont to Western avenue in the near future.

The necessary frontage along Western avenue has signed a petition for a pavement 56 feet wide, from Slauson to Manchester avenue, and work is expected to begin next spring. With work now under way on Western avenue from West Adams to Santa Barbara, completion of the Slauson-Manchester avenue stretch will open the boulevard from the city line at the south to the Hollywood Mountains.

Though Manchester avenue, the southern boundary of the city at that point, is now in poor condition from Vermont avenue to the club property, its improvement within the next few months is assured. A bus will be operated by the club between the links and the nearest street-car stop, either Vermont avenue and Manchester, a mile away, or at Eighty-second and Western, three blocks away.

Interest in the development of the Southwest is manifested in the sale of ninety lots in the Carlin G. Smith tract, though it has not yet been formally opened.

The club is to be operated on a basis new to the West. Shares, nonassessable and bearing 8 per cent interest, will be sold at $100. Shareholders and their guests only will be allowed to use the course. The green fee has been tentatively set at 75 cents per day with a lesser rate on commutation tickets. Profits are to accrue from sale of these tickets.

Organizers of the syndicate include: Marco H. Hellman, president of the Hellman Commercial Trust & Savings Bank; H. H. Cotton, realty operator; T. A. Morrissey, cashier Merchants' National Bank; James M. O'Brien, attorney and director of the James ranch in the San Joaquin Valley; W. G. Van Pelt, wealthy attorney; and Harold D. Benton, a well-known builder.

NEW TITLE ADOPTED BY LOCAL FIRM.

Enlarged Activity of Blue Diamond Plaster Company Causes Change.

With a desire to indicate by its name more precisely and more comprehensively the character of its activities, the Blue Diamond Plaster Company, Inc., has announced that hereafter it will be known as the Blue Diamond Materials Company, Inc. The concern is the largest manufacturer, producer and distributor of building materials in Southern California.

"When our company first organized," said W. C. Hay, vice-president and general manager, "our principal activity was the manufacture of plaster and such closely allied products as putty and masonry mortar.

"Since then, we have vastly increased our field. We own our own limestone quarries and kilns and our own trap rock quarries and crushing plant. In all, we manufacture and produce fifteen basic building materials and are wholesalers and retailers of as many more.

"In view of this great development, we have felt for some time that our name did not fully convey the scope of our operations. Hence the determination to replace the word 'plaster' by 'materials' so that a far greater variety would be embodied in the name.

"The change is one in name only, however. The company retains the same officers, directors and personnel. The change becomes effective November 1."

WILL BREAK ALL RECORDS.

will probably continue to hold this record for the remainder of the year.

Officials of the building department estimate that the record for November will be in the neighborhood of $9,000,000, this estimate being founded on the continued erection of the smaller structures at slightly less than the present rate, and on the issuance of a number of large permits, for which applications are now in the hands of the department.

These large permits, which will, in all probability, be taken out during the next thirty days, include the Fifth-Street Store, $1,500,000; the new stadium, to cost about $800,000, to be built by the Community Development Association, and a number of large church permits, which will total between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000.

The outlook for the entire year is now very promising for a total valuation of $80,000,000, according to Mr. Welch. With this month's record, the year's valuation will be brought up to more than $65,000,000, leaving a balance of $15,000,000 to be gained during the next sixty days. In view of the large projects now nearing the point where construction can be soon started, officials of the building department are confident that the big total for the year will be attained.

BIDS FOR SCHOOL.

Bids are now being received by the Board of Education for the new Tenth-street school, to be built at the corner of Tenth and Valencia streets. The building will contain twelve class rooms, and will be of brick construction. It will cost about $96,000. Homer W. Glidden is the architect.

TO ERECT FINANCIAL BUILDING.

Building Association Will Occupy Fine Structure on South Spring Street.

Through E. W. Ross of W. W. Mines & Co., a lease was closed this week for a new financial building at 740 South Spring street, to be erected by the Whiting Company for the Los Angeles Mutual Building and Loan Association.

The building, designed by Walker and Eisen, architects, is 165 feet deep and 23 wide, running through from Main street to Spring street, between Seventh and Eighth streets.

Both the Spring and Main street fronts are of the same design and are finished in cast stone and stucco. There is a basement in the center of the building to be used for storage and lavatory purposes.

The Building and Loan Association will occupy only a portion of this building at present, making subleases on the space not needed by them at this time. The term of the lease is for fifteen years and as the association requires further room the subleased portions will be taken over.

The entire ground floor from Spring to Main is to be equipped with uniform mahogany counters, fixtures and plate glass partitioning panels above the counter height so as to give the entire room a banking house appearance. The association expects to interest as subtenants brokerage firms, railroad or steamship agencies, or other lines of business which will require ground floor location with high-grade office conveniences.

The Los Angeles Mutual was organized by R. Holtby Myers, its secretary-treasurer. The directors include Mayor George E. Cryer, H. L. Carnahan, former State Corporation Commissioner; William A. Ryon, M. H. Potter, F. H. Gentry, E. E. Gard, T. Chalmers Myers, M. D. The capital guarantee stock of the association is held largely by local capitalists. A vigorous campaign for new members will be carried on from the new location.

Owing to the housing shortage these building and loan associations are growing rapidly all over the United States. More than five million men and women now use them as depositories for their savings, which now exceed two billion, six hundred million dollars. This great sum of money has been loaned exclusively to assist members to buy or build a home and more than a million houses have been built through their agency.

Control of Local Industry Bought by Realty Broker

J. J. Cavanaugh, well-known Hollywood realty broker, has purchased the controlling interest in the Davis Radio Signal Company, which is engaged in the manufacture of automatic hand signals for automobiles, automobile trouble lamps and other accessories. Mr. Cavanaugh will devote his entire time to the affairs of the company, and will therefore retire from the real estate business.

Mr. Cavanaugh says that a plant for the Davis Radio Signal Company will be erected in Hollywood in the near future, and these devices, now partially manufactured by contract, will be made and assembled in the new factory. Patents, it is stated, are pending in England, France and Mexico. The company is a closed corporation, all of the stock being fully subscribed and paid up. The officers are, J. J. Cavanaugh, president; Charles L. Davis, vice-president, and George A. LaLiberty, secretary and treasurer.

Carlin G. Smith

THIS IS OPENING DAY

This is the announcement you have been watching for: My Western Avenue and Manchester Avenue Addition opens today. The very cream of the reasonably priced property available in Los Angeles is ready for you. Bounded by the two principal thoroughfares of the Southwest—Western Avenue running north and south, and Manchester Avenue running east and west, the location is admirable. In addition, this is the first high ground you get to in the southern part of the city. Your lot here will overlook Los Angeles, while still being a part of it.

Public utilities have anticipated the trend of progress in this territory. Gas, water, etc., are here. Street work starts at once. Buy now and get in on the pre-development prices. Come out and look the lots over. Note the values and the prices. You'll be agreeably astonished.

These lots could be sold out at much higher prices. But I don't believe in taking advantage of a fortunate purchase which I have made at a remarkably low figure. I'll not permit my policy of "The Most for the Least" to become a mere jumble of words.

I don't pretend to be a philanthropist. But I do buy cheaply—improve with the best I can get for the least money—and turn over lots so rapidly that I can afford to get along with a small profit myself—leaving a comfortable margin of profit for you.

BEST I EVER OFFERED.

For me the past year has been a crackerjack. Think of it: Five big new properties sold out within twelve months. All have been money-makers. They have made a little money for me and a lot for the folks who bought from me—particularly for those who bought on the opening days and got the pick of the choicest land.

Good as the other properties have been, my new Western Avenue and Manchester Avenue addition is positively the best I have ever offered.

Immigration Station for Los Angeles Harbor.

Ground has been broken at Pier No. 1 by the Board of Harbor Commissioners for an attractive two-story structure which will be fully equipped to handle immigrants.

FILM STUDIO ON BIG TRACT.

Mr. Bowen, and the construction is under his direct supervision. Twenty auto trucks are owned by the company and are being used in the landscape work and the haulage for the building operations.

Only in spots are the natural beauties of this park to be artificially reinforced by the creation of waterfalls, rustic and scenic bridges, wharves and docks to represent foreign ports, etc. Other structures are all to be portable and temporary, so they may be moved from any part of the park to other parts when needed in pictures. Certain sections will be transformed into formal gardens, but in the main all will be left in a state of nature, with such patches of vegetation added as to make possible the picturing of scenes from any part of the world.

As it will be possible to have eight productions on location in this park at the same time, the company will have a permanent staff of trained artists and mechanics for all sorts of construction work that may be necessary for the different producers who will rent buildings at a fixed rental, but will be furnished all the accessories and accoutrements, mechanical help, truckage, wardrobe, furniture and fixtures, supplies, etc., on a cost-plus basis.

HALF-MILLION CAPITAL.

The officers state that the capitalization of the Cosmosart Pictures Corporation of $500,000 is paid in and is sufficient to pay for the land and about half of the building operations, and that as soon as the first three or four units are finished and in operation the earnings will be ample to finish the balance and make extensions.

They state, further, that the completed project will be one of the most beautiful, most complete and most economical motion-picture studis in the world, unique in its setting in the heart of a thickly-settled residential district, which cannot be duplicated for accessibility to transportation.

The officers are: J. E. Bowen, president, for twelve years associated with the motion-picture production and laboratory interests in Los Angeles in various capacities, and also a mechanical engineer, architect and builder; J. W. Reed, secretary, formerly of Reed and Hammond of this city; J. J. Warich, owner of Bimini Baths, treasurer. Besides these, on the directorate are F. E. Spicer, T. C. Hughes of the Southern Pacific Railway and E. S. Palmer, a local chemist and laboratory man.

The principal stockholders who, with the official staff, have largely financed the Cosmosart studios, include in their number such well-known local business men as J. W. Shaw of the Shaw Printing Company; George R. Lee, banker, formerly cashier of the Citizens' National Bank of Watseka, Ill.; C. A. De Coo and Charles Miller, president of the Pacific Door and Sash Company.

LOFT BUILDING.

Edwards, Wildey & Dixon have been awarded the contract for the erection of a two-story and mezzanine brick loft building on Los Angeles street between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets for Mrs. Mabel Schneider. The structure will cost about $16,000.

VINE-STREET SCHOOL.

Witmer and Watson, architect and engineer, have completed plans for a new school building to be built at 955 North Vine street. The structure will cost about $100,000.

Headquarters of Abrasive Company Here

A syndicate of eastern interests, organized as the Pacific Abrasive Supply Company, representatives in the Southwest for the Carborundum Company of Niagara Falls, N. Y., have leased the entire two-story building at 1033-37 South Los Angeles street, where they are establishing headquarters for this territory, which includes Southern California, Arizona and Southern Nevada.

The lease of the Los Angeles street property was secured from the owner, Maj. E. W. Jones, through the W. Ross Campbell Company by R. Q. Brown of its sale and leasing department. The building has a frontage of 60 feet and a depth of 125 feet. The entire building will be used as operating headquarters and warehouse for the full line of Carborundum abrasives.

TO HANDLE ARRIVALS AT HARBOR.

Ground for Immigrant Station at Port Broken During Past Week.

Ground has been broken during the past week for the new Immigration Station, authorized by the Los Angeles Harbor Commission, at Pier No. 1, and work on the structure will be prosecuted as soon as possible. This improvement marks a forward step in the development of the harbor, since it will permit the handling of passenger business from and to foreign countries in the same manner as they are handled in San Francisco, New York, Boston and other large ports of the country.

The building, to cost $80,000, will be two stories in height, of frame and plaster construction, and will be 56 by 120 feet in size. It is expected to have the structure ready for occupation within the next three months.

According to the plans which have been prepared, the first floor will house the receiving, waiting and discharging rooms, the medical and legal inspections rooms, lunch and baggage rooms, general offices, doctor's offices and special consultation rooms, official dining-room and kitchen, and also detention rooms for men and women.

The entire upper floor is designed for dormitories for men and women, with a large general dining-room and kitchens. In addition there will be two smaller special dormitories for men and women.

NEW APARTMENT-HOUSE.

Lee Callahan & Sons have the contract for a two-story apartment-house to be built on New Hampshire street, between Eighth and Ninth streets, for D. Grossman. The building will contain twenty apartments.

Wilshire Crest

A HINT TO THE WISE

Lots for two-story houses, on high ground, with suitable long-time building protection, in the Wilshire district, are very hard to find, because they are exceedingly scarce.

We have these lots, at remarkably low prices.

The demand for them is great, and they are being bought rapidly.

We recommend them for homesites or for purchase to re-sell at a profit.

Why This is the Most Sensational "Sale" of All

The biggest element in the value of residence property is the social surroundings.

In this sensational sale, at prices lower than most property in much inferior parts of the city, this factor of value has been entirely overlooked and given to the buyer. You are paying for the land and the improvements on an acreage basis, irrespective of the fact that Beverly Hills is nearer by trolley than the most exclusive residence districts of Wilshire or Hollywood. Beverly Hills is 28 minutes by trolley.

At these temporary prices which will be withdrawn soon, buyers will receive the millions of dollars in social environment already invested in Beverly Hills, together with the rapid approach of residence land value from both Wilshire and Hollywood, which merge at Beverly Hills.

Beverly Hills overlooks Los Angeles and Hollywood, it has every modern conveience and its future as a highly desirable and valuable residence district is unquestioned.

The fortunes made by those who invested in Hollywood a few years ago should be duplicated by those who buy now in Beverly Hills.

LOS ANGELES knows Beverly Hills as its finest residence community. It is the show place of the entire Southland. Yet many people do not know that you can buy lots here as inexpensively as in some of the most ordinary parts of the city and that $4000 bungalows can and are being built here.

People do not seem to realize that the best can be the cheapest.

Many home builders have omitted Beverly Hills from consideration as they have driven through its magnificent boulevards with longing eyes, because they have believed its prices beyond their reach. And they have actually paid more for lots in the flat sections of the city than it would have cost to buy and live in Beverly Hills. We are determined to correct this impression.

Beverly Hills prices are lower, everything considered, than anything we know of in all Los Angeles.

We are not seeking investors, for we want home builders. Yet lots are being bought daily by knowing buyers solely because of the reasonable prices and terms.

To counteract this impression, we announce the opening of new lots in Beverly Hills, the opening of three tract offices and the beginning of a great sales campaign at temporary prices.

LARGER LOTS

Beverly Hills has lots for every buyer at correspondingly low prices in this sale.

North of Santa Monica Boulevard you can buy lots 85 feet wide by 150 to 400 feet deep from $2350 up, with building restrictions from $5000 up.

These lots face beautifully curved and permanently paved streets with all improvements, including sewers, water, electricity, gas and telephones, located in 20-foot alleys in rear of each lot.

Or you can buy beautiful homesites in Beverly Hills of from one to four acres at prices ranging up from $11,000 amid the most beautiful mansions in Southern California where restrictions start at $10,000.

We know of no other place with such conveniences, with such magnificent surroundings, such a view and such an ideal location at any price.

Beverly Hills is frostless; its soil is a rich sandy loam that will grow anything plantable in Southern California.

Beverly Hills is the focal point of the Hollywood and Wilshire districts, and will accumulate in value with the development of both sections.

It is the cross roads of six of Los Angeles' most fashionable boulevards.

Beverly Hills offers a few choice business lots. Its trade is of the best.

You can buy Beverly Hills lots on partial payments—one-fifth down and the rest at 6%.

When you build, you build for years. It is better to be in the path of approaching development than in the wake, especially when it costs no more—less in fact.

Beverly Hills is the nearest point to the greatest number of factors that make a residence section desirable—near the ocean, near the mountains, near Hollywood, near Wilshire, near the business section of Los Angeles and near the Los Angeles High School.

LURE OF TRAMP STEAMERS FAILS.

Patriotism of Local Importers Saves the Day.

Coffee Imports Established in Consequence.

Three Steamers Added to Gulf Ports Direct Trade.

The port of Los Angeles signalized another important addition to the ocean fleet that makes this harbor its home port, by the addition during the month of October of three more steamers to the Pacific, Caribbean & Gulf line of the Swayne & Hoyt Steamship Company, under the local management of Joseph McMillan and the husbandry of McMillan, Wheaton & Krueger.

The arrangement was consummated through the Moore & McCormick Company of New York, large owners of steamships and operators of many Shipping Board vessels in the trans-Atlantic trade.

This is pursuant to a policy aimed at the building up of both import and export business at Los Angeles Harbor, even at the cost of losses or temporarily no profits by the encouragement of exporters and importers through frequent sailings and ample tonnage to make this their point of loading and discharge.

The steamships Osage, Redhook and Delco have been added to the fleet of the Pacific, Caribbean and Gulf Line and, with the Alvarado, Eldorado and Iris, this gives a semimonthly service between Los Angeles and Galveston, Houston, Port Arthur, Vera Cruz, New Orleans, Mobile and West Indies points in both directions.

The Swayne & Hoyt Company and Mr. McMillan pioneered in the establishment of this service in the interests of Los Angeles ocean trade development. Before that time no direct water connections with the gulf ports and the West Indies were available to Los Angeles shippers and importers except through indirect and transshipping connections at much higher rates, and the augmentation of the fleet is, according to Mr. McMillan, a mutual expression of appreciation by both shipowners and shippers.

ALSO SOUTH AMERICA.

Bringing Los Angeles for the first time into direct touch with the east coast of South America, heretofore considered as out of the direct line of Los Angeles shipping, is another of McMillan's achievements through the Swayne & Hoyt Company fleets known as the Pacific-Argentine-Brazil line. This has brought the great Brazilian coffee market at the port of Santos into direct connection with Los Angeles, and has resulted in making this the Pacific coffee port.

A fight for this South American trade was recently started by tramp steamers from foreign countries, and failed of success through the patriotism of Los Angeles importers in supporting their own home steamships in the face of lower rates offered by the foreign tramps. They were convinced that if they yielded to the lure of lower rates, the local lines would suffer loss and that as soon as the Los Angeles market was in their power the tramps would naturally divert the trade to their home ports.

It is clear that with the operation of these two lines of steamers from this home port, entirely new fields for trade have been opened to the manufacturers and merchants of Southern California. As a natural result, Los Angeles canned goods, fruits, foodstuffs, industrial chemicals and other products are going into these countries in increasing quantities, and a portion of the world heretofore out of direct touch has been added to the trade territory of Los Angeles.

Walter S. Wheaton, in speaking of the importance to Los Angeles of these pioneering enterprises of the Swayne & Hoyt interests, stated that this port is by that means securing world-wide advertising as an international market and shipping center. He pointed to the availability of these lines for the direct import of Mexican and South American hardwoods for our growing furniture industries. Tourist travel direct from these countries to Los Angeles, in large volume, will inevitably follow, he asserts, and will do much to give to the harbor that cosmopolitan atmosphere characteristic of the ports where the ships of the world fly their flags and introduce their babel of tongues and their potpourri of costumes.

EAST HOLLYWOOD DISTRICT ZONE.

Maps Will be on Exhibition to Public During First Three Days of This Week.

The zoning map for the East Hollywood district has been completed by the City Planning Commission and will be posted for examination by the public as follows:

Monday, October 31, at the Los Feliz school at the corner of Hollywood Boulevard and New Hampshire avenue, from 1 to 5 p.m.

Tuesday, November 1, at the Dayton Heights school, at the corner of Clinton and Westmoreland avenues, from 1 to 5 p.m.

Wednesday, November 2, at the Micheltorena school, at the corner of Sunset Boulevard and Micheltorena street, from 1 to 5 p.m.

The district included within this map is bounded on the north by the city limits, on the east by a line running north and south through the junction of Sunset Boulevard and Reno street, on the south by a line running east and west through the junction of Clinton and Hoover streets and on the west by Serrano avenue.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN.

Building Permits at Beach Cities for Year Over Three Million.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA MONICA, Oct. 29.—More than $2,000,000 worth of construction has been completed or is now under way in Santa Monica in 1921 to date, according to permits issued from the office of the building inspector. With the total permits amounting to $2,027,000 at noon today, the mark set at the beginning of the year as possible was passed. The total for the year of 1920, which was the highest previously attained in any year in this city, was $1,219,000.

Santa Monica's total for October to date is $174,320, which is already more than $16,000 in excess of the permits issued for the entire month in 1920.

The Venice total is $1,725,159 up to yesterday. The combined building progress of the two beach cities so far this year is, by actual record of the building departments, $3,779,259.

It is anticipated that permits will be issued next month for several school buildings to be erected and others to be improved and extended—under the bond issue passed last summer. This will add materially to the Santa Monica total.

ANGELES MESA SCHOOL.

A $30,000 addition is to be made to the Angeles Mesa school on Fifty-second street, between Fourth and Fifth avenues, Angeles Mesa.

It will consist of two additions of two rooms each. Architect T. Beverly Keim has just finished the plans and construction will begin at an early date.

The increased school accommodation was rendered necessary by the growth of the Angeles Mesa district.

EAST REQUESTS HARBOR NEWS.

Los Angeles Making Headway as Shipping Center.

Japan is Bidding for Closer Relations With Port.

War Internes Being Finally Returned to Germany.

Maritime happenings are rapidly assuming greater importance in the industrial and commercial world of Los Angeles and the Foreign Trade Department of the Chamber of Commerce is becoming a busy section of the world's greatest commercial chamber, under the guidance of Clarence H. Matson. The developments of the past week find their major happenings chronicled in the following items:

RECOGNITION OF PORT.

Little by little the East is recognizing the importance of Los Angeles as a maritime city. Time was when no one acknowledged it as a port, but now the work of years is being realized, and the Atlantic seaboard, as well as the Pacific Coast, has begun to know something of the way shipping is coming here.

This week the Maritime Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce received a request from the New York Commercial, one of the largest daily papers in America, to furnish it with a weekly list of the sailings from this port. This list will be published on Monday of each week, and the shippers and importing and exporting firms of the East will learn that there are direct sailings from Los Angeles to nearly 100 ports throughout the world.

New Orleans sailings for October and November, as published in the Commercial, show sailings to fifty-four foreign ports.

WANT ENGINEER.

The Chamber of Commerce is in receipt of a request that it recommend an electrical and mechanical engineer to go to Ecuador to be second engineer of an electrical and power plant of an important city, which also furnishes the power for a tramway service. He must have both technical and practical experience, and be competent to act as chief engineer if occasion should require.

JAPAN TRADE.

The Department of Commerce and Industry of the city of Osaka, Japan, invites Los Angeles merchants, through the Chamber of Commerce, to make use of its facilities to make trade connection in that country. It says:

"This department publishes monthly a review Osaka Shoke Jihe or Osaka Commercial and Industrial Revied, in which business opportunities, domestic and foreign, are given and list of those seeking business relations in Osaka are inserted.

"This department is sufficiently informed to handle very ably inquiries and business opportunities in various trades. Show cases are equipped in this department, which are always open to samples, catalogues, prospects, etc., that may be sent to us for exhibition from merchants located in foreign countries.

"Numbers of traders abroad have sent us samples in variety with a view to expedite business, and as soon as we have received them, it is a rule for us to inform responsible merchants here of the arrival of samples. Inspecting samples displayed in this department, merchants here have already sent foreign firms several inquiries.

"From our experience, it might be well to state here that this department, which is devoted to commercial and industrial affairs, is worth while for business connection-seekers to make advantage of, and we assure you that we cordially welcome inquiries from your association and members thereof."

The department also lists Japanese merchants who desire connections in this country. Among the lines mentioned are dried fish, isinglass, fishing tackles and lines, bamboo rods, dyestuffs, chemicals, starch, green peas and soy, toys, brushes, buttons, optical instruments, asbestos, packings, silk piece goods, antimony ingots, electric goods and sundries, cotton thread, food products, ginger and mustard, procelain ware, vegetable wax, cotton waste, scientific apparatus, medical instruments, X-ray apparatus.

SWITZERLAND.

A "Handbook of Switzerland" has been issued by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in Washington. Switzerland depends on other countries for most of its raw materials and many manufactured products. This handbook gives much information about the trade of Switzerland. It can be ordered through the trade extension department of the Chamber of Commerce for 40 cents.

MEXICAN RAILWAYS.

Alvin B. Carpenter, who was one of the representatives of the Chamber of Commerce at the trade conference in Mexico last summer, and who is still in Mexico City, writes concerning congestion on Mexican railways

"I have made some inquiries here from the principal forwarding agents and they tell me that there is practically no congestion of freight at the borders, especially Texas, and that things are moving easily. This, they claim, is due to the fact that for the past month or more the business into Mexico has been only about one-fourth normal and still is so, and that such condition has allowed the present facilities to catch up with the business. Although the national railways have added somewhat to their locomotives and rolling stock they are not yet in a position to take care of business if it was anywhere near normal."

CANAL RATES.

In correspondence with the Chamber of Commerce, relative to steamship rates from the Panama Canal to Pacific Coast cities, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company states that it makes a reduction of 25 per cent from its regular rates for Canal employees, but even with this reduction the first-class rate is $141 compared with a rate of $30 from the Canal to New York on government steamers. This means, of course, that practically all Canal officials and employees go to New York on their vacations of two or three months every two years.

BRIEF ITEMS.

The Philippine government is in the market for 50,000 yards of cotton khaki cloth, bids to be opened December 12, and delivery to be ninety days thereafter.

A merchant in Cuba writes the Chamber of Commerce that he desires to represent firms in that territory who desire an agent of experience and responsibility.

TO CONFER ON PLANS FOR FUTURE

Commerce Bodies of Near-by Communities Will Hold First Meeting Next Month.

With the object of forming a permanent organization to foster the community development of municipalities outside of, but adjacent to, Los Angeles and to divert to them a larger share of the residential and industrial progress that is daily coming to Southern California than they have hitherto enjoyed, a conference of representatives of chambers of commerce has been called to meet at Walnut Park on November 4. These invitations were sent out yesterday by Victor Girard, who is active in the Los Angeles subdivision field, to the chambers of commerce of Huntington Park, Long Beach, Riverside, San Bernardino, Vernon, Whittier, Torrance, Burbank, Downey, Pomona and Ontario, requesting them to send representatives.

The conference, which will be addressed by Ralph L. Criswell, president of the City Council, and by other prominent men interested in and identified with community development, will discuss ways and means of advancing through co-operative effort the special advantages which smaller communities in Southern California offer to tourists, homeseekers, investors and commercial and industrial enterprises. After the permanent organization has been effected, it is the intention to hold similar conferences from time to time throughout the year, at which plans will be further developed to aid the smaller communities.

As a means of focusing the interest of the people of Southern California in community development, Mr. Girard has agreed to give a cash prize of $100 for the best essay on the subject. It will be limited to 1000 words, and may be competed for by any citizen of any of the communities represented at the conference. The merits of the essays will be adjudged by five men selected from the editorial departments of the five local daily newspapers. Mr. Girard will also entertain the Chamber of Commerce representatives at his home in Walnut Park.

"The purpose of this conference is entirely constructive," Mr. Girard said yesterday. "We believe that if these smaller communities work in unison and in a spirit of earnest co-operation, they will benefit more largely in the movement of population and the development which is now going on in Southern California. The fine advantages which many of our smaller communities possess should be made to serve them as working capital to draw new industrial, commercial and residential interests. By having their claims voiced through an organized effort and by citizens who are guided by a desire to do community service, there is no doubt that the whole of Southern California will benefit."

ANNOUNCING

BEVERLY ACRES

We Are Today Offering to the Shrewd Investor an Opportunity That Has Never Been Equaled in the History of Los Angeles Real Estate.

Choice Acreage in Beautiful Beverly Hills at Lot Prices

The Rodeo Land and Water Company who control that vast estate lying between the city and the sea that is now being beautified with the finest homes in Southern California, where today over sixty residences are under construction, have just given us permission to open up a portion of their holdings as an acreage subdivision which lies in the pathway of what is to immediately become the greatest development project the people of Los Angeles have ever witnessed.

Here we can give you a five-acre tract of land with a wonderful view and location, that will subdivide into twenty-four fifty-foot lots for $7500.00 and give you reasonable terms. This is the price of one good lot in the Wilshire District today——"Think of it."

You have all listened in the past to the old slogan—"Los Angeles to the Sea"—with more or less skepticism, but today the city is moving seaward with a stride so rapid that those of us who have been identified with its development can hardly keep pace.

The great Wilshire District is going through to the sea! And any property lying adjacent to Wilshire Boulevard is bound to be the most valuable in Los Angeles county.

All fortunes, great or small, come out of the land!—and can be directly or indirectly traced to it—whether you have made yours or just beginning. What does it mean to you to be able to secure a unit in this great development project, upon which you can build your home or sell for a great deal more in a short time.

Drive out Wilshire Boulevard to Beverly Hills today and inspect this property, then use your own judgment. Our main Beverly Hills office is at Beverly Drive and Burton Way (car line.) See Mr. Van Winkle, in charge of Acreage Department.

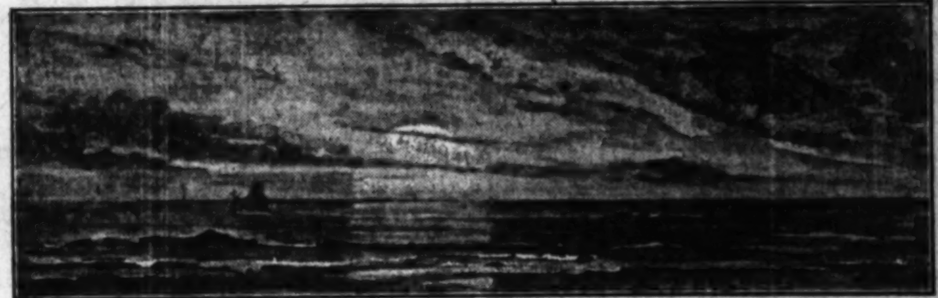
A Home by the Sunset Sea



A short spin out Wilshire and San Vicente Boulevards brings you to the land of heart's desire, a spot where nature poured out the maximum of her gifts and made a place to be known and sought after by people from all over the world.

The views of mountains, ocean, canyons, palisades and sunsets are a perpetual inspiration.

The Palisades rise abruptly above the ocean and Palisades home tract on top is from 150 to 275 feet high. The climate is frostless and ideal both in winter and summer.

Fine homes both great and small line the wide paved streets. Many kinds of shade and ornamental trees are already grown. Parkings are wide and cement walks and curbs are of the best quality. Water, gas, electricity, sewer and telephone lines are in 19 and 20-foot alleys and paid for.

Lots are remarkably low priced because developed before the war and prices have been raised very little. In marked contrast to the high prices that are being asked in many places in and around Los Angeles Palisades lots, incomparable for value and situation, are being sold for $1200 to $2500 for 50x150 feet and $3500 to $5500 for 100x220 and over.

LAUNCH DRIVE FOR STADIUM.

Funds Being Raised for Big Stanford Project.

Marco Hellman is Southern California Chairman.

Structure Will be Ready for Game Next Month.

The building at Stanford University of the largest stadium in the United States with the exception of the Yale Bowl, has aroused interest not only among Stanford men, but among those of other colleges as well. The West has long been handicapped by the lack of facilities for the holding of great athletic contests, and this enterprise will be of benefit to all who take an active interest in sports. The new stadium is fast nearing completion and will be finished in time for the big game between Stanford and the University of California on November 19. For the first time in history there will be sufficient room to accommodate not only the students and alumni of these colleges, but the general public as well.

Owing to the natural setting provided at Stanford, the cost of the new stadium is very small as compared with similar enterprises either in being or contemplated. The financing of the work has already been taken care of, but in order to meet the obligations incurred, the men in charge are raising funds among all who regard this stadium as an addition to the athletic facilities of the West.

Marco H. Hellman, himself a Stanford man, has consented to head the general committee for the ten southern counties of the State, and has opened headquarters at 219 Herman W. Hellman Building. His territory includes the counties of Los Angeles, Riverside, Orange, San Luis Obispo, San Diego, Imperial, Kern, Santa Barbara, Ventura and San Bernardino. In each of these counties there will be a member of the general committee, who in turn will appoint other committeemen to help him. In speaking of the enterprise Mr. Hellman said:

"Of course, the main function of my committee will be to raise funds to pay for the work already done on the stadium—but in reality the method which we will pursue is such as should appeal to all those who regard a college education as a necessary part of the life of the nation. This is not merely a drive to build a stadium, laudable as that might be. It is far more. It gives to every man and woman in California an opportunity to do something for one of the most famous institutions of learning in the country and to directly further the work of the college along purely educational lines. Stanford has always stood for the highest type of American manhood and womanhood. It has maintained its high position almost since its founding. It stands to the West in the same light as such well-known institutions as Yale, Harvard and Princeton do to the East. In asking for funds for the Stanford Stadium we do not ask for an out-and-out donation for athletic purposes, but merely for a loan, in so far as the stadium proper is concerned.

SUBSCRIPTION PLAN.

"Our plan is briefly just this. Every one who donates money to the Stanford stadium fund can designate in his subscription that this money shall eventually be used for some specific collegiate purpose. In other words, he simply loans his money to the stadium fund, and it is agreed that this money shall be repaid from the gate receipts of the stadium. Of course, it is not repaid to the donor, but is given to whatever college activity he may designate. If anyone has an interest in history or art or music, the library, chemistry or any other branch of learning, he can state that he wishes his stadium donation turned over to that branch as soon as it is repaid by the gate receipts.

"We find that many people would like to give to Stanford or to some particular activity carried on by the university, but as their donations would be small they have felt hesitant about doing so. This building of the stadium gives them the desired opportunity.

PREFERRED LIST.

"For those who see only the fact that Stanford has one of the finest stadiums in the country, the board of athletic control will place every donor who subscribes $100 or more on a preferred list, which entitles him to purchase for the next fifteen years the best seats to be had at the big game with California, and this regardless of whether the game is held at Stanford or at Berkeley. Already the response from Stanford men and women has been most gratifying, and we have also received many contributions from men who are not in any way tied to the college, but who feel that Stanford stands for the best in western manhood."

The personnel of the general committee and of each county committee will be announced soon, and with the approach of the big game it is expected that the work of the committee will be quickly accomplished.

PASADENA WAREHOUSE.

John C. Austin, architect, is taking bids for a six-story and basement, class A storage warehouse to be built in Pasadena for the Pasadena Transfer and Storage Company. The building will be 66 by 150 feet.

FACT AND COMMENT.

ing institutions of all kinds will, by the first of next year, be close to the 4000 mark. Many of these have never jumped to fame, but all of them are the sources of wages and living to the 150,000 or so industrial workers who make the big city big, and give it strength.

Census compilations from Washington recently published in The Times showed that as long ago as 1919 Los Angeles led all Pacific Coast cities in the number and diversity of factories, of factory employees and of factory products. Since 1919 there has been a tremendous growth, so that the figures for the 1920 census are already puny in comparison with the 1921 facts.

Can't "Bear" Los Angeles.

This being true in one of the greatest periods of business and industrial depression the United States has ever experienced, and during which Los Angeles maintained its "white-spot" distinction and increased its momentum along all productive lines, what is to be expected when these deterrents are removed, and at least relatively normal conditions return?

The Times has depicted during the past year great increases in such industries as the metal and machinery trades, in furniture making, in chemical production, in knitting and weaving lines, in apparel manufacture, to say nothing of the food industries which develop out of our agricultural and fishing resources. It is gratifying to note that in all this progress the city is in no wise dependent upon the pay rolls of a single industry or a single institution; that the diversity includes nearly all the products requiring factory skill, and still further, that this diversity is natural and is made possible by the proximity of nearly all the raw materials required in the manual arts.

Paraphrasing the late J. P. Morgan, "Anybody who is a bear on Los Angeles is doomed to utter confusion." The background and solid foundation of natural resources of Los Angeles are unparalleled in economic history, a fact to which many are still asleep. But the gathering momentum from thousands of small manufacturers cannot fail to go on to greater force, even though the larger industries come in to share the profits and the markets of the center of the Pacific empire.

Too Much to Tell.

A commentary on the absorbing nature of development news in Los Angeles is contained in the fact that a thirty-acre tract in the heart of the close-in West Side, under development work for a year, entirely escaped the attention of the public. The multiplicity of development projects of all degrees is so great, and news of that character is so abundant that the modest violet seeking seclusion has no difficulty in maintaining an incognito or security the sanctity of its hiding place.

They tell a story of an Angeleno who was enthusiastically showing the new skyscrapers to a visiting relative. The visitor pointed to a big structure about five stories above ground, with steel for five more stories on the ground, and asked: "What building is that?" Whereupon the Angeleno responded: "Gee, I haven't been around this way in two weeks, and that's a new one on me. I'll have to find out what it is myself."

SEVEN NEW HOUSES TO BE BUILT AT TULARE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TULARE, Oct. 27.—Seven lots in the Sibley Tract on East San Joaquin street in this city have been purchased by the Fresno Building Corporation from G. W. Sibley. All the necessary stock in the company has been sold here and the work of constructing the houses will be started in the near future, according to statements of the offices of the company.

This concern is inaugurating a campaign of home building in Tulare county towns and the buildings, all of them modern residences, will be sold on terms. There is great need for additional houses throughout this section of the State.

Sales Records Again Broken During October.

The month of October has proved another record-breaker at Maywood. The volume of sales for the month is considerably greater than any similar month in the history of the Laguna Land and Water Company, subdividers of Maywood, according to officials of the company. More than forty of the four-room colonial bungalows which are being built by this company have been sold, and an increasing number of new homes are being started each week by individual purchasers of vacant half-acres and lots.

The activity in this section is not confined to property being offered by the Laguna Land and Water Company, but many resales of half-acre pieces formally sold by this company have been reported during the month. In most instances the new purchasers are dividing these half-acres into two or three lots and building new houses for occupancy as homes, or for sale, on the smaller pieces.

NEW TRACT OPENING IS ANNOUNCED

Agoure Park, in Southwest Section, Will be Placed on Market Today.

Serving further to increase the building activities in the southwest section of Los Angeles is the opening today of Agoure Park at Western and Santa Barbara avenues, announcement of which was made yesterday by the J. Harvey McCarthy Company, local realtors. This tract, which until recently was owned by the Agoure family, pioneer residents of Los Angeles, contains approximately sixty acres. It was purchased recently by a syndicate of local capitalists represented by the J. Harvey McCarthy Company, the consideration being in excess of $200,000.

The former Agoure property has been subdivided into more than 300 residential and business lots with frontages on Santa Barbara avenue, Western avenue, Arlington avenue, Van Ness avenue, Gramercy Place, Wilton Place, St. Andrews Place, Thirty-ninth Place and Thirty-ninth street. Arrangements have been made to improve the property with streets, sewers, parkways, curbing and public utilities. Coincident with the opening of this new subdivision, J. Harvey McCarthy, head of the selling organization, will shortly erect on a portion of the Western-avenue frontage a fine two-story business structure. There will also be built on the property, according to Mr. McCarthy, several bungalows, a bungalow court and a number of duplex apartment buildings. All of the residential streets included in the tract are protected by restrictions.

The tract is served by two car lines leading directly to the downtown business district. It is also adjacent to a highly developed residential section, and near it are schools, churches and a developing business district. The J. Harvey McCarthy Company has established a branch office at Santa Barbara and Western avenues.

JOINS MELINE FORCES.

Walter P. Hubbard, formerly of Hubbard-Chelew-Hoit, has joined the Meline organization, having disposed of his interests in the former concern. Mr. Hubbard came to California several years ago from Springfield, Mass., where he had been engaged in the real estate business for many years and was an official of the Springfield Realty Board. Mr. Hubbard is well known to realtors in both the Wilshire and Hollywood districts.

Parasites from Africa to Kill Native Pests.

Dr. Clements of the Chamber of Commerce agricultural department, states that, following on the heels of the successful introduction by the State Department of Agriculture of the Aphycus, the parasite of the black scale which has done such good work in the control of this pest in Ventura and parts of Orange and Los Angeles counties, the department has recently made another introduction of a new parasite which looks very promising.

Harry S. Smith, chief of the pest control bureau of the department, who made the Aphycus introduction, is now in Southern California superintending the work with the new parasite, which is being carried on in the laboratory at Whittier. This parasite, so far as laboratory observations have gone, seems to be more prolific than the Aphycus and works on the smaller size scales. Just how it will adapt itself to California climatic conditions is, of course, not known, but it came from South Africa, where climatic conditions are similar to California.

The State department has other new parasites with which it is experimenting at the present time. Two foreign collectors are maintained in the field, one in Australia and one in the Orient, searching particularly for parasites of the red scale.

Director Hecke is also negotiating with the United States Department of Agriculture with the object in mind of extending the foreign search for beneficial insects through joint expeditions with the Federal department. Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the United States Bureau of Entomology, has asked Director Hecke to send Mr. Smith, the department specialist on this type of work, to Washington for a conference having as its object the extension of the foreign parasite collecting work.

Director George H. Hecke, State Department of Agriculture, has just returned from an extended trip in which he visited San Diego, Imperial Valley and Coachella.

While in Imperial, Mr. Hecke held conference with Gov. Ybarra, relative to reciprocative quarantine matters. This was necessary since, unless Lower California is convinced of the seriousness and necessity of guarantine measures much of our Southern California work will be embarrassed and its effectiveness materially reduced.

Director Hecke's conference was very satisfactory, and it is believed will result in effective co-operation.

LONG BEACH BANK.

W. Horace Austin, Long Beach architect, has been commissioned to prepare plans for a $300,000 six-story, class A bank and office building to be built at the northeast corner of Third street and Pine avenue, Long Beach, for the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank. Work will be started in June.

Five-Acre Sites at Beverly Hills to be Marketed.

Arrangements have been completed by the Frank Meline Company for the placing on the market of a new subdivision, in five acre lots, in Beverly Hills, near Wilshire Boulevard. The Rodeo Land and Water Company, which owns large tracts between the city and the sea, has developed at Beverly Hills one of the finest suburban home districts in Southern California.

Mr. Meline, who represents the company, has completed plans for the subdivision of a portion of these holdings into small tracts, so planned that they can later be cut up into twenty-four fifty-foot lots at the option of the purchaser.

The new tract will be known as Beverly Acres. The property is served by Wilshire and Santa Monica Boulevards, and by the Pacific Electric line, and is also accessible to four of the country clubs, which are situated within a comparatively short distance.

LICENSES SHOW GAIN.

The first year of the California license law for real estate men, the State real estate department issued 6755 licenses. That was in 1917-18, and the law under which they were issued was held to be unconstitutional because of certain exemptions. In 1919 there was no real estate act in force, but in 1920 the department issued a total of 25,619 licenses, of which 9683 were to individual brokers, 1932 copartnerships, 1981 members of copartnerships, 299 corporation licenses, 266 officers of corporations and 11,468 salesman licenses. This year the total number of licenses issued to October 10 is 25,161, and by the first of the year the grand total of last year will have been exceeded, according to R. B. Dunlap, the chief deputy real estate commissioner at Sacramento. The salesmen lead again this year with 11,059 licenses; then come individual brokers with 9642; copartnerships, 1891; members of copartnerships, 1951; corporations, 351; officers of corporations, 301.

NEW TRACT OPENED.

Part of Conley Estate in Southwest Section Placed on Market Today.

Carlin G. Smith, subdivider and realtor, announces the opening of a new addition at Western and Manchester avenue. This property is known as the Conley estate and is located on the first high ground in the southern part of the city.

On account of the reluctance of some of the large owners of property in the southwest to sell their land or permit it to be subdivided, it has been found necessary to extend the building operations considerably further out, both to the westward and to the southward. The owners of this land, however, have consented to allow it to be divided into lots, and these will be placed on the market at prices which Mr. Smith says bring them well within the reach of people of moderate means. The opening of this tract is scheduled to take place this morning.

IMPROVING OF STREETS IS NEEDED.

Realtor Urges Paving of Slauson Avenue in Southwest Section.

That there is a crying need for improvements to be made on Slauson, Florence and Manchester avenues, the three principal thoroughfares running east and west in the southern part of Los Angeles, is the contention of Carlin G. Smith, well-known local realty man, who is actively interested in the development of that section.

"Traffic along these routes is becoming more and more extensive," said Mr. Smith. "This is partly due to the fact that Slauson avenue is a portion of a main highway leading from the center of Los Angeles to Redondo, Hermosa, Manhattan and other beach cities. In addition, rapid and substantial increases in building activities in the southwest portion of Los Angeles naturally make it necessary for more people to travel over these roads.

"As it is now, there are parts of Slauson avenue which are in bad condition, and which are not only a source of delay but of possible danger to the large number of motorists that daily pass over this thoroughfare. Repairing the bad places would give but temporary relief, as is usually the case with a half-hearted measure.

"What is needed is a new pavement, similar to the one recently put in on Western avenue from Santa Barbara avenue south. The work now going on to replace the pavement on Western avenue between Santa Barbara and West Adams is commendable, and will be the connecting link that will make Western avenue a modern thoroughfare, extending from the foothills to the southern limits of the city. It is hoped, however, that further extensions will be made of the south of Western avenue, and it would not be amiss to eventually carry it clear to the ocean.

"In the cases of Florence avenue and Manchester avenue it is a question of a brief time before it will be necessary to make improvements on these highways, in order to relieve some of the traffic which now has to go over Slauson avenue, and to serve more efficiently the vast number of people who are locating in the southwest portion of Los Angeles."

WILSHIRE SALES.

Hubbard-Chelew-Holt, Wilshire district realtors, report the following recent sales of residential properties:

G. B. Carpenter to Oscar LeGraff, 311 South Gramercy street, $10,000; F. M. Cheesman to B. M. Reynolds, 914 South Gramercy Place, $8000; M. K. Moore to A. New Home is Completed.

The Los Angeles Investment Company

Will move into its new quarters at Tenth and Broadway tomorrow. The building is equipped to handle all of the departments of the big organization.

INGLEWOOD CHAIR MILL NOW DOUBLE

Present Output of 100,000 Chairs Calls for More Room in Plant Nearly Finished.

Another furniture establishment in the Los Angeles district adds to the chorus of expansion which has been swelling into a symphony during the last few years, in the announcement by the Inglewood Manufacturing Company that an addition doubling its floor space and its productive capacity is rapidly approaching completion.

Dining-room chairs in a limited line of ten patterns, are the product of the Inglewood Manufacturing Company, which was started in a small way four years ago and has steadily grown until the present output is about 100,000 chairs a year at a factory value of well over a third of a million dollars. These chairs are mostly oak in a variety of light and dark finishes, with some mahogany and in mahogany finish.

The plant on Los Angeles street in Inglewood, served by the Redondo Beach line of the Southern Pacific, was one of the worst sufferers by the earthquakes in 1920, being badly shaken, but not destroyed. This was a brick building 60 by 120 feet. In restoring it an addition 20 by 120 feet was added, but the business has grown so rapidly in the past year that it was decided to double the original space, and 60 by 120 feet of brick building is about ready for the roof.

The new building with its equipment of machinery will cost about $20,000, will enable the production of double the present output and will entail the employment of a total of nearly 100 hands. The total investment will then be $100,000, all of it in the hands of the officers.

W. H. Hodgkins, who started the business four years ago in a small way with Casper Wilhelm, is president of the company. S. M. Green, a former publisher of the Inglewood News, is vice-president. Secretary-treasurer Casper Wilhelm, the practical chair maker, is also superintendent.

The new addition will be completed by the first of the year, and with it the chair factory at Inglewood takes its place among the substantial and progressive industrial establishments of the city, and by no means the least among the thirty-seven furniture making concerns that are causing Grand Rapids to look to her laurels in this branch of American manufacture.

Realty Company to Occupy New Home Tomorrow

The Los Angeles Investment Company will move into its newly erected office building at Tenth and Broadway tomorrow, it was announced yesterday by W. H. Harrison, general manager of the company.

The company's new home is a two story structure at the intersection of Tenth street, Broadway and Broadway Place, and due to the meeting of the three streets, it is visible from almost every part of Broadway. The building is flat iron in shape, and is constructed of brick and terra cotta.

In the front portion of the ground floor will be located the sales, bond and mortgage, insurance and escrow departments. In the rear the executives' offices will be found.

On the second floor, in one big room will be the departments of engineering, construction and architecture, maintained by the company in subdividing its large holdings.

On October 1 of last year the Los Angeles Investment Company sold the twelve-story office building which it owned at the corner of Eighth and Broadway to C. C. Chapman, and immediately began the preparation of plans for the new home which has just been completed, and which will be occupied tomorrow.

BUILDING FIRM TO START EXETER HOME.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

EXETER, Oct. 29.—Mr. Rock, superintendent of construction for the Fresno Building Corporation, has just completed an inspection of the company's lots here and has arranged with the Rowley Construction Company for the laying of the foundation of their first house to be built in Exeter. As soon as it is possible after the foundations are set the other workmen will take charge and erect the houses quickly. Others will be started at intervals. The building of these homes is expected to do much to relieve the acute housing situation in this city. They are to be sold on the popular monthly installment plan.

SEPTEMBER SALES HAVE BIG TOTAL.

Subdividers Attribute Large Percentage of Transfers to Advertising.

The pre-eminence of the newspaper in the field of real estate advertising has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Excursion Subdividers of Southern California through the report of an inquiry made for them by a committee of their membership, consisting of Charles E. Hopper and Victor Girard. On the basis of a possible 100 per cent, the committee reported than 78 per cent of the sales could be traced to newspaper advertising, 12 per cent to personal solicitation and the balance of 10 per cent to mail solicitation and other selling efforts.

This satisfactory result, however, was not the only benefit that the investigating committee reported as developing from newspaper advertising. It was found that through the message they were able to carry to the public day by day, a better understanding of the constructive character of the work of the excursion subdivision firms was communicated to the homeseekers and that a solid foundation of faith in the future of Los Angeles was laid. During the month of September a sales total in excess of $1,000,000 was reported by the combined membership of the organization. This excellent result, coming as it did largely from newspaper advertising, was the basis of a recommendation by Messrs. Hopper and Girard that even more dependence should be placed in the future on this method of reaching the public. The report concludes:

"In a city whose building department is issuing building permits to the value of about $400,000 a day, it is not surprising that the business of the excursion subdividers should show a marked gain. We must recognize the important part that newspaper publicity plays in this result. It is also well to realize that the personnel of any business organization, its policy, its purposes, its volume of business, its activities and the goods it handles are all matters of public interest—and the most effective method of spreading this information before the public is through the newspapers. If the useful phases of our organization are to be preserved we must keep alive the public interest in them through advertising."

ATLANTIAN HOUSES.

F. C. Wynn of Hollywood has contracted with the Atlantian Construction Company for the erection of a two-story dwelling, of Atlantian construction throughout, in Hollywood Park Place. The residence will cost about $10,000. The same firm will also build for Horace H. Appel, Jr., a bungalow court at Seventeenth street and Bronson avenue, to cost $17,000.

Residences of Atlantian construction will also be built by the company for the following: A. R. Clark, seven-room house on Sherman Way, Van Nuys, $6500; Mrs. R. M. Heath, North Cucamonga, residence on Foothill Boulevard, $5500; Mrs. Alice Kingston, residence in the Terminus Homestead tract, $5600; A. A. Daugherty, twenty-four and five-room houses in the West Adams addition, between Washington and Adams streets; Mrs. Aphra M. Johnson and Mrs. A. Hilbrish, residence at Verdugo Woodlands, $5000.

OFFICES ACQUIRED BY PORTERVILLE DENTIST.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Oct. 28.—Dr. C. E. Collins has purchased the office formerly occupied by the late Dr. B. L. Carpenter, in the Chapman Building, and has assumed management of the new office. This office adjoins that now occupied by Dr. Collins and slight alterations have been made to connect the two sets of rooms.

Dr. J. G. Blackman of Los Angeles will arrive in Porterville November 1, and will be associated with Dr. Collins in the operation of his enlarged offices.

A. J. Wilkins, a recent arrival in this city from Southern California, has opened a real estate office in the Monache Building. Associated with Mr. Wilkins in his new enterprise will be Grant K. Phillips of Visalia, manager of the Venice Cove ranch near Visalia and the Crocker Citrus ranch at Woodlake, who is well known throughout the country to orange growers. Mr. Phillips, however, will not be actively engaged in the business. Mr. Wilkins is well known throughout Southern California among fruit growers.

GIFT SHOP TO OPEN SOON AT PORTERVILLE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Oct. 29.—Handling a line of art goods, oriental novelties and silk flowers, Mrs. L. L. Bridge will open a gift shop Saturday, October 29, at her residence on D street. Mrs. Bridge is an adept at art work and much of her ware has been disposed of for some time through the women's exchange at the Y.W.C.A. Each person visiting the shop on opening day will be presented with an attractive souvenir.

A lot in Price Acres has been sold to Frank O. Sheldon of Strathmore, who has started construction of a modern six-room bungalow. This tract has increased in popularity since the establishment of the high school site just west of it. Two houses are now in the course of construction, another will be started within a few days and several more are in prospect. Because of its proximity to the new high school site, this tract is considered particularly desirable for suburban homes.

Fine Grove Sold.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ANAHEIM, Oct. 29.—W. H. Cruzen of San Gabriel has purchased twenty acres of Valencia oranges in the Cerro Villa Heights subdivision, in Orange county, from the C. B. Berger company of Anaheim, sales agents for the Jotham Bixby Company of Long Beach, owners. Mr. Cruzen has been interested in citrus growing, having planted an extensive grove at Anaheim several years ago with C. W. Bowen of Placentia. Mr. Cruzen is a son-in-law of R. H. Gilman, one of the earliest pioneers in the citrus industry in Southern California.

BLUE DIAMOND SERVICE MATERIALS CO., INC.

ANNOUNCEMENT

When this company was first organized its principal activity was the manufacture of plaster and other closely allied products—hence the name "Blue Diamond Plaster Co., Inc."

But in the years that have followed, the company has vastly increased the number and variety of the building materials which it produces and distributes. It has therefore determined upon a name which more precisely and more comprehensively indicates the full scope of its activities.

Effective November 1, 1921, the Company announces the adoption of the name

Blue Diamond Materials Co., Inc.

It should be noted that this is a change in name only, inserting the word "Materials" to replace "Plaster." Otherwise the company is identically the same—in officers, in directorate and in personnel.

With this announcement comes a reiteration of our firm policy in the matter of the QUALITY of our products and our SERVICE—a policy established through years of growth to leadership in the field of building supplies.

Blue Diamond Quality

It has always been our attitude that, since the function of Blue Diamond Products is so important in construction, their quality must always be kept high. The mortar that holds the bricks together, the plaster that covers the wall, the sand and gravel that go into the concrete—they are all expected to be supremely durable, and supremely durable they are.

Blue Diamond Service

The gauge of an employee's loyalty to us is his loyalty to the interests of our customers. Each product we handle opens up a variety of opportunities for intelligent co-operation and service, particularly in respect to honest measure, high quality, prompt delivery and fair price.

Quality and Service—the one is not without the other on the road to true success.

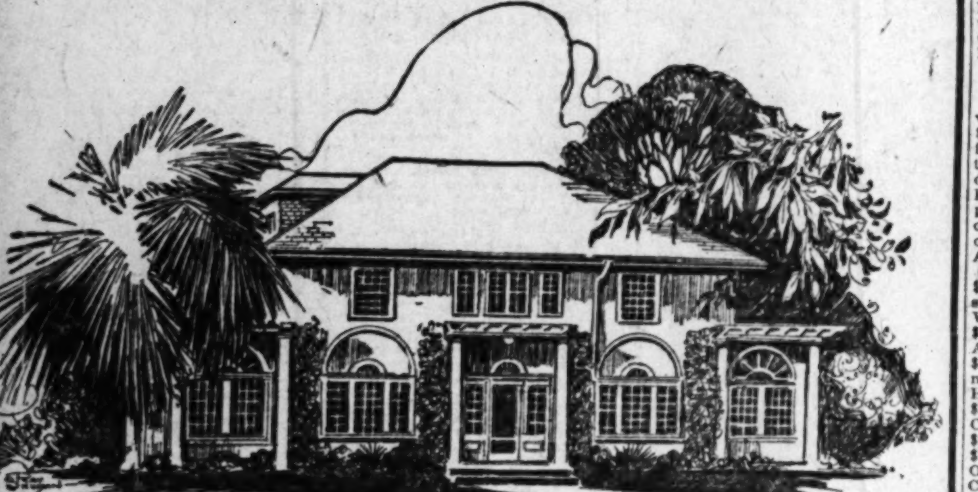
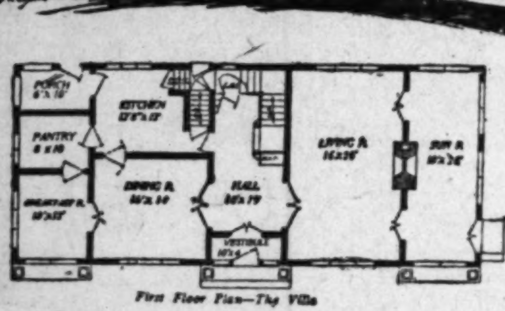
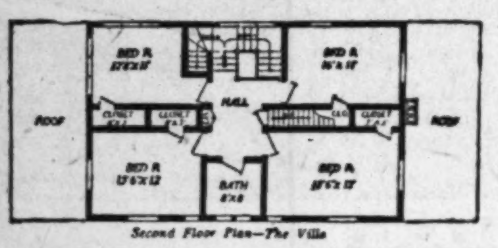
ALADDIN HOUSES





First Floor Plan—The Villa



Second Floor Plan—The Villa

This Aladdin home costs but $5284 for material.

It is better and heavier in construction than most homes built in Los Angeles today.

The cheapness of price is due wholly to the Aladdin system of manufacture—new in Los Angeles, yet nation-famous. Whether a bungalow or a mansion, Aladdin Homes are less expensive.

Your Aladdin a Durable, Permanent Home

Aladdin Homes are made of the finest quality materials obtainable. Every bit of material is guaranteed to be just as represented. The Aladdin experts go into the forests to buy the lumber, and the Aladdin Readi-Cut System makes it possible for us to give you the best quality that can be obtained.

SAVE 18% ON YOUR LUMBER BILL

By the Aladdin Plan you buy no waste lumber. Each piece is cut at our various mills to the exact length and size required, and you only pay for lumber that is to be used in actual building. Each piece is cut to exactly fit the place in which it is to be used.

CARRARE SEEKS ECUTOR'S REMOVAL.

ARES SHE HAS NOT RE- IVED ALL OF HER OTHER'S ESTATE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

YORK, Oct. 29.—Liane Car- ctress and daughter of the na Held, filed an application Supreme Court yesterday for oval of Charles F. Hanlon n Francisco as executor un- r mother's will. She states der a decree of the court last r the executor was directed ver the remaining assets of te, which she received as legatee. These included stock in Harron's Stores, worth $7408, which she alleges she has not received.

Miss Carrare also asserts Hanlon obtained property of her mother in France, in California and the State of Washington, which he has not delivered. She also asks an accounting of the total estate of $145,000, of which $36,585 was in jewelry and the remainder in stocks.

"Bobbed Brains" in Modern Girls a Vital Subject.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BALTIMORE, Oct. 29.—Judging a girl's fitness for business by the length of her hair as an employment standard has little more to recommend it than the selection of a man because he wears a bow tie or a four-in-hand, in the opinion of Dr. William W. Guth, president of Goucher College of Baltimore. While a little vanity is good for any woman, "bobbed brains," are a more vital subject than bobbed hair, according to President Guth.

"It is difficult to see why this harmless feminine whim has aroused such widespread discussion," Dr. Guth, added, "unless, perhaps, it is true that we delight in making mountains out of molehills. For, all the evidence visible from a college office points to the fact that the young girls of today is aiming toward a standard not to be compared with uniform coiffures—the standard of real usefulness in the home, in the community and in the world of business.

"So much has ben said about the vanities and frivolities of the modern girl that it is only fair to point out that the average girl of today is far better equipped mentally than the girl of a generation ago. The girl of today wants to be useful as well as ornamental."

URGED TO JOIN BOARDS.

A statement in the current official Real Estate Department Bulletin urges all real estate men to affiliate with the local and State organizations. This appeal, signed by the former commissioner, Ray L. Riley, has the indorsement also of the present officials of the department. The real estate department declared repeatedly that splendid co-operation in elevating the standards of the real estate profession was being secured in every city where the realty men had formed co-operative organizations among themselves. There are fewer real estate cases in court as a result of the carrying out of the principles of ethics upon which realty boards are formed. Local boards settle most of their disputes by hearings before committees on arbitration. The real estate commissioner conducts hearings in co-operation with these boards of arbitration.

There are now thirty-five real estate boards in California, with more than 2000 accredited members, according to Fred E. Reed, president of the California Real Estate Association, in a statement yesterday. Nine new boards have been organized by the State Association in the past four months. Other new boards will be organized during the fall. It is the aim of the association to have attained the forty mark in local boards by the time of the next convention.

EXPECT BIG SEASON.

Value of New Buildings Erected in Ontario This Year Over $400,000.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ONTARIO, Oct. 27.—With permits for the year to date already showing an expenditure of well over $400,000 and with plans in the making for a number of substantial business buildings and many new dwellings, Ontario, it is believed, is on the verge of one of the greatest building booms in its history.

Contractors report themselves literally swamped with requests for figures on new buildings and scores of new structures are now under way. While building operations dragged somewhat the fore part of the year, recent months have shown material increases, the total for September reaching $106,450.

Among the more important new structures planned for the near future is a three-story business block to be erected at C street and Euclid avenue by F. E. Alford. The lower floor is to house four stores or two stores and a bank, and the upper floors will be devoted to office suites. It is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Members of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, have plans for the erection of a handsome edifice in the near future on a site recently purchased at G street and Euclid avenue and plans are under way for the financing of an American Legion Memorial Hall at a cost of $100,000.

VISALIA HOTEL IS SOLD TO CHICO MAN.

FINE VINEYARD NEAR CUTLER CHANGES HANDS; PLANS FOR BIG STORE PROGRESS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VISALIA, Oct. 29.—Announcement has just been made of the sale of the American Hotel, owned by C. J. Stevens, to H. E. Richardson of Chico. Mr. Richardson has taken possession of the property. The American Hotel dining room will be conducted under the same management as heretofore, by Mmes. Daly and Critina.

Mr. Stevens has also sold his apartment house on Acquia street to M. Vertal of Armona, who took possession immediately. The sale was consummated through I. Freeman.

Frank Drio, formerly of San Francisco, and James Drio, his brother, a well known contractor of this city, have purchased the forty-acre vineyard near Cutler belonging to Charles M. Griffith and Gus Mitchell, one of the famous vineyards of this section. The consideration was $50,000.

The property consists of twenty acres of Emperors, ten acres of Malagas and ten acres of Bluegrowths, all three-year-old vines. This vineyard is considered one of the finest in Cutler district.

Changes in the big S. Sweet department store are progressing rapidly. The clerical department have moved from their old location in the rear of the dry goods section to the newly-built mezzanine floor, stretched across the rear of the lower floor facing Main street.

Other improvements soon to be completed include movement of the shoe department to the old office site, throwing of the old grocery and dry goods departments into one large room which will be used exclusively as a dry goods section. The men's furnishing department, now located across the street in the Bank of Italy Building, will be established in the present shoe department.

REDLANDS BUSINESS BUILDINGS REMODELED

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Oct. 28.—Several notable improvemnets have been made in business property here in the past months. The Motor Transit Company, which bought the building on East Citrus from the Christian Scientist Church for use as a union stage depot, has entirely remodeled the structure, putting in a concrete platform to cover the lot east of the building and spending about $1000 in the work. Bert Taylor is putting in new glazed brick fronts for the Orange Drug Company on East State at Fifth and for the specialty shop of A. Leipsic. New plate glass show windows are also being built. The building at Fourth and State is being entirely remodeled and a glazed brick front installed, to be used for the Studebaker distributors here. Across the street a storeroom has been remodeled for the use of the Parisian, a specialty shop.

TO OPEN RESTAURANT ON EAST FIFTH STREET.

J. H. Sass, former owner of the Arbor Cafeteria on West Fourth street, and for fifteen years engaged in the restaurant business in Los Angeles, has leased a large portion of the ground floor of the building at the southeast corner of Fifth and San Julian streets, where he will operate an old-style coffee house. The lease on the property was obtained through G. H. Webb of the commercial properties department of the W. H. Heitman Company. Mrs. Mary L. Parker is the lessor.

Mr. Webb also reports the leasing of the store at 115 East Eleventh street by Gus H. Bauer to T. L. Daniels and H. C. Bues, for a bakery, and the leasing of the property at the southwest corner of Fifteenth and Los Angeles streets for Elvira S. Taylor to the Pacific Supply Company, for the erection of an automobile service station.

At Wilshire Park.

R. E. Ibbetson & Co., who opened a selling campaign on Wilshire Park during the latter part of August, report the sale of 160 lots during a period of twenty-eight days. The tract is now practically sold out, according to Mr. Ibbetson.

SCHOOL IMPROVEMENTS

Plans for New Visalia Educational Buildings Are Completed.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VISALIA, Oct. 29.—Plans for the new buildings at the Visalia Union High School have been completed and construction work will start immediately upon the opening of bids on November 9, according to announcement by the Board of Education.

Among important improvements planned for the high school is new fencing around the whole athletic field. The new fence, it is hoped, will be in place in time for the next football game. The fence will start south from the southeast corner of the Science Building for about 400 feet, where there will be a large gate through which the race track may be extended when necessary.

A roadway will be left north of the creek, and the fence will be extended along the edge to prevent automobiles from entering the field. The new gymnasium will be inclosed on the west and south sides, with two gates leading through the field.

The west end of the field, back of the present High School Building, will make up part of the athletic field. The race track will inclose the gridiron and the baseball diamond will be constructed at one end of the football field. New shops will be constructed on the east end of the field and the remaining section will be converted into parking place for automobiles.

These improvements will be made gradually, as funds permit.

BIG ONTARIO TRACT WILL BE IMPROVED.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ONTARIO, Oct. 29.—One of the most important realty transactions in this vicinity in recent months and one which will play an important part in the further agricultural development of the Ontario district was that reported this week, in which the Frankish company sells to W. H. DeBerard a tract of seventy-four acres of unimproved land lying between G and Fourth streets and just west of the municipal wells, for a reported consideration of $25,000.

This is said to be one of the finest close-in undeveloped tracts in the vicinity of Ontario, and Mr. DeBerard is making plans for its improvement in the very near future.

Mr. DeBerard already has extensive holdings of vineyard and deciduous fruit properties in the Ontario-Cucamonga district, and it is expected that the tract just purchased will be set to both grapes and peaches. The purchaser also has plans for developing water on the land, as many near-by wells give evidence that it is to be had in plenty.

BUSINESS LEASES.

H. L. Suydam reports the leasing of the following business properties: For George R. Hooper, two-story factory building at the junction of North Alameda and North Main streets to K. L. Leaming for a garage and warehouse for auto trucks; for J. B. Featherstone, property corner Pasadena and Sixty-first avenues to Roy L. Tedford for battery service station; for R. C. Guirado, store 452½ Gladys avenue, to Mizzini & Ramirez for auto vulcanizing; for M. O. Bastanchury, stores 220-222 Commercial and San Pedro streets, to Southern California Milling Company for rice business; for the same owner 216 Commercial street, store and basement to Yomato Company for storage of oriental goods.

PLANTING TO GRAPES.

The owners of the McKim Ranch, one of the best-known properties in the Imperial Valley, are subdividing a portion of their holdings into grape vineyards. These tracts, ranging from ten to twenty acres in size, are being planted to the Malaga and Thompson seedless varieties. The sale of the properties is in the hands of H. S. Burns and A. J. Ashton, who have opened offices in the Title Insurance Building.

COTTON MARKET SAGS UNDER LIQUIDATION.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—The list in the cotton market today sagged further under week-end liquidation, which had forced prices down 15 to 20 points lower than the previous close by the end of the brief session.

Near-month liquidation was scattered and there was profit-taking by Wall street and outside interests for over the week-end. The early market was not particularly active. Most of the loss was made at the opening, when southern and western interests sold.

The market was off 12 to 23 points net at the outset. Business was in small volume, but underlying power was lacking and the bear element had things mostly all its own way. Some recovery was noticeable after the call, mostly due to scattered Wall-street covering.

The market continued quiet and under pressure in the second hour. Rallies on short covering were not maintained, as sentiment seemed to be against the market on bulges. The South was modest seller near the close.

GLOBE PETROLEUM

We are informed that Machris Bros. have brought in a 1000-barrel well on the Company's Huntington Beach lease, and are already shipping oil. The drilling contract was let to Machris Bros. on very favorable basis which would give the Company a substantial increase of income.

The lease now being proven territory, the drillers are preparing to drill another well; the program, however, calls for two additional wells.

In our opinion, the stock is selling too low, and as soon as the recent developments become more generally known, we expect Globe to be active at not less than 15c on the Curb.

We will Buy, Sell, Quote.

DAILY TRADE TALK.

October Balances Show Healthy Business Condition; Cotton Review; Gossip of the Street.

BY CHAPIN HALL.

For the purpose of business consideration the month is over, and while statistics will not be available for a few days the period has been one of further development and expansion, somewhat less pronounced, perhaps, because of a slowing down incident to the threatened railroad strike, but sufficient, nevertheless, to confirm the opinion of the economic diagnosticians which is to the effect that business, in practically all of its phases, has definitely entered upon better days. Prices are nearer stabilization, and the unemployment situation at large is less serious than it was a month ago. With underlying conditions more sound, and confidence better established there appears to be a firm basis for future progress.

It is likely that Los Angeles will again lead the country in bank clearing increase while building construction, both in value and volume, has made a new record for the month. There has been no decline in living costs. On the contrary these show a slight fractional increase, indicating that the bottom has been reached in this readjustment, at least temporarily. Retail trade is growing in volume, and although affected slightly by two unseasonable warm spells shows a healthy undertone which bespeaks a heavy holiday trade. In practically every instance the physical volume of goods sold is greatly in excess of last year.

COTTON MARKET.

Thanks to the high basis being paid for California cotton at present, growers in this State are receiving much better prices for their crop than the southern cotton belt grower. Los Angeles cotton brokers report that between 200 and 350 points more than the New York quotations for the contract month, January, are being paid to growers in the interior. Reduced to dollars and cents this means that the Californian is getting from 20½ to 22 cents a pound for his cotton, while the southerner is only getting 18 to 18½ cents. However, many local cotton men think that this high basis for the California crop will soon be reduced.

The California crop is being sold as fast as it is picked and ginned and so far shows no signs of suffering from the general laxity of demand reported from the East. Now that all the government estimates are out and the 1921 crop is a known quantity, the eastern mills have practically ceased buying, waiting for prices to fall off. And prices have responded to this cessation in demand, declining on an average of 1 cent a pound last week. The growers in the South, however, are in a good position to hold off shipments and resist further declines in price.

The Liverpool market is still buying American cotton rather heavily although its demand has fallen off considerably after its great wave of buying ten days ago. English ideas concerning prices are a little low and have a bearish tendency on the New York market.

A letter received by the Edward M. Fowler Company from the Barry, Thayer Company, Boston cotton brokers, described very well the situation in the eastern mills. "Trade is not active," says the letter, "and staples are especially weak. Prices in the Mississippi Delta have fallen off from 3 to 4 cents a pound in the last two or three weeks. The mills do not show any interest in staple cotton." A large percentage of the California crop is composed of this long-staple cotton, and there is a good possibility that this eastern condition will soon be reflected in local prices.

BANK CLEARINGS.

Bank clearings totaled $85,473,367.68 last week, an increase of $2,163,421.73 over the same week last year. They fell off slightly during the early part of the week, but jumped far ahead of the 1920 figures during the last few days.

The clearings for the month with one day estimated are $366,185,895, a net gain for the month of approximately $14,000,000.

BOND MATURITIES.

The principal bond maturities for Nov. 1, 1921, total $177,915,700. This total includes $150,000,000 United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland 5½ per cent secured notes, and also $3,333,000 American Tobacco Company 7 per cent notes.

LIVE-STOCK POPULATION.

Number of live stock in various countries, so far as reported, at a recent date, compared with the number before the war:

Kind.	Number Countries.	1914. Number.	1920. Number.
Cattle	29	379,293,000	394,974,000
Sheep	25	352,957,000	293,321,000
Swine	27	152,438,000	146,100,000

Just before the war the total number of live stock in all countries for which dependable reports were available were: Cattle, 491,000,000; sheep, 605,000,000, and swine, 183,000,000. The countries included in the above statement, therefore, had 77 per cent of the total reported cattle for all countries. 58 per cent of the sheep, and 83 per cent of the swine.

The average number of animals per 100 of human population, in the countries included above and for the prewar dates, were: Cattle, 37; sheep, 40, and swine, 26.

FOSTER OPERATIONS.

Texan Well No. 1, in Breckenridge Texas field, financed and drilled by the Fred B. Foster Company of Los Angeles, has been brought in as a successful producer, according to an announcement by the Foster company. The output is said to be 600 barrels per day. Officials claim that this makes the third well which the Fred B. Foster Company has drilled successfully within the past four months, Kentuck, and Optimo, both in the vicinity of Texan, are all producers, Optimo being particularly successful with a flow equal to that of Texan.

COMMISSION FINDINGS.

United Stages, Inc., has been given permission by the Railroad Commission to change its routing between Los Angeles and Brawley to use twelve miles of State highway recently completed. Thermal and Mecca are cut out by the rerouting, but the company agrees to take care of these towns by another line operating to Blythe.

The application of M. R. Payton to operate a freight truck service between Los Angeles and Bishop was denied.

Southern California Edison Company was given permission to use not exceeding $2,194,750.99 of the proceeds obtained from the sale of stock previously authorized to finance its July and August construction expenditures. The engineering department of the commission, after a check of the work, reported the expenditure to be reasonable.

The Santa Monica Bay Home Telephone Company was authorized to sell $5000 of its first mortgage 5 per cent bonds at not less than 70 and accrued interest at $12,500, 6 per cent note and $15,000 of its preferred stock at not less than 85. The proceeds are to be used to purchase a building now leased by the company in Ocean Park.

William H. Powell and associates, proposing to operate under the name of Packard Stage Line, were granted a certificate for automobile passenger service between Los Angeles and Bakersfield via the Mojave and Tehachepi route. The Motor Transit Company, which now operates over the Ridge Route, was denied a permit for the Tehachepi route. The part of the route now covered by Motor Transit Company from Los Angeles to Lancaster is excluded from the Packard Stage Line operative rights.

LOS ANGELES STOCKS.

Trading on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday was a little more active than the Saturday average. Important price fluctuations occurred in several of the leading stocks. Associated Oil declined three and one-half points and the final sale reported was at 101½. The Union issues, in which the speculative interest has been centered, remained practically unchanged, the California company's shares gaining one-eighth and the Delaware company losing three-eighths of a point. Tom Reed lost two points, closing at 33 bid. Los Angeles Investment stock was fairly active and netted a one-point advance. Goodyear Textile was the heaviest gainer of all the industrials, jumping three points after comparative inactivity earlier in the week.

Sound Financing

Public utilities in the State of California operate subject to the regulation of the State Railroad Commission. The power rests in that body to make rates, to approve financial programs, extensions, etc.

Bonds issued by the utilities must be first authorized by the Commission and the proceeds expended under its supervision and direction. Investors in these securities are thereby assured of the legitimate and careful use of their moneys.

Decisions handed down show conclusively that this State intends public utilities to receive a proper return upon their investment.

This firm believes in the stability of California Public Bonds as a class. We have underwritten important bond issues of some of the larger utility corporations, which are sound and conservative investments. We find pleasure in the belief that in this financing we are contributing to the upbuilding of California and to the common good of her industries, her cities and her people.

MINOR FLUCTUATIONS.

Stock Market Changes Are Fractional; Strike News No Longer Influences Trading; Exchanges Stronger.

BY ALEXANDER DANA NOYES.
Financial Editor New York "Times."
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—From the course of today's stock market, it would seem that such influence as the official abandonment of the railway strike exerted, had ended with Friday's recovery. Today's changes in the railway shares were only fractional and the business done in them was small.

The real story of the stock exchange's attitude toward the whole brotherhood incident may be read best in the movement of this group of stocks during the entire two weeks' period since the order for a strike was issued. There were declines on the first business day following that news, but practically all the railway shares scored net advances for last week as a whole, and they now range 1 to 3 points above the prices at which they stood just before the "strike call."

Today's movement of the industrial shares was as irregular and uncertain as that of the railways; it was the bond market which gave the more definite signs of changing sides. Many of today's advances, notably in high-grade foreign securities, were noteworthy for a two-hour Saturday market and the amount of business done was substantial. As compared with the end of the preceding week the upward trend of investment bonds has been emphatic as most of them stand five points or more above the year's lowest price. The gradual enhancement of value for outstanding fixed-revenue securities is a perfectly logical response to the state of the money market and the Federal Reserve position; both of which have already turned Wall street's discussion to the prospect of an exceedingly strong investment market during or after the year-end, and of a lower interest rate for future offerings of new loans.

On the whole the foreign exchange market was stronger today; German marks being the exception. The foreign mail of today brought in the more precise provisions of the Wiesbaden agreement between France and Germany, for payment of reparation dues in goods and not in cash. Of these, perhaps, the most interesting is the stipulation that the French government has the right to call for delivery in a given year of "payments in kind," which would more than cover the French share in that year's total stipulated reparations payments. If so, the excess would be credited to Germany on the next year's reparations account.

REVIEW OF TRADE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Marshall Field and Company in their weekly review of the wholesale dry goods trade says:

Current wholesale distribution of dry goods fell short of last week although considerably ahead of the same period last year. Although road sales are several times as large as a year ago they also show a slight decline over the previous week, and there were fewer customers in the market. Continuance of warm weather was held responsible for the temporary check in wholesale dry goods business. Collections show a marked improvement.

Dun's Review of the Chicago trade say:

Satisfactory distribution of fall merchandise is the outstanding feature of current trade. Buyers are giving most attention to essentials and staple articles that the most reasonably priced moved best. Wholesale orders are two or three times as heavy as at the corresponding time last year. There is a notable improvement in commitments for spring delivery while early orders for the holiday trade are beginning to come in encouraging volume. Manufacturing does not show improvement. Merchants are in the city markets in somewhat larger numbers than usual.

The John V. Farwell Company's weekly review of trade says:

Wholesale dry goods business for October has made a good showing. Compared with October of last year the number of road orders received and the volume show a large gain. The number of buyers in market for the month shows a good gain. All indications point to further good business expansion when uncertainties in regard to railroads, taxes and valuations are removed. Collections are improving.

TREND OF WEEK ON MARKET REVIEWED.

BUREAU SUMMARIZES ACTION OF CHIEF COMMODITIES AT PRODUCE MART.

Following is the summary of the movement of the principal commodities on the Los Angeles produce market as compiled yesterday by C. L. Brown, local representative of the United States Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates:

"Heavy offerings of local apples of ordinary quality which have been selling at low prices have hindered the movement of the better grades. The cheaper grades have been sold in large amounts, but the better quality fruit has not even moved moderately. Watsonville Bellefleurs, fancy four-tier, sold at $1.25@$1.50 throughout the week with most sales at $1.35@$1.40. Fancy and extra fancy Washington Jonathans, and Oregon Spitzenburgs sold at $2.50@$3.00 per box, but sales were in small lots and few in number. Last season on October 28, Bellefleurs sold at $1.60@1.75 for fancy four-tier, which is about 25 cents per box higher than this season. For the same date, loose Jonathans from Utah sold at 5@6 per pound last year, which is the same price as at present.

"Storage holdings continue to increase and are almost double the holdings of last year, there being 680,873 boxes in storage on Oct. 24, 1921, compared with 361,831 boxes same date 1920 and 477,119 boxes on Oct. 20, 1919.

"The carlot receipts of the past week were fifty-six California, one Idaho, six Utah and one Washington. Only one car was diverted out. For the corresponding week last year, there were forty-five cars of California apples, fourteen Utah and nine Idaho, and three diversions. The movement of California apples to this market is heavier, but from other States lighter than for the corresponding week last year.

"The volume of the potato movement to retailers varied from day to day, but as a whole, potatoes have moved moderately throughout the week at practically unchanged prices. During the past two weeks the prices of potatoes direct to retailers have remained nearly stationary, although there have been slight fluctuations in the carlot market. However, the best Stockton Burbanks have sold in carlots at $2.75@$2.85 per hundredweight, and Idaho Russets, U. S. Grade No. 1 moved mostly at $2.65@$2.75 per hundredweight. Last year the market during the corresponding week was practically the same as regards demand and movement, but prices to retailers ranged from $2.25@$2.75 for the best Burbanks, while this year the range is 50 cents per hundredweight higher for the same stock.

"The receipts this week consisted of 141 cars California and forty-nine Idaho, and there were twenty-three diversions. This is heavier than the corresponding week a year ago, when 129 cars California and sixteen Idahos arrived and forty-four cars were diverted. It is also much heavier than the preceding week of this season when a total of 131 cars arrived from all sections and twenty-three were diverted. Idaho Russets still continue to arrive in about three times the volume they did last year.

"Although onion receipts were heavier than the preceding week, prices advanced because of the general onion situation. The eastern crop is light and eastern markets offer a good outlet for the Stockton onions, which are practically the sole source of supply for Los Angeles late onions. Last year eastern markets were too low to take California onions, and more onions came to this market. Prices have advanced from $4.25 per hundredweight, for the best Stockton White Globes to $5.50 during the week. During the last two days the market has advanced a full dollar, and the movement has been good. Los Angeles storage holdings of onions on Oct. 24, 1921 were 22,390 sacks, on Oct. 24, 1920, 52,105 sacks and Oct. 20, 1919 were 57,650 sacks, so the storage holdings are below normal locally for this time of the year. During the week seventeen cars arrived and one was diverted, compared with eleven arrivals and five diversions the preceding week.

"Grapes have moved moderately and prices have changed, but little throughout the week. Offerings have cleaned up well, but there has been no shortage. Tokays are becoming scarce, but more Red Emperors are being offered. During the week twenty-seven cars arrived compared with sixteen cars from outside points last week. The price range of table grapes is from 5@9 cents per pound, depending on variety and quality, with most sales around 6@7 cents. Last year the table grapes on this same date ranged from 8@13 cents per pound with Malagas ranging the higher price from 11@13, while Tokays are highest now with a range of 7@9 cents per pound. Red Emperors are now being offered in liberal quantities at 6@7 per pound.

Pittsburg capitalists have authorized the construction of reduction plants in California, Utah, Colorado and Nevada which, with installed machinery, will cost more than $13,125,000. The buildings have been contracted for in Los Angeles and these alone will exceed $1,000,000, on a cost plus basis. To handle this great contract more capital is needed and a limited number of shares of stock is offered to the public at par, $1.00 per share. This we consider an excellent investment for conservative buyers who are ready to take large dividends. This company has three years work ahead and is signing new contracts as fast as they can be absorbed.

An opportunity for investment worthy of your careful inquiry if you have from $500 up. All information at the company's general offices. If more convenient ask by mail.

HIGHER PRICES FOR SEASONED STOCKS INEVITABLE.

The ever increasing surplus of funds in various Banking Institutions will be put to work through the purchase of high-grade securities, and the Bond market is already beginning to give evidence of higher prices as a result of this class of buying.

Higher Bond prices mean lower Bond yields, and investment funds will necessarily be compelled to turn to high-grade seasoned Stocks in order to derive a fair return.

Anticipate this move by making a selection of attractive Stocks and write for a copy of our leaflet describing the Monthly Investment Plan, which will enable you to accumulate good securities without risk.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Stocks were firm to strong during the day's short session, but the market continued to be influenced by technical considerations. Foreign oils showed some of the recent strength, domestic issues easing under realizing sales. Independent steels and shippings responded to moderate accumulation, the former again owing their prominence to rumors of mergers. Investment rails receded slightly at the outset, hardening later.

Changes among specialties resulted largely from the customary week-end settlement of speculative accounts, but gains prevailed at the steady close. Sales 375,000 shares.

Trading in bonds was light, most of the Liberty issues showing gains, while Victory notes established new high quotations for the year. Railroad and industrial bonds were mixed but some of the foreign group, particularly United Kingdoms, of 1937 were strong. Total sales, par value, $6,175,000.

Last week's moderate deficit in actual reserves of the clearinghouse was cancelled by this week's cash gain of $18,900,000 and loans showed a further decrease of $31,800,000, making a total contraction of about $105,000,000 for the past fortnight.

Mercantile agencies reported some slowing down in general business due to unreasonable weather. Better collections ruled at the big distributing centers of trade and banks were offering more freely of funds for commercial users.

An Ill Wind

Here's a case where a wind that brought hard luck to one man will bring a prize to you, if you're ready for it.

Two Houses Sacrificed

A few months ago the owner built these two houses—cosy, modern, five-room homes—located in Midway Place, one of the choicest sections between Los Angeles and Pasadena, just a stone's throw from the world-famous Orange Grove Avenue.

Yesterday he came to us and said, "I've got to go East. Sell my houses and sell them quick—I need the money!" We set the price, $6500. Somebody's going to get a bargain. Drive out today: East on Pasadena Avenue to Mission Avenue, South Pasadena. Or take South Pasadena car and get off at Palm. Walk one block east. Our tract office is there.

BUT GET THERE FIRST!

OIL OWNERSHIP

Again and Again We Prove It.

Our Breckenridge oil sands, plus actual oil ownership, are making fortunes for investors every day.

Money Right From Breckenridge speaks louder than any words we could print for—DIRECT for five direct asignments

No. 97

Breckenridge, Texas, Oct 22 1921

Pay to the order of Arthur Bell $500.00

Five hundred Dollars

To Breckenridge State Bank & Trust Co. Breckenridge, Texas

Gregory rig Company by R S Gregory

This subscriber is an oil man, right on the ground. He chose DIRECT.

SPEED—Since Oct. 2 DIRECT has built derrick, rigged and made over 600 feet, four wells just that fast. Eight locations, forty proven acres in that Brown-Curry Pool, which yields real winners. We are confident.

DIRECT WILL BE A MUCH BIGGER WINNER and it is already nearly one-third down to the never-failing fortune sands in our territory, and is over one-third sold.

IT IS NO WONDER! You own the oil—recorded in your own name—know you're sure to get paid when oil is struck—every fifteen days and DIRECT "Unit" buyers get full seven-sixteenths of all ever produced. Capital only $70,000. DIRECT Assignment "Units" only $25 each. To prove we believe in what we're selling

WE ARE THE FIRST TO EVER MAKE THIS PROPOSITION

Let your oil pay 10%. In buying for cash, send us only 90%. Let your oil make the 10%. If you wish terms send 30% now, 30% in three weeks, 30% in 45 days. $25 buys one barrel in 2800; $100 buys one barrel in 700.

Four 300-barrel wells will pay over $600 per year; eight over $1200 on every $100 invested. We're after bigger wells than that. Thousands of Breckenridge investors have been paid much bigger money.

One by one our Breckenridge winners are announced "sold out." Then investors get word "you win." So call at our office. WRITE or wire now.

Fresno Petroleum Company

A California Corporation

Capital $500,000 Par Value $1.00 Per Share

This Company has been authorized to sell 200,000 shares of its capital stock at $1.00 per share. Company has large acreage which assures the investor of substantial returns on the discovery of oil. Write us for full particulars.

Information just received from the field states the Fresno United is now drilling at 1200 feet and going through a large oil sand; they have a good gas pressure and are anticipating a strong body of oil at depth. This property adjoins ours and the structure is the same. We are now preparing to erect derrick and expect to spud in on or before November 10th. We advise immediate purchase of Fresno Petroleum stock. Things are happening daily in the field that indicate considerable interest in the race for oil. We believe we are offering you an investment worthy of your consideration. Sign the subscription blank and return to us. Make all checks payable to Fresno Petroleum Company.

ORANGES.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 29.—Cool nights throughout the citrus districts, both north and south of the Tehachepi, have ruled the past week. As a result, navels have taken on more color.

In Tulare county shipments are not expected to open until November 15. This means a light supply of new-crop navels for Thanksgiving.

Sizes will run small to medium. There will be no surplus of 126s and larger.

So far, the trade has shown a lack of interest in new-crop navels. Only a few orders have been booked. The lack of interest on the part of the trade, however, is attributed mainly to the threatened rail strike. Now that the strike has been called off, shippers look for a rush of orders.

A few "first" cars are expected to bring $4.50 per box f.o.b.

Cash quotations on Tulare county navels are on a basis of $3.60 per box for shipment November 20 to 25 and $3.10 for the following ten-day period.

Shippers are pretty much in the air on prices, however, and are inclined to wait until the fruit begins moving before talking prices.

Butte county shippers hope to get a few cars out around November 5 to 10.

Arizona navels are moving. First cars sold on a basis of $6.50 per box, f.o.b., as against $8 last year. Grapefruit brought $3.75 per box f.o.b.

Florida shippers are getting out an average of 44 cars oranges daily, according to records of the past seven days.

Parson Brown oranges are being sweated to bring out the color. This is the first attempt at sweating for color in Florida.

Prices on Floridas in the auction market ranged from $2.70 to $4.50 per box the past week. Considerable fruit was off color.

The market on California Valencia oranges eased off somewhat in the eastern markets the past week.

F.o.b. quotations are on a basis of $4.50 to $5.25 per box, depending on sizes and district.

LEMONS.

The market on California lemons is a little easier this week.

F.o.b. quotations are on a basis of $4 to $4.50 on 300s size and $3 to $3.50 on 360s.

There are 35,000 boxes of foreign lemons on hand and available for sale within the next thirty days.

Wheat Market Closing Prices Near Day's Low

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Efforts on the part of local operators to advance prices for grains were successful the greater part of the day, but the advance brought out selling which not only checked further gains, but made a reaction and a close around the lowest of the day, with wheat ⅝ to ⅞ cent, corn ⅜ cent, oats ⅛ to ¼ cent lower, while rye gained ¼ to ½ cent.

In the face of all bearish news wheat is 2¼ to 2½ cents higher than a week ago. Corn shows gains of 1⅜ to 2⅛ cents and oats are ⅝ to ⅞ cent higher while rye was ⅛ cent lower to ⅛ cent higher. Lard is 17½ cents higher to 12½ cents lower, and ribs 22½ to 32½ cents lower than a week ago.

Rains over a good part of Kansas, where they are badly needed, have removed apprehension of crop damage for the time being and it is entirely too early for dry weather to be an important factor in the wheat market. Buying early was based on prospects of a decrease in the visible supply for the week, but Chicago stocks show little if any change, as receipts were only 11,000 bushels more than the shipments.

At the top December was up to $1.09¾ and May to $1.14¼, with a break of 1½ to 1⅝ cents at the last. A few local professionals absorbed the bulk of the offerings early, while the selling at the last was by the leading interests and by houses with eastern connections.

The corn trade was small, with few interesting new features. Traders were influenced by the advance in wheat and prices moved up ⅛ cent early, with a break of ⅝ cent following and a tame close. About 75 per cent of the receipts were new, which were taken largely by the glucose interests.

Elevator interests were changing oats from December to May, and there was a little commission-house buying, presumably on eastern account. At the last a break came on selling of December by the leading elevator interests, which depressed prices ⅛ cent and made a tame close. Lightest receipts at this time in over five years had no effect on the general market.

Exporters bought 100,000 bushels rye and there was spreading between rye and wheat and closing up trades between old and new December at ⅝ cent difference. Northwestern receipts were thirty-eight cars.

TEXAN MAKES GOO

600-Barrel Well!

ANOTHER TRIUMPH FOR THE FOSTERS AND THE FOSTER PLAN

Our heartiest congratulations are extended to holders of TEXAN units. Of course, to the Fosters, this is just another well, one of a string. But to many of you, perhaps, it is THE well—your first experience in the wonderful possibilities of oil investment.

This one well—TEXAN No. 1—at its present rate of production will pay you 100% per year on your investment. Dividends will commence within 45 days. And this return may easily be trebled, for you have an equal pro rata share not only in TEXAN No. 1, but in TEXAN No. 2 and 3, both now being drilled and both with splendid prospects of success.

But, bigger to the Fosters than immediate success—bigger than dividends—bigger than anything connected with the enterprise, is this one vital fact:

First Optimo and now TEXAN give positive proof that the Fosters are producers first and promoters after.

Our first syndicated offer, Kentuck, we frankly admit, was no startling success, for Kentuck got one dry hole and one [illegible] We ourselves lost heavily [illegible] But she was an honest effort [illegible] dends have been paid and [illegible] out Nov. 1.

All oil wells can't be big ones. [illegible] always be right. Occasionally [illegible] nine times out of ten you'll [illegible] bringing in real oil wells. [illegible] you will find them [illegible] they say they will do—drilling [illegible] promise to drill—and drilling [illegible]

TEXAN'S triumph has a message [illegible] tire investing public of California [illegible] the stamp of positive proof on the [illegible] that the Foster plan of financing [illegible] is the fairest, the simplest, and the [illegible] its opportunity for the individual [illegible] win, of any that has ever been [illegible]

The outlines of that plan are given in the advertisement below. That, in itself, [illegible] well worth your while to read. [illegible] tion we therein announce ANOTHER [illegible] OFFERING. Which means that the [illegible] nity is again opened to you to [illegible] Fosters!

Under the Foster Plan of sound oil financing The FOSTERS Announce

TEXANA
Texan's Twin

So named because it is identical in proven acreage, in drilling wells, in character of location and in possibilities with Texan, which has just brought in its first of three drilling wells, producing 600 barrels per day—a handsome money-maker for every investor in it.

The Fosters take you again to Breckenridge, Stephens County, Texas—positively the most wonderful oil field, not only in the United States, but in the entire world. It is the field which, one month, is reported to have produced one-seventh of the nation's entire output of oil—a field which is famous for its heavy, long-lived producers—and the millions in earnings it has paid to investors.

And there the Fosters show you another typical Foster opportunity—TEXANA — Texan's Twin.

The TEXANA Syndicate owns 50-50 leaseholds on the superb ground, right next to Texan's holdings. Texana will have the same number of wells—the same wonder drillers—the same expert Foster oil engineers—the same choice acreage. In fact, she is just Texan all over again, only better, since Texan has proved TEXANA'S acreage.

TEXANA has her crews working night and day to win the same rapid success as Texan. The tremendous speed with which Texan was drilled and brought in left for her [illegible] anticipated to get ready for TEXANA [illegible] every Foster resource and every [illegible] being brought into play so that [illegible] be lost until Texana production [illegible] today.

TEXANA is divided into [illegible] Texan, and will be sold at the [illegible] —$25 each. Only 3000 [illegible] market, however.

Every unit gives you the same [illegible] leges, for TEXANA is being [illegible] cordance with every feature of the [illegible] When you buy a unit you [illegible] nite ownership of a definite [illegible] wells TEXANA drills [illegible] more to follow. Your [illegible] ual, indivisible, and [illegible] part of your earnings from TEXANA [illegible] tion will be used for officers' [illegible] directors, etc.

Following the usual Foster [illegible] every facility for you to [illegible] about TEXANA and her [illegible] a re-print of our attractive [illegible] en Sands of Texas," which [illegible] ent truths regarding Texas [illegible] the details of TEXANA.

And now take home with you [illegible] hind which we put every [illegible] that we possess:

In the fastest and most [illegible] ing campaign ever [illegible] every Texan unit in [illegible]

Watch us sell TEXANA in TWO!
TEXANA Will Take Care of Texan Over-Subscriptions

Greatly to our regret, a number of checks for Texan units were received too late. The units were all gone and the books closed. However, TEXANA units are the same price and offer the same opportunity. We suggest that the money sent in be applied to the purchase of TEXANA. Write us your wishes in regard to the matter. It's not a matter of substitution—just another golden chance!

Watch Us Sell TEXANA in TWO!

BAWL-OUTS

EXTEND A WARM WELCOME TO ALL MOTOR VISITORS.

Guests of Southern California to be Shown Special Courtesies by Auto Club and Police.

"Stop—stranger—and take a look around! You're welcome to Southern California!

"Hope you like our traffic rules—and we won't be too hard on you until you get used to our ways."

Words of greeting to this effect are to be accorded every auto visitor who enters Los Angeles, beginning tomorrow, by ten selected police traffic officers.

VISITOR'S CARD.

In a plan suggested by the touring bureau of the Automomibile Club of Southern California and approved by Mayor Cryer and Chief of Police Jones, every automobile carrying a license number of another State is to be stopped on the downtown streets and the owner presented with an official "visitor's card."

This card carries a message on one side addressed to the stranger here by the Mayor, and a message from the Automobile Club on the reverse side. In its message, the club invites the motoring visitor to call at club headquarters for the purpose of securing maps, touring data and information on local traffic laws—all free of charge.

In addition, he will be given a windshield "sticker" to place on the windshield of his car which notifies the public that this particular visitor is a guest of the southern part of the State, and that special courtesies should be accorded him wherever he travels in Southern California.

The Mayor welcomes the auto tourist on behalf of the city and points out that everything possible will be done to aid in securing his comfort and ease. The "greeting" cards to be presented by the cops are prepared by the Auto Club in book form, and the traffic officer presenting the largest number to visitors during the month will be commended. The number of cards handed out will be checked up when they are presented at the touring bureau.

TO JUMP PRODUCTION DURING THE WINTER.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Oct. 29.—As a means of increasing factory production and thereby giving employment to more men during the winter the Packard Motor Car Company announced a cut of $625 in the price of the single six model.

In taking this action, President Alvan MacAuley stated that the company was taking advantage of public approval of this particular model to try the experiment, not only of maintaining but even increasing, during the winter months, the rate of production.

"This will be accomplished," Mr. MacAuley said, "by a deep cut in the price of the single six, to prevail during the winter months."

DAVIS TO BUILD CADILLAC BODIES.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Oct. 29.—William N. Davis has been appointed body engineer of the Cadillac Motor Car Company. Mr. Davis has now rejoined Cadillac after serving in another plant for the past two years. He first entered the Cadillac employ ten years ago and at the outbreak of war occupied the post of assistant body engineer. During the war he was engaged in aeroplane work for the government.

Making Motor Visitors Feel Right at Home in Southern California.

The Automobile Club of Southern California and the police are to co-operate in extending to Los Angeles' automobile guests every possible courtesy and consideration at all times. The idea is to make motorists from other States feel that they are warmly welcome in this city rather than making life miserable for them by a too rigid enforcement of strange traffic rules. Above, Lieut. Cleveland Heath of the traffic squad handing a fair visiting motorist a tag, welcoming her to Los Angeles in the name of Mayor Cryer and extending the courtesies of the Auto Club. Insert shows the tag, and, below, O. W. Lewis of the club pasting an official "Visitors' Seal" on the windshield of the car. Tag and seal will insure special consideration for the stranger within our gates.

TO CHANGE METHOD OF FINANCING.

Believe Trade Acceptances Will be in Order During Winter and Spring.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

AKRON (O.) Oct. 29.—As the winter months come closer the rubber industry is turning to the trade acceptance method of financing merchandising and it is not unlikely that much of the business done on the spring dating basis ordinarily will be done through trade acceptances. Banks are preparing to make discounts on a large volume of this class of paper. During the past few months trade acceptances have fallen into disuetude in the rubber industry because of the hand-to-mouth policy of buying adopted generally throughout the trade.

Tire price cuts were again touched during the week, but thus far it has been merely on the surface. The Mason Tire and Rubber Company announced a complete 15 per cent reduction on all classes of tires, while the Miller Tire and Rubber Company announced a similar reduction on popular sized casings only.

Miller has recently taken hold of the new 31x4 tire, which has been adopted by several manufacturers of automobiles selling for less than $1000 each, and indications are that the company will enjoy considerable original equipment business from this source.

At least four automobile manufacturers have already adopted this new size and it is reasonably certain that Miller will get its full share of the business.

PRICES ARE SLASHED ON FEDERAL TRUCKS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Oct. 29.—Federal Motor Truck Company has announced price reductions averaging 22 per cent on all models, making the fourth price curtailment by this company within the past two years. "The new prices are not 'cuts' in the accepted sense of the word," said M. L. Pulcher, vice-president and general manager of the Federal Company in making the announcement.

"They represent the final accomplishment of a plan which our company has been developing for a number of years.

"As a result of conservative, careful management we have passed through the readjustment period to a somewhat more advantageous position than that enjoyed by most companies. Our company has no burdensome financial overhead, no bonded or preferred stock indebtedness, no interest or principal charges or bank obligations that we must pass on to our customers."

RICHELIEU FOUR ON MARKET SOON.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

TRENTON (N. J.) Oct. 29.—The Richelieu Four is about to make its debut in the passenger automobile field, the Richelieu Motor Car Company having been organized in Asbury Park, N. J., to produce this latest model. The car completely equipped will sell for $3950 for the touring model.

The engine will be a Duesenberg-made model made by the Rochester Motors Corporation expressly for Richelieu.

The company officers are: N. G. Rost, vice-president Rochester Motors Corporation, president; S. A. Reeves, vice-president Merchants National Bank, vice-president; R. G. Poole, cashier Merchants' National Bank, Asbury Park, treasurer.

WHIRLING DERVISHES SHARPENING CLAWS.

Kings of Motor Racing World Now Polishing Up for Beverly Hills Battle, Thanksgiving Day.

The whirling dervishes of the motor racing world are again playing tag with old Father Times with the Beverly Speedway as their playground. A half-score of the speed kings are using the famous bowl for daily practice and tuning-up work in preparation for the annual Thanksgiving Day event, which, this year will be of 250 miles duration. Nearly $35,000 in cash and great gobs of glory will reward the victor and the runners-up.

MUCH MORE SPEED.

Practice for the coming race started much earlier than has been the case in the past, the pilots evidently realizing that the turkey day classic of 1921 will be more bitterly contested than any previous speed battle ever staged at Beverly. The maximum speed shown last year was not as fast as the slowest the present-day speedway contenders show every day in practice.

Surprising as it may seem to the speed fans, De Palma is not the driver most feared by the contenders in the international championship race. The famous Italian, once supreme in the speed brushes, no longer is able to go out in front and toy with the other gasoline sharpshooters as he pleases.

HERE'S THE REASON.

The reason is that "Little Jimmy" Murphy, Roscoe Sarles, "Tommy" Milton, Eddie Hearne, Joe Thomas and others have succeeded in injecting much additional speed into their mounts since last spring. Last Sunday in the Cotati 150-mile race, De Palma was not able to once get the lead, although he fought Murphy, Hearne, Milton and Sarles desperately for so many laps that he ripped a tread off his tire in the attempt.

With the assurance of many entries never before in a Beverly contest, Secretary Young of the Speedway Association declares that the past records for number of starters will be broken by at least six when the go-fasts line up on November 24.

'RAH FOR EARL!

Mr. Young is practically certain that Earl Cooper will be among those present when the flag is dropped. Cooper declares he is much like an old fire engine horse when he hears the fire alarm sounded. The smell of castor oil and the rumble of the racing motors affect Cooper worse than a jazz tune does the feet of a Terpsichorean lizard when the lights are low and the dancing floor is crowded.

Another great driver who has not been out of the game quite as long as Cooper, but who feels the lure of the fascinating sport of motor racing, is Art Klein. Klein has a back-

AUTO BODY PLANT GETS BIG ORDERS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LANSING (Mich.) Oct. 29.—Durant Motors of Michigan has placed with the Auto Body Company the contract for the supply of all of the open type bodies for the Lansing plant. Officials of the Auto Body Company say that this business means large production for the Auto Body Company and the employment of many men. This contract, with others recently placed with the Auto Body Company, indicated considerable activity at the plant for the coming year.

BUICK TO GET FIRST CHOICE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Buick has won the privilege of first choice of display space at the big national automobile shows in New York and Chicago. This honor is annually conferred on the motor-car manufacturer doing the largest volume of business during the year preceding the date of the show. This compilation, of course, is exclusive of Henry Ford.

While Buick has won this honor before, it is appreciated more than ever this time on account of the fact that competition has been unusually keen during the past year.

The National Automobile Show for 1922 is to be held here in the Grand Central Palace, during the week of January 7 to 13. The Chicago exhibit will be held two weeks later at the Coliseum.

OBSERVE ARMISTICE DAY.

The Motor Car Dealers' Association of Los Angeles, at a meeting held during the week, adopted unanimously a resolution whereby all dealers and distributors will close their doors on Armistice Day, November 11. In making announcement of this action by the association, Manager Burt Roberts said:

"There are hundreds of ex-service men in the employ of the members of our association and the employers, without exception, agreed that these men were entitled to the day off. As ex-service men make up a large proportion of the shop and sales forces of many of the dealers, it was decided that all firms should close their doors all day in order that all members of the forces might assist in celebrating the day."

TACKS CAUSING TROUBLE.

"Jack the Tack Spreader" is busy again on Southern California highways, according to a report just issued by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Hundreds of motorists have complained by telephone and in person to club offices in various southern counties of the State that roads in their neighborhood have been so generously coated with tacks that scores of auto parties were lined up along the road fixing as many as three punctures in each car at one time.

Routes between San Diego and Los Angeles have suffered particularly in this respect, and it is the belief of Auto Club officials that the tacks, which are the large-headed variety, have been maliciously put on the road for no good purpose by some certain individual or individuals.

PINK SHEET NEWS SUMMARY.

AUTOMOBILES. Increasing activities noted in many motor-car manufacturing plants and thousands of new workers are added to various staffs. Pessimists are handed a knockout wallop as heavy production continues into winter months.

Automobile Club of Southern California and police to co-operate in extending to visiting motorists a cordial welcome to Los Angeles. Everything possible to add to the tourists' comfort and pleasure is to be done. Traffic officers to show special consideration to strangers who get mixed up with our rules and regulations.

Champion race drivers of the country starting in early to get in trim for the Beverly Hills speed battle Thanksgiving Day. Many drivers already taking practice spins on the big board oval. Quite possible that several strange faces will be seen for the first time at the big event.

Motor-car Dealers of Los Angeles to observe Armistice Day and close places of business November 11.

Late items of interest picked up in the automobile manufacturing centers of the East and received over The Times leased wires.

STEPHENS Salient Six

The Stephens is economical because it is built for conservation of oil, water and gasoline. Mechanical perfection and sturdy construction makes certain low operating cost.

Overhead Valves

The overhead valve engine consumes the minimum of gasoline. The compact firing chamber and quick action of the rocker arms makes all the gas burnt convey power to the propulsion of the car.

Thermo-siphon Cooling System

Proper circulation of water around the firing chamber keeps the engine at the right temperature for perfect performance and economical running.

Force Feed Oiling System

The positive action of the oil pump properly lubricates all moving parts of the engine, making it run freely. The force feed system gives the highest mileage per quart of oil.

Preheating Manifold

All gasoline passes through the preheating manifold before entering the combustion chamber, thus vaporizing all the fuel and making certain its quick and total ignition.

Balanced Crankshaft

Smooth, uninterrupted revolving of the crankshaft due to perfect balance cuts down the consumption of fuel and delivers steady, economical power to the back wheels.

Timken Bearings

The Stephens is equipped throughout with Timkin tapered roller bearings, making the car exceptionally easy rolling.. The elimination of friction cuts down the power necessary to drive the car.

Design

The sleek lines of the Stephens enable it to skim lightly over the road. The car is so designed that all wind-resisting surfaces are eliminated.

Huge Shipment of Motor Cars Shows Real Speed.

Toledo to Los Angeles in Just About Eight Days.

Overland Dealers Rejoicing at Delivery Prospects.

Heralded as the largest and richest freight train of automobiles that has ever been shipped from Toledo, O., eighty-six box cars loaded to the roof with Overland and Willys-Knight cars arrived yesterday.

Los Angeles may not be the automobile manufacturing center of the United States, but it has taken its position at the head of the largest distributing centers of motor cars in the entire country.

Approximately 204 Overland cars, 141 Willys-Knights and spare parts sufficient to construct fifty additional machines comprised the monster shipment which left the Toledo factory of the Willys-Overland Company not more than eight days ago.

"The popularity of the Overland and Willys-Knight has been mounting day by day," said J. F. Thomson, manager of the local branch of the Willys-Overland Pacific Company. "So great has been the demand for the Overland and Willys-Knight that it was necessary for our factory to send the largest shipment of cars that has ever left Toledo, O. Back in 1917, known now as the abnormal year in the history of the automobile business, the second largest shipment of motor cars was made. One hundred and eighty-three box cars comprised this shipment."

The value of the automobiles in the recent shipment will approximate a half-million dollars. Freight charges will total close to $50,000; $1389 for war tax, and additional charge of $400 for overage in weights. This trainload of Overlands and Willys-Knights, including sedans and coupes, will total close to $547,000.

So greatly have been the strides made lately by the Overland and Willys-Knight that officials of the factory producing these cars predict that production will reach the former topnotch manufacturing figures in a very short time.

No Question About Getting Money's Worth Here.

This is one of the new Keystone visible gasoline venders now in operation in G. L. Sweetman's filling station. Sales of gasoline in this particular station have increased several hundred gallons a month due to the fact that customers can see exactly the amount of gas they are receiving. H. J. Godschalk, the local distributor, and G. W. Moore of the Keystone Iron and Steel Company are giving the new vender the double O.

GASOLINE IN CLEAR VIEW.

A new type of visible gasoline vendor has been developed right here in Los Angeles and is now being placed on the market successfully by the Keystone Iron and Steel Company.

For a long time the gasoline service station operators have realized the great advantage to the public in being able to show the customer exactly what he was getting and the advent of this perfected visible pump is the one big step forward in the merchandising of gasoline. The car owner can see at a glance exactly how much gasoline went into his tank and all doubt or suspicion that has lurked in his mind because of the out-of-sight system of the manual piston pump is eliminated.

NEARS PERFECTION.

"The Keystone Visible Gasoline Vendor represents the work of two years in trying out a hundred different theories and ideas," says G. W. Moore, secretary-treasurer of the Keystone Iron and Steel Company." "We have worked out a device that is as near automatic and free from the vagaries of the human hand as is mechanically possible.

"First of all, the big clear glass reservoir is certified to hold ten full gallons of gasoline at the point marked by the top arrow. In filling, a little more than ten gallons goes into the reservoir but an overflow pipe carries the excess back to the underground tank. When the motorist drives up to a station equipped with a Keystone Visible Vendor, he sees ten galons in plain view. When he asks for five gallons he can sit and watch the level of the gasoline in the reservoir drop until it reaches the arrow numbered "5" and then he knows that he has received full five gallons. If he asks the operator to fill up the tank, the operator stands at the tank with the shut-off valve open. When the tank is full, he shuts off the flow of gasoline and there is no waste or spilling. The amount shown on the marks in the reservoir tell him just how much the operator put in and that is all he pays for.

SAVES IN LABOR.

"The Keystone cuts down the labor of the operator. It saves steps for him. He takes the hose off the hook, goes to your tank, stands there while the gasoline flows in and shuts it off when the desired amount has gone in and steps back to the hook, hangs up the hose and the reservoir fills automatically. It saves him one round trip from the pump to your gasoline tank.

"Then too, by filling automatically, he does not have to wind the pump back down. The reservoir fills while he is making change for you or putting oil in your crankcase.

"There is also another exclusive feature that interests every garage owner. It is the reduction of fire hazards. The prevention of overflowing at the tank, by reason of the operator standing at the tank and not at the pump as with the manual type, eliminates the greatest danger from cars catching on fire when the motor starts and a spark shoots out the exhaust pipe. Also the Keystone has another fire protective feature that is unique. It is a feature that serves a double purpose. When the door that slides open to show the inside of the vendor is open, the vendor is in working service. Just the instant this door is closed, all the gasoline in the reservoir drains back down into the underground tanks. Should a fire start near the vendor, the operator has only to slide the door shut and the reservoir is emptied of gasoline and there is nothing about the vendor to catch fire or explode."

Motorbikes to Occupy Center of Stage Soon.

It is announced that the National Motorcycle, Bicycle and Accessory Show will be held at the Coliseum, Chicago, during the week of November 7 to 12. Unlike previous shows, it is said, the exhibition this year will feature many new devices for motorcycles and bicycles in addition to an unusually large display of parts and accessories.

Manufacturers and jobbers from all parts of the country will occupy attractive booths, each one showing his products, while the display of motor bikes and bicycles will no doubt create a great deal of interest. One of the novelties of the show will be the exhibit of historic bikes. This display will occupy several booths. Some of the wheels to be shown date as far back as 1850 and the crude contraptions of those days will prove quite a contrast with the bicycles of today when they are placed side by side.

Home trainer bicycle races, bicycle polo and trick riding are also scheduled. These events will take place each afternoon and evening in the annex. Chicago's most seasoned amateurs will compete against each other for valuable prizes put up by management and keen competition is looked for. It is declared that as much as a mile-a-minute has been attained on home trainer machines.

ONE-TON TRUCK IS LEADING FIELD NOW.

The growing popularity of the one-ton truck for a very wide range of hauling is becoming more and more apparent with the accumulated experience of truck users. Figured in dollars and cents on a ton mile basis, the one-ton truck is making a better case for itself every day.

Each succeeding year manufacturers are arranging for a bigger proportion of trucks of that capacity. In fact, more than half of all trucks being made and sold are of one-ton capacity.

SOME SORT OF MYSTERY IN THE AIR.

Generally Suspected That Apperson Branch is to Uncork Something Soon.

An air of profound mystery veils the activities these days at the local factory branch of the Apperson, and of which Harris Hanshue is manager.

Just what is in the air is something that even the well-known ouija board cannot solve. But something of interest to the local automobile fraternity and the motoring public is sure to break forth.

However, it is almost certain that the mysterious moves of the members of the Apperson staff will result in a feat that will resemble in some fashion the two recent notable Apperson anniversary model performances staged on the Los Angeles Speedway.

What is claimed to be a new world's record for traveling at a sustained speed was registered some time ago by an Apperson when it covered 2757 miles over the boards of the Beverly Hills bowl, in forty hours. The average running speed was over seventy-five miles an hour or 68.9 miles per hour, elapsed time. The car was a stock model and the run was made on four consecutive days for daylight driving. Stops were made for gasoline, oil, tire changes and changing drivers. After the demonstration was completed the car was sent around the track several laps and was caught at better than eighty miles an hour.

A few weeks later this same Apperson anniversary model achieved another noteworthy motoring feat. This time the test was made for one hour of continuous running. Sixty-nine full laps of a mile and a quarter each were registered on the speedometer. The total mileage for sixty minutes was eighty-six and a quarter. At the end of this performances the motometer was just below the circle and the radiator was absolutely cool.

It is expected that Harris Hanshue will spring the big surprise some time next week and ardent motoring fans will anxiously await the news.

EMERY LEAVES FOR SOUTHERN STATES.

RACINE TIRE SALESMANAGER CONTINUES SWING AROUND THE CIRCUIT.

Following a motor trip over Southern California and as far north as the Bay Cities, J. R. Emery, director of sales of the Racine Auto Tire Company, left last week for Texas and other southern States. While here he made his headquarters with the Pacific Rubber Company, Coast distributors of Horseshoe tires, and was the guest of Roy R. Meads, its president and general manager, while on the auto tour.

"Emery was very much impressed with the aggressive spirit that he found very much in evidence in Los Angeles, and like many other eastern visitors, he raved about our State highway system," said Meads. "In his opinion, the business depression as far as California is concerned, is a thing of the past. He added that he thought Los Angeles had never felt it to any appreciable extent from all that he could learn."

BRISCOE STARTS NEW AUTOMOBILE CONCERN.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Oct. 29. — Benjamin Briscoe, who recently severed his connection with the Briscoe Motor Car company of Jackson, today incorporated an automobile engineering company to do business in Detroit.

The company is incorporated for $205,100, having only $100 of common stock and 25,000 shares of no par stock. Of the no par stock 5000 shares are to be sold for $1 each, going to the organizers only. The remaining 20,000 shares are to be sold for $10 each.

The company is to be known as the Briscoe and Stahl Company. Its corporate powers permit it to manufacture and sell automobiles, deal in securities, hold patents and general manufacturing and engineering business.

With Mr. Briscoe as incorporators are Rudolph Stahl and Guy A. Miller, both of Detroit.

INCREASED SELLING IS NOTED IN EAST.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

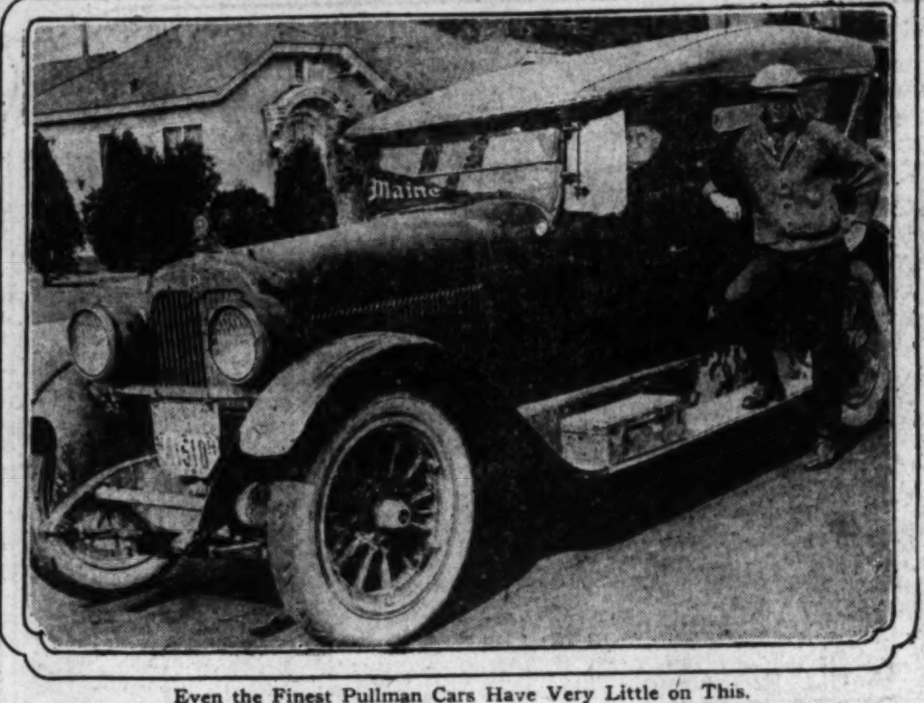
DETROIT, Oct. 29.—Joseph E. Fields, director of sales of the Liberty Motor Car Company, who returned from a fortnight's trip through the East this week, reports increased selling in all lines has set in through that section of the country.

More business has been done by New England merchants in the past two weeks than for the entire preceding six weeks period, according to information gleaned by Mr. Fields.

CALIFORNIA TAKES A HIGH POSITION.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Oct. 29.—Pennsylvania leads the Union in the number of passenger automobiles registered. Its total is given by the United States Bureau of Public Roads as 557,765. California is second with 557,231. Ohio third witn 547,000; Illinois fourth with 512,541; New York fifth with 505,642, and Texas sixth with 412,-232. Nevada with 688 has the fewest number of registered machines.



Even the Finest Pullman Cars Have Very Little on This.

When it comes to a combination of luxury, comfort and long motor trips, give Mr. Herbert A. Edwards a LaFayette every time. Mr. Edwards has just completed a round trip between Los Angeles and Maine in his LaFayette touring car, covering several thousand miles of assorted roads without the slightest hint of trouble. The power, easy riding qualities and comforts of the LaFayette made every minute of the long run a pleasure, according to the owner.

DEAL IS "OFF."

Recent rumors have linked the names of two big Detroit plants in negotiations that Mr. Exelsen undertook some time ago, but high officials in both of the companies said that the proposed deal failed to come to a head and was "off" now, as far as they were concerned.

Jackson Motors Corporation was formed in 1919, representing a merger of the Jackson Motor and Manufacturing Company, successors to the Jackson Automobile Company, the United Four Wheel Drive Truck Corporation, and the Lamson Truck and Tractor Corporation. Net working capital as of July 1, 1920, was given as $1,584,268. The plant occupies six acres of floor space, and has facilities for loading thirty cars a day.

REPUBLIC TRUCK.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ALMA (Mich.) Oct. 29.—The Republic Motor Truck Company Thursday announced price reductions of from $300 to $750 on chassis of various types.

TOURING IN REAL COMFORT.

Transcontinental touring de luxe formerly was confined to that done in the drawing-room of a Pullman car, or perhaps even a private car. Mr. Herbert A. Edwards of 1046 South Alvarado street has a better way, he claims, and while he admits that it requires a little more time, it is by far the most enjoyable way to make the trip.

Mr. Edwards left Los Angeles on April 30 for Northern Maine in his LaFayette touring car, which he had purchased shortly before from the Troy Motor Sales Company, distributors for the LaFayette here. His plans called for following the National Old Trails route to the Middle West, but, as it happened, he ran right into the midst of the Pueblo flood and was compelled to cut out across the plains to Amarillo, Tex. For miles in the flood district he says he leved the mud with his axles, but he arrived safely in Amarillo and then went on north to Pratt, Kansas, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Akron, Cleveland, Buffalo, Niagara, Albany, Boston, Portland, Me., and then to Berlin and Milan, N. H., and to Caribou and Fort Kent, and across into Canada.

After visiting in Milan and White River Junction, Vt., Mr. Edwards and the three others in his party started for home, coming west by way of Bennington, Buffalo, Cleveland, Wooster, Columbus, Dayton, Indianapolis, Terre Haute and across Kansas by the Denver and Joplin Trail, over which he made the best daily mileage of the trip, logging 240 miles in one day, and on the following day making 306 miles in ten hours and ten minutes of travel.

"On my entire trip," said Mr. Edwards, "the only trouble I had was in picking up two nails and having to have my tubes vulcanized. My record shows a distance of 3708 miles on the return trip and we stopped at the best hotels, enjoyed the best meals and yet our total expense only ran to $334.96, divided up as follows: Hotels, etc., $208.97; gasoline, $95.94; oil, $19.55; storage, $10.50."

WARM WELCOME FOR VISITORS.

Los Angeles by motor car from eastern and northern points is a matter well worth considering by the city," pointed out Secretary Mitchell of the Auto Club yesterday, "and the club is going to take the lead in the idea so far as possible.

"All service departments of the club will be put at the disposal of the stranger here, and he will be given particular information on the details of local traffic laws."

Many local auto owners complain that severe legal penalties have been imposed upon visiting motorists here, who were ignorant of traffic rules. It is to aid in overcoming this particularly that the touring bureau is beginning its reception operations tomorrow.

Less ignorance of the local laws will be shown hereafter by visitors, as each one will be presented with a digest of the laws so that they may learn what they can and cannot do in the way of parking on certain streets at certain times and other things wherein Los Angeles differs from other cities.

O. W. Lewis, in charge of the system at club headquarters, states that visitors need not have heart palpitation when a traffic officer stops them with a little white card—for it will probably be good news instead of bad, unless the visitor has been evading some traffic rule.

TIRE DEPARTMENTS IN FINE TRIM NOW.

All of the tire departments of the Don Lee branches are now on a thoroughly organized basis and each one is prepared to give that high grade of service that has long characterized Cadillac service as associated with Don Lee, according to Warner L. Hamlen, manager of this well-known distributor's tire division.

Hamlen, who recently returned from an extended business trip which included each one of the Don Lee branches, said: "Tire service is just as important to the automobile owner as car service, for a car is no better than its tires. The car service rendered by Don Lee has won fame that extends far beyond the limits of the State, service in the tire departments is to be on a par with that in every particular.

"Employees in the tire departments are imbued with the same spirit that is so noticeable in the car departments, which in any organization, no matter what the nature of the business, goes a long way toward attaining a high degree of efficiency.

LATEST NEWS FROM CANONBALL BAKER.

"Cannonball" Baker and the Templar "Recruiter," the same car that he drove in record time across the continent to Los Angeles, are stirring up things along Eastern highways, is the word that comes from the Templar factory at Cleveland to the Boulevard Motors Corporation, Templar distributor for Southern California and Arizona.

Checked by newspaper men and carrying one as an observer, Baker on October 14 set another intercity record by making the 25.2 miles between Akron and Cleveland in 25 minutes and 25 seconds. The famous driver left the rubber city at 3 a.m. Automobile Club officials of both cities assisted in the checking.

Almost as remarkable as Baker's record is the time made by a stock Templar roadster, with top and windshield, driven by Paul E. Ryan, salesmanager of the Templar Motors Corporation. This car left Akron one-half hour ahead of Baker and reached Cleveland in 31 minutes. It is one of the cars in the "Templar Flying Circus," in which officials of the company have been calling upon Templar dealers throughout Ohio and other Eastern States.

er who has given him carte blanche to annex title to the greatest racing car which can be bought. Art, who is in Los Angeles, declares he will spring a surprise on the regulars when he rolls his new car onto the speedway and starts to give it a baptism of speed.

FALLING IN LINE.

Jerry Wonderlich, noted European pilot, has applied for entry blanks for the Thanksgiving Day race. Wonderlich has never raced in Los Angeles, but has a great record on European tracks. Jules Ellingboe, protege of Louis Chevrolet; Ralph Mulford, "Smiling Ralph" of great popularity with motor-racing enthusiasts; Joe Boyer, millionaire sportsman, who was co-star on the American team with "Little Jimmy" Murphy when the Los Angeles lad won the great French grand prix race in July; Dario Rest and Nick Zwick, the Norwegian whirlwind, are all corresponding with the Speedway Association officials looking towards filing their entry.

"Howdy" Wilcox, Indianapolis race winner in 1919, piloting a Peugeot, and well known on the Coast, is considered a sure starter.

ANNOUNCE PLANS FOR CANADIAN FACTORIES.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Plans for financing the new Durant Motor Car Company of Canada, Ltd., are announced. Its authorized capital will be $2,000,000, of which $1,500,000 in stock is to be issued.

Of the $1,500,000 in stock W. C. Durant and associates have subscribed for half. The other half will be offered to the public.

The plant for assembling and building Durant cars has been purchased at Leaside, near Toronto, and alterations and installation of equipment are being rushed to completion.

QUALITY INCREASES AS PRICE TUMBLES.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Oct. 29.—Reductions of $235 on Hupmobile open cars and $100 on inclosed models were announced this week by the Hupp Motor Car corporation.

"This action brings the present model of the Hupmobile back to the price at which it was introduced," said President Charles D. Hastings. "That was four years ago. We have been striving for the past year or more to bring our prices back to its original figure. That we have now succeeded in accomplishing in spite of the fact that many improvements have been made in engineering design and construction and numerous additions in the way of equipment."

HAYNES MOTOR CARS DISPLAYED IN MEXICO.

The new 1922 Haynes 55 models are the only American automobiles on exhibition at the Commercial Exposition now in progress at Mexico City, Mex., according to advices received by E. W. Headington, export manager of The Haynes Automobile Company.

The Commercial Exposition, which is declared to be one of the most elaborate in the history of Mexico, is being held in connection with the Centennial Feasts. One of the features of the exposition is the raffling off of a Haynes 55 touring car. Every visitor to the exposition receives a number and the person holding the winning number will receive the Haynes car.

NASH
MOTOR CARS

Lead the world in motor car value, presenting, as they do, the most striking contrast of high quality and low price that the industry has ever known.

A big, handsome, roomy car of graceful lines, amply powered and slung on unusually long semi-elliptic springs, the Nash was designed and built as the quality leader among high-grade cars.

Drive a Nash today, either a "Four" or a "Six"—test its speed on some smooth stretch of road, try its power and acceleration on some stiff hill, then drive it through traffic and observe how smoothly it throttles down.

NONSKID TIRES ARE ACCIDENT INSURANCE.

"There are three ways to prevent skidding," says F. H. Osler of the Osler-Racine Rubber Company.

"One way is to drive slowly, another to equip your tires with chains, third use a good nonskid tire. The first way suggested is too slow for most motorists and the second is too much trouble. This leaves the third, which is the logical means of preventing skidding.

"The Racine engineers have developed this last means of skid-prevention to a high degree of perfection. They have constructed a very broad, flat tread which is deeply grooved and are using the same old carcass which proved so satisfactory in obtaining almost unbelievable mileage.

"It has been proved that with ordinary care in driving, this latest product of the Racine factory, the new multimile Racine cord tire with the black tread will rarely, if ever, skid.

"The deeply grooved tread grips the road firmly at all times, and when driving over wet or oily paveways, the triangle shaped tread creates a suction with the wet surface of the road, which holds the tire tight to the road at all times and prevents side swerving or straight ahead skidding."

THE NEW 1922 SEVEN PASSENGER
HAYNES 75
SEDAN

THOUGH THIS SUPERB CAR is presented as a distinctly 1922 offering, the advance which it embodies belongs more truly to another era than another year. The subdued elegance and inviting comfort of its interior fittings, the dominant dignity of its exterior beauty—while noteworthy and most appealing in themselves—are still not so significant as that supreme achievement of Haynes engineers and designers, the new, big, more powerful Haynes 75 motor. There is a delight hitherto unrealized in the flexibility, the subtle, gliding power, the smooth, swift, acceleration with which this motor responds to your mood and whim. Because of it, the new 1922 Haynes 75 received the immediate seal of public approval and endorsement. With its new Haynes fuelizing system, thermostatic engine heat control and numerous other exclusive Haynes refinements of designing excellence, this most recent motor creation sets the new 1922 Haynes 75 Sedan as a car apart—a crystallization of true Haynes character—the utmost in luxury, utility and economy at the exceptional price of $3895 delivered here. The new 1922 Haynes 75 is available in the following models: Seven-passenger Touring car at $2880, the four-passenger Tourister at $2880, the two-passenger Special Speedster at $3095, the five-passenger Brougham at $3595, the seven-passenger Sedan and Suburban at $3895, each price remarkably low.

Objects to Being Tipped for Service.

"Goggone it," says one of the battery testers at the Western Auto Electric Corporation. "I wish people would stop trying to tip me for testing their batteries. I should think that motorists around Los Angeles would know by this time that we make no charges for testing and filling any make of battery. Neither do we accept gratuities.

"Of course, this is a Willard service station, but we test any make of battery, gladly, and just because a motorist has some other make of battery in his car is no reason why we should make him pay for a little act of courtesy.

"Some day these motorists who haven't been getting results from their batteries are going to use Willard threaeded rubber insulated storage batteries, and then their battery troubles will be over.

"I know, because I see all kinds going through the shop for repairs and I want to tell you that if we had to depend on Willard repairs for a living, we'd starve.

"You know most battery troubles originate in the insulation, but we are so sure of the long life of Willard threaded rubber insulation that we replace it without charge if it wears out before the plates. But we seldom have to replace Willard threaded rubber insulation except in cases of neglect.

"That's probably the reason why the Willard threaded rubber insulated battery is standard equipment on 185 makes of cars and trucks."

Dodge Gets Another Taste of Big Guns.

During the war Dodge cars were almost constantly within sound of the big guns, but only last week a brand new Dodge sedan heard the violent cannonade, but in peace-time settings. The car belonged to Chaplain Mathews of Fort MacArthur and was conspicuously present during target practice at the fort last week. Above, the crew of one of the big guns clustered around the chaplain's new car, and, below, a huge 14-inch beauty kicking a ton of steel smack through a target seven miles out in the Pacific.

HEARS GUNS ROAR AGAIN.

A Dodge Brothers motor car stood once more within sight and sound of big guns, but instead of the usual familiar olive drab Army car this time it was a lustrous Dodge sedan which was recently purchased by Chaplain Mathews, who acted as host to F. G. Warren, sales manager for the Albertson Motor Company, on the occasion of the annual target practice with the big fourteen-inch guns at the fort.

Bresting the slight rise which bid from view the concrete emplacement upon which the huge guns are mounted, the Dodge Brothers party were fascinated by the precise and efficient manner in which the gun crews, under command of Capt. W. I. Stewart, manipulated these terrible engines of destruction.

"It was a magnificent sight," said Mr. Warren, "to see this huge gun rise ponderously but nevertheless swiftly to a firing position, and then with a flash and a roar that seemed to crack open the universe, send its projectile weighing nearly a ton whistling through the air on its way to the target. And then far out in the channel a feathery plume of spray would rise high in the air, and then another, and another as the shell struck the target and ricocheted off the surface of the water. Seven shots were fired, and it was announced by the battery commander that four of these seven were direct hits, a very high percentage which attests to the efficient manner in which our coasts are guarded.

"To an Army man especially," said Chaplain Mathews, "a Dodge car means dependability and economy, but my new Dodge sedan has exceeded every anticipation. Notwithstanding the fact that I have had my sedan only a short time, I have had to make several forced trips, one of these being to Santa Barbara under conditions which made it imperative to travel fast. The motor purred along at forty like a veteran. This trip, which would have been rather unpleasant in an open car on account of the rain and the biting air, proved conclusively both to myself and Mrs. Mathews that our choice of a Dodge Brothers sedan was not only fortunate but timely."

Maxwell Shows Motor Economy on Long Jaunt.

One more notable economy record was chalked up to the credit of the Maxwell last week, according to George Pearson, manager of sales for the Union Motors, Inc., Maxwell distributors.

A Maxwell motor car piloted by Otto Stock of San Diego was driver from that city to Ensenada, Lower California, and return, a total distance of 189.9 miles, and the gasoline average for the trip over tortuous and well-nigh impossible roads was eighteen miles to the gallon. Only two quarts of water was added on the trip and at the conclusion of the journey the oil gauge still registered full, although none had been put in after the start.

The figures of this run were officially checked by newspaper reporters and officials of the Southern California Automobile Club.

What made the trip really remarkable, according to Pearson, was the condition of the roads that it was necessary to negotiate on the way through Lower California. The car was obliged to run over rutted and rocky roads, the worst possible of unimproved country highways, and still came through the test with a remarkable record.

On the return trip the Maxwell came over the new coast highway, still under construction, and some of the detours, it is stated, were veritable mountainside goat paths, where second gear had to be used. It is further said that the car used on the trip was practically a new one, having gone only about 300 miles, and was scarcely broken in enough to attain its most economical efficiency.

Easy to Keep Canary Birds Tamed Today.

"Much of the creaking and rattling, which is a source of constant annoyance to motorists could be eliminated by giving a few moment's attention to the doors of the car," declares E. E. Caister, manager of sales for the Standard Steel Automotive Products Company, distributors of the Standard eight.

"The conventional body has at least two rubber bumpers for each door, these being designed to keep the doors tight. But in time these bumpers become flattened down or worn," said Caister. "By wedging in a little backing in the form of a sliver of wood or a piece of tin, however, these bumpers can be restored to their full efficiency—and the door rattles will vanish.

"While this is being done," continued Caister, "a few drops of oil on the door locks will frequently cause many a baffling squeak to disappear. Rattles, or even knocks, are often traceable to tools or other loose articles in the door pockets. If things must be carried in the pockets, be sure to pack them in tight.

"A variety of rattling noises which is most commonly heard in the rear of cars, is invariably due to side play between the emergency brake levers and the brake cam shaft supports which pass through metal brake discs. These discs amplify the sounds so that the noise appears serious, and at least annoying. In order to take up this wear, it is necessary to move the brake levers over close to the brake supports of the discs, but in order to do this, the wheels must be removed, so that the cam shafts may be held while the levers are pushed over. But if the car owner does not wish to go to this expense, it is only necessary to wind string around the opening between the levers and the supports. These impromtu washers of string will prevent each lever from making a noise when the cam slides sideways."

SPRINGS RECEIVE THE MOST NEGLECT.

"It is commonly known that the springs are about the most neglected part of the average car," declares C. A. Roesch, manager of the California Lubricator Company distributors of the Alemite system, "but few car owners ever think of giving any attention to the spring shackles. The consequence is they are forever wondering from where the queer chassis noises emanate.

"If the shackles are allowed to become loose the sideplay, while the drive is being carried through the springs, will cause a heavy rattling noise or even a knock, which will sound so serious as to tempt the car owner to spend money uselessly in engaging some inexperienced mechanic to go on a wild goose chase to locate the trouble."

GOOD SHAPE.

I learned back there the Nash Company in excellent condition There is not a cent of against it except for and whenever there funds to take care of project like the purchase plant, a foundry or anything of that order it is never necessary to borrow the money.

At Milwaukee, where the four-cylinder factory is located, I found the plant working at full capacity. Already work has been commenced on additional buildings with a view to increasing capacity very largely, and from the way orders have been coming in I doubt whether even the enlarged plant will be sufficient to meet the demand. At Kenosha I also found everything moving along in fine shape. At Kenosha I attended a wonderful meeting of Nash distributors from all over the United States, and a more enthusiastic gathering it has never before been my privilege of being a party to. Without exception they were clamoring for Fours and still more Fours. What few they had been shipped previously had created a huge market for more and I imagine the sales and shipping departments will have a difficult job for some time keeping them satisfied.

ENTHUSIASM.

I also visited the LaFayette Motors plant at Mars Hill, Indianapolis, and there I found the same spirit of enthusiasm that pervaded those at Milwaukee and Kenosha. The factory is not yet up to capacity production, but is rapidly approaching that point. At present LaFayette is sold ahead for from three to four months.

During August I visited the deer and moose country of New Brunswick with Mr. Nash. We got a moose and a deer, each with a fine set of horns. The hunting lodge at which we stayed was a wonderful place, and I never saw so much game in all my life as we saw during the trip. At Fredericton, where we left the railroad for Doaktown in Central New Brunswick, the heart of the game region, we found a Nash which already had been driven 35,000 miles and was then in the hands of its third owner. We hired this car to take us to the hunting country and back—it was like a touch of home away off up there.

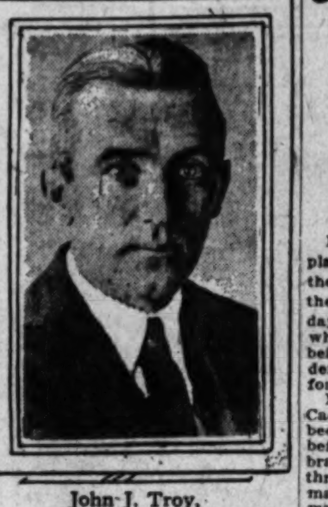
The hunting was somewhat difficult owing to the absence of snow on the ground, but we enjoyed every minute of our stay.

On the way back we came by way of Quebec, Montreal, Toronto and Chicago.

How She Does It.

"And does your wife now buy two hats at a time?"

"Yes. Owing to the heat wave, what she saves in clothes she spends in hats!"—Die Muskete, Vienna.



John J. Troy,
President of the Troy Motor Sales Company of this city, who has just returned from an extended visit throughout the East. Mr. Troy spent many weeks in the various automobile manufacturing centers and brought back some interesting information concerning the industry in general.

No Reason to Fear a Jaunt Cross Country

Templar owners from Eastern points who have registered their arrival in Los Angeles and nearby points at the Boulevard Motors Corporation, Templar distributors for Southern California and Arizona, say there is no occasion for any ordinary driver to fear the transcontinental trip.

"There is one thing certain, there is no need for anyone to be lonesome on the Westward drive, for there are so many daily headed in the same direction," one Templar owner told Leland S. Foulke, president of the concern. "We passed dozens of cars bound for Los Angeles or some point in this part of California. We came over the Arrowhead trail and the only trouble we experienced was in Missouri between St. Louis and Kansas City, where we were mired in deep mud because of heavy rains."

The wonderful spring suspension of the Templar makes it an easy car for transcontinental traveling, while the car's power and economy are qualities that always come in for praise. One owner suffered a broken rear spring, but he declared this was his own fault, having been due to hitting a bad chuck hole at too fast a pace in the dark.

"Owners we have talked to since they got here report an average on gasoline of twenty to twenty-seven and even thirty miles to the gallon for the major part of the cross-country jaunt," said Foulke.

CADDILAC SALESMEN HUSTLING.

Nothing but Optimism in the Ranks of Local Force at Present Time.

Los Angeles generally has no place reserved for the pessimist, or the business calamity howler, but the real home of the optimist these days is the Don Lee establishment where the full crew of salesmen is being kept on the jump making demonstrations and taking orders for the new type 61 Cadillac.

Never before in the history of the Cadillac in California has business been as good as it is today. Never before have the Don Lee retail branches and the Cadillac dealers throughout the territory had so many orders on their books or demanded cars in such number as at the present time.

"We realize," said Manager J. E. Brown. "That this is a tribute to the Cadillac and especially to the first offering from the new Cadillac factory. Production on the type 59 model was in progress for several months in the new $7,000,000 plant in Detroit, but the "61" is the special pride of this plant as it is the first model born and produced in the new works.

"The Cadillac Motor Car Company has shipped one-tenth of its entire production to California during the past two months, and Don Lee is putting forth every effort to have this schedule of shipments maintained. California needs cars of all types and judging from the present demand the number of Cadillacs sold in California this season will ge governed entirely by the number Don Lee is able to get from the factory."

STEPHENS TIRE IS SLASHED IN PRICE.

AND AT THAT NEW TUBES ARE NOW GOING WITH ALL NEW CASINGS.

Los Angeles motorists, attracted by the already high standard of values offered, have increased their patronage of the Stephens Tire Stores Company to such an extent that that firm has been enabled to announce a further substantial reduction in the price of Stephens tires.

This announcement has been made in addition to the one providing for giving away a Stephens tube free with every purchase of a Stephens regular casing, according to Gordon Williams, manager of the local factory branch. The extremely low price of $8.15 is now quoted for the smallest standard size automobile tire being manufactured by the Stephens people.

"This latest price reduction," says Mr. Williams, "is the result of cooperation. Our factory-to-user method of distribution made possible by our chain-store organization has enabled the tire buyer to secure better values at less cost."

CAN GIVE TIPS ON LONG TOURS.

F. E. Scott Motored Across Country Eight Times.

Hasn't Missed Much in Way of Scenic Interest.

Reo Speed Wagon Fills Bill on Latest Journey.

If you want to learn something about transcontinental touring, consult F. E. Scott of Gardner, Mo.

Four times have Scott and his family traveled back and forth from Maine to California, each time by a different route. His fourth trip found him headed for Pasadena. His touring has taken him to all the "big league" scenic sights in the United States, over almost every conceivable kind of road. And still he says there is nothing like cross-country automobile touring for recreation and building up one's health.

JOINS REO CLAN.

Incidentally, Scott is another who has joined the Reo speed wagon clan. This time he used his light truck instead of his touring car, with the result, he said, of wondering why he hadn't thought of trying it before.

Leaving Gardner on August 15 with four companions and his Reo loaded with tents, cots and cooking utensils, Scott started for the Coast. Scott's reasons for traveling via a Reo speed wagon are:

Never a cent for repairs. No loss of time, with the consequent disagreeable interruptions of the journey. No tire trouble, with the exception of four punctures. Room and power enough to carry complete equipment so that you can tour as you want to in real comfort without regard to hotels and eating places. No road condition which cannot be overcome without undue strain on the vehicle. Freedom from mechanical trouble, which all touring cars are subject to as a result of the abnormal stress of driving where you want to, regardless of roads.

IN REAL COMFORT.

"If you want to travel in real comfort, use a speed wagon," Scott stated. "There are three factors which rule in favor of this type of transport: Economy, dependability and comfort."

"Having traveled over 150,000 miles by motor car, I have a fairly accurate idea of what it costs to operate a touring car on a transcontinental tour.

"The speed wagon's tire equipment is built to withstand hard use and therefore you don't have to worry about tire trouble and the accidents that are due, directly and indirectly, to this cause.

"As to comfort, if you like to enjoy the freedom of the open country, stop where fancy or night suggests, and still be prepared to live comfortably, then a machine like the speed wagon is the only kind to use."

SPEED UNDER LOAD PRESENTS PROBLEMS.

PRODUCERS OF RAPID TRANSIT MODEL HAVE OVERCOME DIFFICULTIES.

Speed is what the buyer of a light quick delivery truck demands, according to A. E. Neff, manager of the Commercial Motor Company.

"High speed under load presents the greatest problem in automotive engineering," says Neff. "And it was a tireless task for the Republic factory to overcome all the many obstacles that strew the path toward the successful building of such a truck.

"Endless tests were made to determine the reliability and stamina of the various units that were to be used in the production of the 'Rapid Transit,' which is the Republic's three-quarter-ton delivery truck. By a careful elimination of such parts and units as would not meet the tests, the engineers finally arrived at a conclusion and the present successful model is the result.

"The buyers of Rapid Transit models have not been asked to do the experimenting for the factory. This was all done before the first truck ever left the factory, and the immediate approval by the public of this model is proof of the thoroughness of the factory in building a tried and tested vehicle."

TRUCK TIRES SET A NEW HIGH MARK.

OLDSMOBILE COMMERCIAL WAGON GETS THIRTY THOUSAND MILES ON SET.

What is believed to be a record for pneumatic truck tires has just been established by an Oldsmobile economy truck, in Long Beach. This truck, which is owned by the American-avenue Hardware Company of that city, makes two round trips between Los Angeles and Long Beach every day. Since the truck was purchased over a year ago it has been driven 30,000 miles on the original set of 35x5 Goodyear cord tires with which the Oldsmobile economy Truck comes equipped from the factory.

In speaking of the remarkable tire mileage obtained, L. M. Beck, driver for the American-avenue Hardware Company, attributed the splendid mileage to nothing more unusual than keeping the tires properly inflated. He also commented on the fact that the Oldsmobile economy truck is equipped with an oversize pneumatic tire as standard equipment, making it possible to carry larger loads and drive faster without injuring the tires.

The J. V. Baldwin Motor Company, distributor for Oldsmobile economy trucks has on file the performance of many cord tires which have gone over 20,000 miles on Oldsmobile trucks before being discarded, but, according to Andrew Baldwin, manager, 30,000 miles establishes a new mark.

"SILENT ROOM" IS FINAL MOTOR TEST.

An innovation in testing motors has been developed in the Briscoe factories at Jackson. It is the silent room test. Into this room, designed much after the manner of the chambers used in phonograph factories for the creation of records, absolutely protected against outside sounds, the motors are brought for a special test. This silent room test is in addition to test on block and on the road. There is no theoretical testing in the Briscoe factories. It is all actual and practical.

Roadability

WHEN you take your first ride in a Franklin, watch both the road and the speedometer. Otherwise you may not realize either the roughness of the road or the speed of the car—there is so little vibration.

The Franklin doesn't "fight" the road. Its light weight and flexible construction endow it with resilience, "give," life. That means distance as well as comfort in a day's run; slow depreciation as well as long tire life during your ownership.

Other reasons why you will like the Franklin are the small amount of routine care it requires, its ease of handling, and its unequaled economy:

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation

The Thing That Sells Motor Cars Today and Keeps Them Sold Is PERFORMANCE
Chandler Quality and Performance for $2085 Here

HE truth about Chandler performance is that which comes from the experience of owners are driving their third, fourth and fifth Chandlers.

Mr. J. H. Grunze, 5401 8th Ave., says most the rent cars running up Pike's Peak are Chandlers and that this summer he made fifty-(57) trips over that famous course without or a single mishap.

Mr. T. D. Armstrong owns a 1916 Chandler has run 355,000 miles. He just finished a from Kansas to California with his car and it's good for 300,000 more miles.

The above cut shows Chandler Power—the load represents 60,000 pounds, the trailer weighs 6 tons, the marine engine cylinder block tips the beam at 24 tons, yet Chandler motor power and quality construction made light of the tremendous overload.

Just think what a pull like this means to frame, axle and motor, yet Chandler power and quality pulled this great weight on high gear at 15 miles per hour.

Our records are full of startling Chandler achievements.

Stephens Cord Tires
At These Lower Prices
Easily Make Them
The Greatest Tire Value in America
The Guarantee Is 10,000 Miles

Stephens Cords are oversize and overweight. You get a super value in every tire, both in size and weight, to say nothing of the price, which is "Factory-Direct-to-You" and speaks for itself. Only by our "factory-to-user" policy of eliminating middle profits are we able to offer such high grade guaranteed tires at such low prices.

STEPHEN'S CORD

The Tread design of Stephens Cords would add to any car. The road-gripping qualities are apparent at a glance. The pure black rubber is tough and resilient. We strongly recommend these excellent tires as representing the utmost in value.

The guarantee is unusually high and knowing that good tires are not necessarily high priced tires feel that you will make no mistake in buying these high quality casings.

PACKARD IS IN NEW FIELD NOW.

Reduction in Single Six of Surprising Interest.

Car is in Lowest Price Plane of Its History.

Greatly Increased Production is Looked For.

"A price reduction which is based on the lower manufacturing costs which attend production in volume is a matter of great significance these days," declared Earle C. Anthony last week. "Most cuts in the prices of automobiles that have taken place recently have been mere readjustments due to the increasing purchase value of the dollar, but the surprising reduction announced by the Packard factory last week in the price of the single six has a deeper significance, for it marked the entrance of that great corporation, with its $62,000,000 plant into a price field and a production that it had never before invaded."

Anthony has represented the Packard line in California for more than sixteen years, and he regards this recent move of the Packard Company as one of the most important in its history.

"Last Sundays announcement," continued Anthony, "was really the culminating feature of six years of effort on the part of the Packard factory. Six years ago they started to build a six-cylinder car which would completely uphold Packard standards of quality and could be marketed in greater volume and at a lesser price than Packard had ever before attempted. Five years later, or just a year ago, they announced the single six. Though they had tested it with characteristic Packard thoroughness and had spent five years on its making, they were not content to seek full production at once. They wanted the test of actual service in owner's hands. This the car has had today.

"A year in the hands of thousands of owners has proved beyond question the soundness of single six design, and the popularity of the car with owners. With the equipment furnished by the $10,000,000 bond issue floated by Packard last spring, the production of single six cars will immediately be materially increased, and from the response which we have already had, we know that increased production will be required to meet the demand for the single six at its new price, which is the lowest figure at which a Packard product ever sold."

RILLITO BRIDGE IN EXCELLENT SHAPE NOW

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) Oct. 29. — The Rillito bridge, near Tucson, badly washed by summer floods, has been replaced at $9000 cost, divided between the State and county. The bridge is an essential link on the road over which Tucson has connection with Mammoth or Florence.

PIERCE-ARROW PLANT RUNNING FULL TIME.

PRODUCTION AND SALES ARE RAPIDLY APPROACHING NORMAL.

Production and sales activities of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company of Buffalo, N. Y., which have been accelerating gradually during the last three months, have reached a schedule which is rapidly approaching normal. As a result, the factory is running full time with a force of 4230 workers. There is every prospect, according to company officials, that this force will be maintained, if not increased, during the next six months.

"In so far as the automobile industry reflects general conditions throughout the country, our situation indicates a decided improvement in business," said Col. Charles Clifton, chairman of the board of directors of the company.

"Analyzing the business of the entire automobile industry, we find that we are getting more than our proportionate share. The unfilled orders we have on hand will keep the plant operating at its regular ouput until December 1.

"These orders are not the result of a sudden or freakish flare-up of business. They represent a healthy, day-by-day increase which shows no sign of letting up. Indeed, we are confident that Jan. 1, 1922, will find the company with sufficient orders to operate from sixty to ninety days ahead, which is the basis on which we plan in normal times."

Circus Performers Are Strong for the Scripps-Booth.

Here's a batch of high-powered clowns from the circus who hesitated in Los Angeles for three days last week and thoroughly enjoyed themselves motoring around Southern California in between shows. In the big parade Monday Scripps-Booth cars played a prominent part and even under the big tent itself one of these cars was enlisted to carry "Poodles" Hanaford, one of the highest paid trick riders in captivity, around the arena at the beginning of each show.

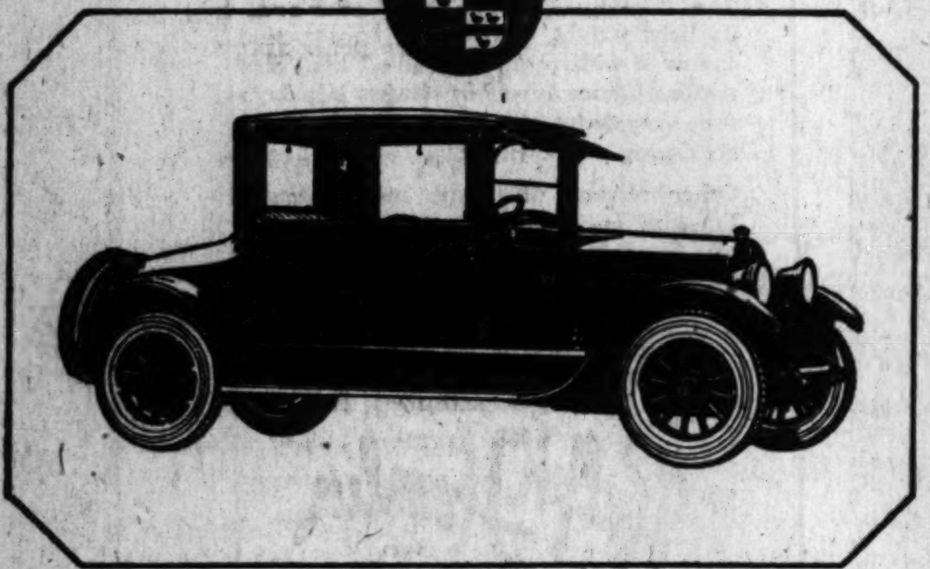
LEADS CIRCUS PA

In the circus parades and during the performances last week Scripps-Booth cars, distributed in Southern California and Arizona by the Thomason Motor Car Company, were very much in evidence. In the parades, a Scripps-Booth was in the lead while several others followed in which prominent performers rode.

During the performances, both afternoon and evening, a car of the same make was the cynosure of all eyes as it circled the arena with members of the celebrated Hannaford family, bareback performers. "Poodles" Hannaford, declared to be the highest paid clown trick rider in captivity, has used a Scripps-Booth car in his performance at practically every stop of any importance during the long season just drawn to a close.

"While 'Poodles' makes his big money—I understand he is paid $1800 weekly for his act — by his ridiculous and at the same time dare-devil stunts with two horses, he is none the less fully appreciative of the value of the automobile as a medium of transportation and also a means for healthy enjoyment," said L. A. Hannon, manager of the Thomason Motor Car Company. "Because he is traveling practically all of the time, the use of a car of his own is denied him, and perhaps for this reason more than any other, he is keenly interested in the automobile.

"Nevertheless, he has a surprisingly intimate knowledge of automobiles in general and the Scripps-Booth in particular, and he avers that when the first opportunity of-



Cadillac Victoria Type 61

In this city, as everywhere, the Victoria has always been one of the most admired and popular of the Cadillac closed car group.

Now its desirability is bound to be enhanced by the new elements of beauty which are instantly recognized in this Type 61 Victoria.

It has, of course, the substantial and dignified presence which has singled it out in the past; but its added dash and smartness confer a distinction even more pleasing.

As in all models of the Type 61, the artistic and convenient arrangement of the instrument board, windshield and ventilator improvements, the unique simplicity and grace of the new steering wheel and controls, the completeness of its fittings, will delight every experienced motorist.

Fine engineering has succeeded in lowering the center of gravity without decreasing road clearance, and has wrought a surprising improvement in the smoothness of travel.

It is our judgment that the Type 61 thus accomplishes the greatest advance yet recorded in overcoming road discomfort and insuring riding ease.

—the only perfected accurate gasoline measure and filling device on the market. It is always accurate. It cannot vary. The big, clear glass reservoir, mounted in plain view, measures exactly 10 gallons of gasoline—no more, no less. You can see it right there before you, and when you drive in and ask for "5" you can watch it flow into your tank. The level of the gasoline drops as the liquid flows out and the graduations are marked by arrows on the inside of the reservoir. You can instantly tell that you get your full "5".

When you say "Fill 'er up"—the operator stands at your tank, opens the valve and when the tank is full he closes the valve and stops the flow. There is never any cause for overflowing—you save the waste and the fire hazard is eliminated. Then you look at the reservoir and see just how much gasoline went into your tank. PHOENIX (Ariz.) Oct. 29.—From Prescott comes word that the first work of the new Yavapai county highway commission will be to push through the Black Canyon road, from Prescott southward, through Mayer, to the Maricopa county line near Canon, on the Agua Fria River. From that point to Phoenix the work will have to be taken up by Maricopa county. Three routes are projected between Prescott and Phoenix, the others being via Vickenburg and over the mountains, south from Senator. The last is the shortest and most scenic, but most expensive. The Black Canyon road is the one now most used. It is 105 miles long. The Prescott terminal is to be changed so that the city is entered over the hills, instead of up Granite Creek.

Plans are being made at Superior for a great celebration at the time of completion of the Superior-Miami highway, which is to give the shortest route between Phoenix and Globe, and which is to be a material part of the central highway through Arizona, between Phoenix and El Paso. There is expectation that the date will be January 1. There remains much heavy work, but over a short distance. The total cost will exceed $500,000, half the sum coming from the Federal government.

TRYING TO SELL BONDS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

YUMA (Ariz.) Oct. 29. — The county supervisors again have called for bids for $120,000 highway bonds, approved by the taxpayers three years ago, but still unsold. The best bid received heretofore has been only 92. If a sale can be made, the money will be spent on a highway to the eastward, south of the Gila, and on a connection with the northern part of the county.

VISIT DATE FESTIVAL.

Coachella Valley, one of the choice garden spots of Southern California, whose soil has been found to be well adapted to date-raising, has been the objective point for a vast number of local motorists during the past week, during the first annual date festival at Indio.

Among the many motorists who visited this interesting and unusual exhibit of America's first celebration of the discovery that dates can be grown within a stone's throw of Los Angeles, were George Goodrum and F. A. Petrie, president and vice-president, respectively, of the Mission Motor Company, Dort distributors for Southern California.

The officers of the Mission Motor Company, accompanied by their wives made the run to Indio, where the date festival was being held, in one of the new and improved Dort sedans, in four and one-half hours' running time, making one stop at Palm Springs.

On their return, both Mr. Goodrum and Mr. Petrie talked in very glowing terms about the performance of the new and improved Dort over the varied road conditions which ranged from the smooth, paved highways, which have made Southern California famous the world over, to some exceptionally rough desert roads after passing through Beaumont.

OWEN BIRD TO HANDLE PUBLICITY.

Is Appointed Director of Advertising for the W. P. Herbert Company.

In line with a policy of more aggressive presentation of the Cleveland and Chandler lines of automobiles, for which his firm is Southern California distributor, W. P. Herbert, president of the W. P. Herbert Company, has announced the appointment of Owen R. Bird as director of advertising and exploitation.

In the acquisition of O. R. Bird, the Herbert forces have obtained the services of a man with extensive and successful experience in the field of advertising, sales and publicity, for he has been associated with the newspaper and automobile trades for many years. As a writer, department editor, advertising writer and also as sales executive of one of the leading Los Angeles motor-car firms, Bird gained a fund of experience and knowledge of the automobile business that ideally fits him for his important task with the big Herbert organization.

Peerless Sedan and Trailer on Strenuous Tour

Completing a double transcontinental motor trip that started July 5, from Cliffside, N. J., on the Hudson Palisades, and which had Los Angeles as its western terminal, Maj. S. Wood McClave, his wife, two daughters and a son, returned to their home October 1 without the least untoward incident, according to a letter received from him by Smith Brothers, Peerless distributors for Southern California.

Riding in a Peerless sedan and hauling a trailer loaded with better than 1000 pounds of camp equipment and baggage, the party arrived in Los Angeles after having visited five national parks, and without suffering any inconvenience of any kind so McClave told Stanley W. Smith of Smith Brothers. Two weeks were passed in this city and touring Southern California.

The return trip, so the writer states, was made over the Santa Fe trail and six weeks were consumed in making it. Of this, the total driving time was twenty-two days. Considerable time was passed in visiting Colorado points. The Grand Canyon and Rocky Mountain National Park in Colorado were visited, thus making seven covered on the long tour and including every one of any prominence.

KEEP AN EYE OPEN FOR CUTS IN TIRES.

It is advisable to keep a sharp watch for breaks and cuts in the surface of tires. A few minutes spent in examining casings will prove a profitable investment of time to the car owner. Cuts seemingly superficial may actually penetrate one or more layers of fabric, thus weakening the entire structure. A blowout is the result if such a cut is neglected. A small cut, if not repaired, permits sand and moisture to work in between the rubber tread and the carcass and causes tread separation. If this condition develops a tire soon goes to pieces.

A late Savage tire service bulletin contains this information and further states that, when once the inner fabric is disrupted or cut and it is not immediately repaired properly, the damage is apt to increase and before long what was at first but seemingly a superficial cut becomes an irreparable injury.

Again the Buick has won the privilege of selecting first choice of space at the New York and Chicago National Automobile shows, which means that the Buick, with the exception of Ford, has done the greatest volume of business during the year preceding the date of the shows (New York, Jan. 7 to 13, 1922.)

In Los Angeles, again excepting the Ford, no other automobile approaches the total number of Buicks in daily use. And for years Buick has been unable to make immediate deliveries on all models.

The new 1922 Buick—the greatest Buick ever built—has the famous Buick valve-in-head motor, velvet disc clutch, patented "one-finger" gear shift, just one universal joint automatically oiled, tortion drive, not through the springs, and the Buick patented full floating ball-bearing rear axle. The Delco electrical system, good enough to use on the Liberty motor; Exide battery, good enough to use in Uncle Sam's submarines; Alemite lubricating system, cord tires and a host of last-word equipment that you should have NOW.

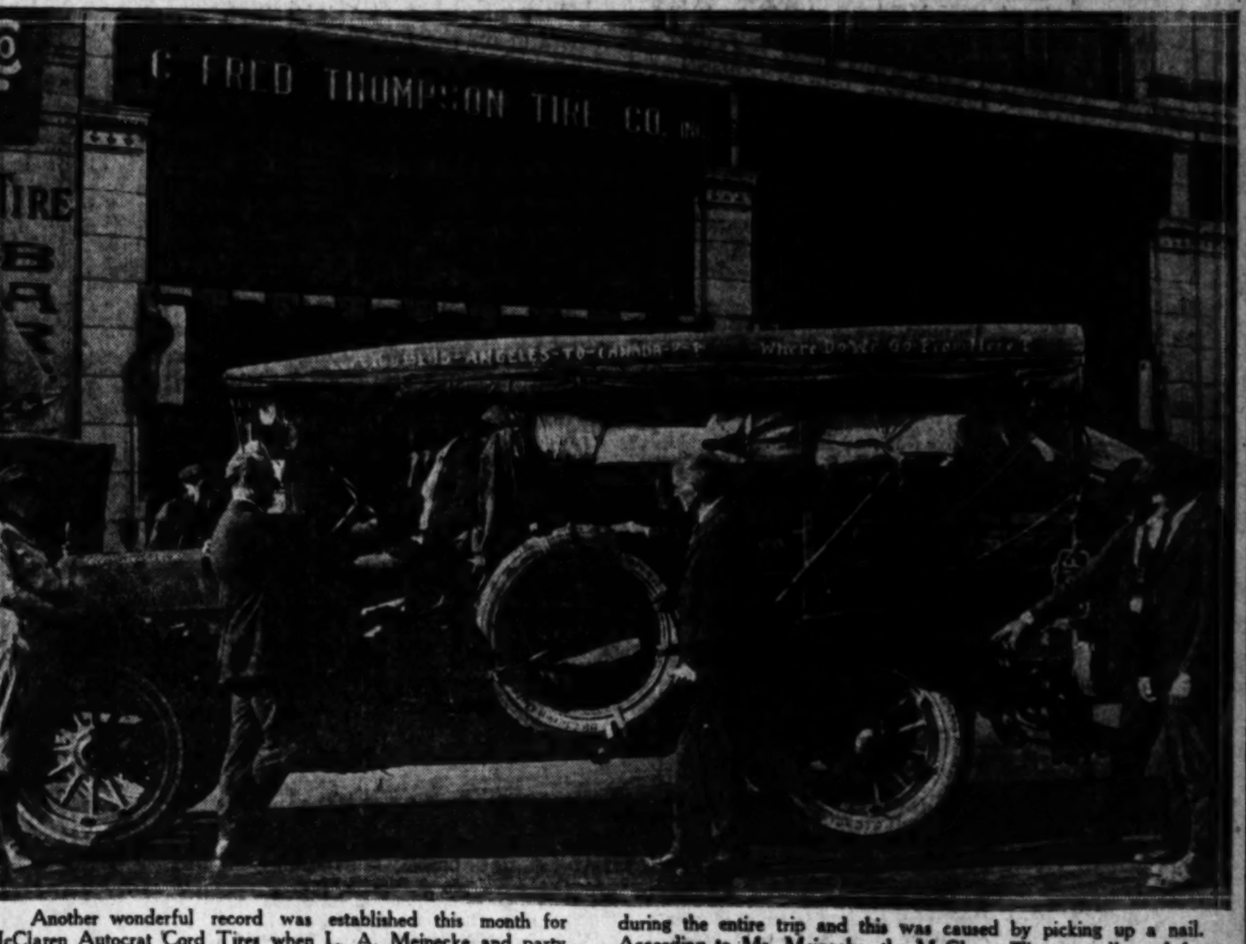
McCLAREN TIRES DELIVER REMARKABLE MILEAGE IN GRUELLING TRIP



C. FRED THOMPSON TIRE CO. INC
TIRE

Another wonderful record was established this month for McClaren Autocrat Cord Tires when L. A. Meinecke and party completed an eight months' trip through Northern California, Washington, Oregon, Canada and back by way of Montana, Seattle to Los Angeles. The car used was at all times heavily overloaded and towed a trailer which carried 2300 pounds of equipment. The complete load weighed 10,140 pounds.

Terrible roads were encountered at frequent intervals and at times the party had to remove large boulders from the road before the car could go forward. Despite the terrible road conditions only one McClaren Autocrat Cord Tire was removed from the wheel during the entire trip and this was caused by picking up a nail. According to Mr. Meinecke, the McClaren Tires are all good for 10,000 miles more.

This is only one of the numerous mileage records that McClaren Tires are continually making. Motorists who are constantly making hard trips report that they are getting double the mileage from McClaren Autocrat Cords they ever received from other tires.

That is possibly the reason so many stage lines are equipping their busses with McClaren Autocrat Cords.

Before you purchase your next tire, let us show you personal testimonies what mileage McClaren users are obtaining on similar runs that you make. You will be agreeably surprised.

HUPP DROP IS BIG SURPRISE.

"Price Reduction Came From a Clear Sky," Says Greer.

Famous Car is Now Down to a Prewar Level.

Floods of Orders Received Here Following Slash.

The announcement made public last Wedensday of the big slash in price of the popular Humobile created no little stir along the row. That the big drop struck a very popular chord as far as the public is concerned has been evidenced by the flood of orders that resulted, both from individual purchasers and dealers.

"We had no intimation that any further drop in the Hupmobile was anticipated, and the information that reached us by telegram was as much a surprise to ourselves as to the public," said P. H. Greer of the Greer-Robbins Company, Hupmobile distributors for California, Arizona and Nevada. "Factory prices are now reduced to the same figure as were established on the model R, when it was first announced, November, 1917. It should further be borne in mind that since that time hundreds of dollars' worth of equipment and improvements have been added."

The prices of several models now stand as follows: Touring car and roadster, $1465; coupe, $2360, and sedan, $2420. Cord tires are now standard equipment on all models. The total drop on the open job is $510, on the coupe $715 and on the sedan $730. Commenting on the big slash, Billy Williams, retail Hupmobile sales manager, said:

"A prospective Hup purchaser called us up when the news was made public and said, 'That makes the Hupmobile the greatest automobile buy on the market today, bar none,' and he promptly placed his order. When you consider that numerous improvements and new equipment have been added to the car and that it now sells at the same figure that it did when the model R first came out four years ago, you have got to agree with him if you know automobile values."

LIBERTY DEALERS' FAMILY GROWING.

The Liberty Motor Car Company for the second time within a month reports a substantial gain in the number of its dealer connections. The factory sales force of this company is at full strength and its work is described as more vigorous and intensive than at any time during the company's history.

As the result of a drive in unoccupied Michigan territory new distributorships have been established at Grand Rapids, Saginaw, Battle Creek and Kalamazoo. Others are reported at Binghamton, N. Y., Peoria, Ill., and several other points.

GOODYEAR CUTOFF IS THE WORST.

Gets the Palm for Being Toughest Stretch on Cross Country Trip.

There are hundreds of transcontinental motorists reported as arriving in Southern California every month, and most of them travel with as little load as possible. So when J. F. Dougherty and family arrived last week from Ashtabula, O., the heavy load they carried on a Studebaker big six excited quite a bit of attention.

CONSIDERABLE WEIGHT.

When run on the scales, the entire weight on the tires totaled 5800 pounds, and yet in spite of the big overload made up of five passengers, camp outfit for the party and considerable other luggage, the car made the run in fine shape. With the exception of one blowout and a couple of punctures, there was no tire trouble. The mechanical trouble was summed up with a clogged gasoline line and a broken spring leaf.

Dougherty states that these minor troubles were not worth mentioning, as he could have had as much tire trouble anywhere, that the gasoline line would have become clogged at home as easily as on the road, on account of a bit of waste in the tank, and that the wonder of it is that the heavy load and rough roads did not break all four springs.

No main highway was followed for the trip, but many side trips over other roads were taken at different points. Some of these side runs were due to boosters for a certain territory, and did not give the motorists the benefit of the better roads. In one case the advice of one booster caused the party to travel an extra hundred miles without having the advantage of a better highway. The Lincoln Highway would have been followed if Dougherty had not listened to the boosters of sections lying off the main traveled route.

The worst piece of road on the whole trip was found on the Goodyear cut-off, near Salt Lake. This stretch is seventeen miles long, and while all of it has been graded only five miles has been surfaced, and this part has been allowed to get in bad shape. For twelve miles the road is a succession of chuck holes and high centers, and the axles dragged time after time in getting the car through. After the $125,000 Goodyear fund had been expended on this stretch, which was built to avoid a longer stretch of worse road, the State of Utah found itself lacking sufficient funds to complete the work.

The Dougherty family thoroughly enjoyed the trip, and reports excellent camps along the route in most of the cities of any size.

Dougherty told Paul G. Hoffman, local distributor of Studebakers, that they intended to drive home some time this winter, and while they anticipated worse road conditions at that time they had every expectation of their Studebaker getting them home as safely and comfortably as it brought them to Los Angeles.

The Packard Single Six Is Reduced In Price

$655 HERE

—which means that for the FIRST Time a QUALITY car is to be produced in VOLUME

LAST Sunday's price reduction of $655 on the Single Six marked the successful end of six years of steady effort to produce a car that should carry Packard quality, uncompromised, into a new and wider market.

The Touring Car $2690 Here

The Packard Motor Car Company for twenty years has built nothing but high-grade cars. No other name in the industry stands more steadfastly for quality.

With mounting resources of experience and of capital, Packard set about SIX YEARS AGO to build a car of Packard quality in a VOLUME that would permit its marketing at a lower price than a Packard car had ever sold before.

For five years the best effort of their engineers went into the task. Finally the Packard Single Six emerged from their searching tests, worthy to be called a Packard.

Still Packard did not hurry at once into large production. They wanted the most important verdict of all—the owner verdict after a year of use.

It is a year since the Packard Single Six first came upon the market. No car ever made a more satisfying record in owners' hands.

Last Sunday's price reduction meant that Packard is ready for increased production.

They are ready to stake their reputation on the Single Six.

Twenty years of manufacturing high-grade cars, the equipment and resources of a $62,000,000 corporation are behind it.

Nothing about it is cheapened or changed — it is a Packard through and through, built in its entirety by Packard, side by side with the great Twin Six.

All we ask is that YOU test the car and pass judgment upon it in comparison with other cars of its new price field and a thousand dollars above.

TAKES LEAD IN CAMP GROUNDS.

Nevada City Has the World Beat, Says Leavitt.

Every Possible Convenience for Motorists There.

Could be Used as Pattern by the Largest Cities.

The friendly germ of the municipal automobile camp has firmly intrenched itself throughout the State of California during the past year or two, according to the stories tourists returning to this city from vacations spent by valley, mountain or seaside.

One of the best examples of the municipal automobile camp, according to a letter received by L. V. Starr from J. W. Leavitt of the J. W. Leavitt & Co., Oldsmobile distributors, is to be found at Nevada City.

Leavitt, accompanied by his wife, recently returned to his home in San Francisco from a five-day tour of the high Sierras in an Oldsmobile twin four, and one of the most important stops of his journey, he says, was that at Nevada City.

"Nevada City has a really wonderful automobile camp," writes Mr. Leavitt. "The citizens of that place are very proud of their camp and well may they be so. Judging from all that I have seen of these camps, the one at Nevada City is about the last word as regards arrangement, conveniences and the natural beauty of its setting.

"There you will find a splendid swimming pool, community kitchen, gas stoves operated by coin-controlled meters, sinks with running water, modern plumbing, shower baths and electricity. The camp is located right in town, not in the suburbs and is one of the finest that I have ever seen."

Leavitt's five-day itinerary included some real touring. On the first day Camp Curry, in the Yosemite Valley, was reached. On the second day Mono Lake and Tioga Lodges were visited. On the third day he drove into Reno. On the fourth day the return to San Francisco was started via Feather River Inn, Gold Lake and Downeyville to Nevada City. On the fifth and final day the trip was completed to San Francisco by a detour via Colfax.

No Wonder the Battery Gave Up the Ghost.

M. L. Houseman, secretary and treasurer of Harry W. Harrison, Inc., Southern California and Arizona distributors for the Westinghouse batteries, has a very good friend operating a battery service in a certain Eastern city, not noted for its balmy winter climate. The other day he received a letter from this chap with the following tale of woe:

"A new motorist dashed into my place the other day, fairly ready to fight anyone who might have the nerve to disagree with him.

"'You put it in just a few weeks ago! It ought to be good! But it's not working worth a darn. Why don't you do a good job while you're at it? What's the use of paying money for something that won't work? Look at it, will you? Just look at it!'

"He was dancing around like an angry wasp and gradually receding toward the entrance—or should I say exit?—beyond which his car stood.

"'At what?' I asked, realizing that the question, although necessary, was likely to produce another eruption.

"'At the battery, of course. It won't work.'

"'What seems to be the matter?' I asked.

"This produced the most violent outburst of all.

"'That's what I dragged the old bus down here for,' he spluttered. 'That's your job to find out. I've been standing on the button for half an hour, but nothing doing. It's cold this morning and I wanted to get my outdoor work done by noon. And I haven't started yet. What's the matter?'

"'You've just told me yourself,' I said. 'You've been standing on the button for half an hour.' And then I explained to this beginner a thing or two about batteries that many autoists know and all should know."

BOTH DEPARTMENTS ARE IMPORTANT NOW.

USED AND NEW CAR PROSPECTS GET EQUAL CONSIDERATION THESE DAYS.

"The past week has shown us very conclusively that there exist two very clearly defined types of buyers in the automobile market and both of them important," says George Goodrum, manager, Mission Motor Company, Dort distributor.

"One is interested in the new car, the other in the used car.

"The progressive automobile dealer of today is the one who foresees the great possibilities of both of these great markets for motor cars and is prepared for them.

"We are just as certain that the used cars driven from our salesrooms will give satisfaction for the amount of the purchase involved as we are of the new cars we sell."

KILLS TWO BIRDS WITH ONE STONE.

Planning to kill two birds with the proverbial single stone, J. C. McGill of the McGill Motor Company, Gardner distributors, has gone East on a combined business and pleasure trip.

According to the McGill organization here, Mr. McGill plans to spend six weeks visiting the Gardner factory at St. Louis and in getting a first-hand glimpse of eastern business conditions. Incidentally, it is reported, he plans to enjoy a rather extensive hunting trip before returning to Los Angels.

The McGill Motor Company reports a decided increase in business here since the arrival of the new 1922 model Gardner light fours. The demand has grown until it has been found difficult to supply new orders within the desired length of time. One reason Mr. McGill went East, it is rumored, was his desire to hurry shipments of Gardner cars from the factory and, if possible, to prevail upon factory officials to increase the allotment of these cars destined for this territory.

General Lack of Knowledge on Batteries.

What do you know about your storage battery?

At first glance this may seem an impertinent question, but there is no gainsaying the fact that there is a widespread and general lack of information upon the part of motorists concerning the construction, functions and care of this most important unit of the automobile.

The average life of a storage battery in actual service is said to be fifteen months. It has been demonstrated time and again, however, that this battery life can be increased to twenty or twenty-four months. If this average could be creased by 30 per cent, which would mean the bringing of the average length of service to twenty months instead of fifteen, it would mean an annual saving of millions of dollars to motorists of this country.

"Every owner of an automobile should, for the sake of economy as well as of satisfaction, familiarize himself thoroughly with every important feature of his storage battery," says M. S. Robinson of the General Service Company, local representatives of the Prest-O-Lite Company.

"If automobile owners would learn more about their storage battery, they would appreciate more than they now do the importance of taking frequent advantage of the service offered by the modern storage battery service station."

Invite Eddie to Show Cars at Big Salon.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—The show committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce announced today that the Rickenbacker Motor Company has been invited to participate in the coming New York National Automobile Show.

Officials of the chamber explained that the action taken was intended as a personal compliment to Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, the American ace of aces. In discussing the tribute, Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, stated:

"Our show committee based its action upon patriotic deeds that call for unusual recognition. The committee was happy to pay this honor to Eddie Rickenbacker as he was a great contribution from the automobile industry to Allied success in the World War.

"In addition to this, however, Eddie Rickenbacker has a high standing as an automotive expert, and his knowledge of motor cars is such as to command respect. Those affiliated with him are experienced automobile manufacturers of long standing reputation."

Ansted Engine Fills Bill for Critical Ones.

The Ansted engine has become so popular with many Angeleno motorists that after owning high-grade automobiles for only a short time they have traded them in on new Lexingtons. As a result, the used car department of the Lexington Los Angeles Company, local distributors, is almost overstocked, according to W. F. Seel, head of that firm.

Consequently a sale of these used cars has been announced for the coming week in which high quality motor cars only will be featured. Commenting on the situation that made necessary this sale, Mr. Seel says:

"In the first place the motorists who buy the higher grade machines are never satisfied with anything short of the best. When the Ansted-powered Lexington proved its unusual strength and stamina in one seal test after another, culminating in its hill climbing and second-gear campaigns of the last two months, these connoisseurs of good automotive equipment decided of their own accord that the claims made for this car must be sound after all. Further investigation convinced them, so they set about trading their good motor cars for these that they believed better.

"That was all very nice for us, but we soon found we had a full house of used cars that really hadn't been used much at all. In our enthusiasm over Lexington sales we neglected to push the disposal of this other equipment. So we are forced to sacrifice, that's all."

WHY does the problem of securing spare parts not exist for the owner of a Continental-equipped car or truck?

On a moment's notice we are ready to supply distributors of Continental-equipped vehicles with any part they may require.

It is only natural, therefore, that prospective car and truck buyers should regard Red Seal Service as a very sound reason for purchasing Continental-equipped vehicles.

MEXICO ON AIR MAP [illegible]

Americans Run Into Keen Competition [illegible] and French in the Southern Republic.

BY GEORGIA ROSE.

A representative of Rogers Airport has just returned from Mexico, where he has been investigating aeronautical conditions. They have in the City of Mexico a strictly up-to-date aviation field run by the government. The hangars are modern and the equipment in the repair shop most complete. The instruction in flying is under the supervision of an American, as is the shop. The American interests are forced to meet the keenest competition on the part of the French and the British.

Twenty airplanes are owned by the government, including twin motor jobs, bombing planes, Avro training planes, Samison's, a German Junker, a Curtiss and a Pacific standard model L-6, which was originally sold to Cantu by the Rogers Manufacturing Company.

The Mexicans are very apt pupils and intensely interested in aviation. At the present time the government is not doing any purchasing, due to a financial stringency. They expect, however, early next year to buy Southern California built planes and accessories. They will naturally look to Los Angeles, which is the nearest manufacturing center to the City of Mexico and should be a sister city as planes can be flown between the two in two days.

There are no planes owned by individuals in Mexico as there is a law prohibiting private ownership. In view of the fact that the landing field is 7500 feet above sea level, specially adapted ships are required for flying. As each ship has as peed limit beyond which it cannot go, so each ship has a "ceiling," that is an altitude beyond which it cannot climb. So one can readily see that when the ground level is 7500 feet to start a ship would require a "ceiling" of 22,500 to reach an altitude of 15,000 feet.

Some one a few days ago remarked that airplanes did not do anything but take passengers on short trips—over Hollywood, along the beaches and so on. I proceeded to enumerate what had been lately done at the Rogers Airport. An increasing amount of work is being done for the various motion-picture companies. Passengers have been carried to a ranch in the Coachella Valley and aerial photographs taken of the ranch. Since the war aerial photography has grown to be quite an industry in itself.

TRAP GUN AND ROD

BY TOM MARSHALL

[This is the hundred and seventh of a series of articles dealing with trapshooting, hunting and fishing by Capt. Tom Marshall, a noted authority on the great out-of-doors.]

Every trapshot has personal peculiarities. They all have an individual boner, which are invariably displayed at the score. Both amateurs and professionals, prior to getting down to the work of target crushing, introduce their idiosyncrasys. Whether this is done to cover semi-embarrassment, acquire a mental or from force of habit, I am unable to state.

SOME FAUX-PAS.

The recounting of a few faux-pas I have seen will not be amiss. Fred Gilbert (professional) takes a shell from his pocket, reads the lettering on the base, drops it into the gun chamber, with lettering exactly in line. Bill Crosby (professional) accurately directs a geyser of tobacco saliva at an empty shell or box, looks through the barrels of his gun. Finishing the event he turns half round, carefully wiping the muzzle of his gun on his coat sleeve, drilling back to his seat.

Pop Heikes (professional) works like a well-oiled machine, arriving at the score, he gives his gun a general inspection, smiles at his next-door neighbor, and is then lost in his efforts at target breaking. Frank Wright (amateur) champion of the 1920 Olympic Games, looks and blows through his gun barrel, immediately placing the gun to his shoulder. Then points at top of trap-house, with muzzle rocking up and down which is slightly disconcerting to his neighbor.

QUEER TRICK.

Billy Beers (amateur) rests the muzzle of his gun on the toe of his shoe and licks the butt plate of his gun as a precaution against slipping on the shoulder. Martin McVoy (amateur) member of New York Athletic Club, carries a wooden block, upon which he rests his muzzle, thus avoiding muscular fatigue. Jay Clark (amateur,) captain of the Olympic team, when balked or a broken target is thrown, opens his gun, removes the shell, immediately replacing same in the chamber, then makes a decided squatting motion, prior to calling pull.

Charley Spencer (professional) runs his tongue over the butt plate. Immediately after firing, he rests his gun on the guard rail or stake, conserving every ounce of energy for use in extended programs. Lester German (professional) spits on his hands, immediately rubbing them in the dirt, as an anti-perspiration precaution, then he paws the earth with his feet, like a bovine hunting a level place to stand. Woolfolk Henderson (amateur) raises and adjusts his hat, then with great deliberation glues the gun to his shoulder.

Charley Newcomb (amateur) after firing his gun, makes a decided squat as though shooting black powder, when it was necessary to get below the barrage, to locate his target. Mark Arie (professional) places the gun firmly to his shoulder, bounces the muzzle up and down a few times, he points at the top of the trap-house. He shoots with both eyes open (as most successful shots do) following the flying object with his eyes and paying no attention to the sights on his gun. He shoots targets as he would throw a rock at a dog or operate a bow and arrow, he watches the flying object.

IN GREAT FORM.

Frank Troeh (amateur) shoots in wonderful form. He is rather slight of build, with a decided nervous temperament, which he is fortunately able to control. He learns his body well forward as a semi-brace. He is a high-point shot. His gun muzzle is always elevated when target is liberated. Before taking a final position, he grabs up a handfull of dirt, which accentuates his grip on the gun.

Chauncey M. Powers (amateur) has been a trap enthusiast since "Heck was a pup." When shooting live birds in ye olden days, it was not admissible to raise butt of the gun above the elbow, until the bird was on the wing. Gluing a gun to the shoulder was not permitted. Powers's early training became a percept, his gun yet remains below his elbows until he calls pull.

SUPERSTITION.

Jack Wulf (amateur,) caters to superstition. He shoots in a Mexican sombrero, snakeskin hat band, beaded shell sack, with a rabbit's foot concealed "on his hip." Sid Dodds (amateur) adjusts the gun squarely to his shoulder, then gives his shoulders a shake, a la "shimmey" dance, cuddles his face to the gun and is then ready for action. Jay Graham (professional) places the butt of his gun, well above the shoulder line. A lost target, he contemplates with wonder and awe. When the doleful announcement of lost is heard, he gazes intently on the ground, slowly shakes his head, in an unsuccessful mental effort to solve the enigma of just how it happened.

Peter Holohan, (professional) places the gun to shoulder, then pushes it back and forward a number of times before he is ready to get busy. Clyde Mitchell, (professional) digs his toes in the ground, industriously and continuously chewing a mouthful of Wrigley's product. Harve Dixon (amateur) after shooting, ejects the shell, watches it strike the ground and quit smoking, before removing his eyes. O. N. Ford (amateur) wets the end of his shell in his mouth before inserting in the gun. They all have some noticeable trait. Later I will give the peculiarities of other noted shots in this paper.

Question: Does the wind have much effect on a load of shot in shooting targets? How much should be allowed for wind variation, if any? Indianapolis, Ind.

FRANK KILLION.

Answer: Yes, shot are effected by the wind. The question of how much lead should be allowed for wind, depends upon the velocity of the wind and the angle of the target thrown. When you arrive in the grounds and find a stiff wind is blowing, first note the direction. If from the rear it will depress the targets. If blowing in traps, your target will jump or rear up, after it has gone a limited distance. If a side wind is blowing, note velocity, then you will have to make your own mental deductions as to the amount of allowance to be made. If I would now give you an estimate based upon a hazard guess, it might be a "bum steer" which would cost you a number of targets before you could again "pull yourself together."

Q.: Is there a "pilot eye" that directs one in shooting? How can one ascertain which is their "pilot eye?" Milwaukee, Wis.

DICK HARVEY.

A.: Every person has a "pilot eye" which directs the vision. To prove my assertion take a ring from your finger, focus on some object, with both eyes open. Without moving the ring, close first one eye and then the other. You will find that either your right or left eye continues to focus or center the object through the ring, while the opposite eye, will be looking far to the side. The eye looking at the given object through the ring, which was originally located with both eyes open, is your pilot eye.

EXPLAINS HARD GRIP OF MULTI-CORD TIRE.

WHEN YOU APPLY THE BRAKE THE CASING SIMPLY GRABS THE HIGHWAY.

Mr. F. H. Osler of the Osler-Racine Rubber Company has a novel method whereby motorists can very easily grasp the principle used in the design of the new white tread Racine Multi Mile cord tire.

Mr. Osler says: "Place the tips of your fingers on a smooth table top and slide them forward. You will find this is very easy to do.

"Now place the palm of your hand on the table top and try to push it forward. It is much harder to do this now by reason of the broader surface and the hollow of your hand grasping the surface of the table. The harder you press your palm against the table the harder it is to slide your hand forward.

"If you will examine the tread of the new white Racine Multi Mile cord tire you will notice that it has been constructed with a very broad, flat tread which is deeply grooved. When the brakes are applied on a car equipped with these tires, the broad and deeply grooved tread immediately grips the road and brings the machine to a quick stop. The surface of this tire acts in the same manner as the palm and hollow of your hand on the table."

October 30, 1921.

Chess and Checker Headquarters, 820 Union League Building, corner of Second and Hill streets. All chess and checker players invited to join. For further information concerning the club, see or write the secretary, D. H. Bowes, at the clubrooms.

All communications intended for this department should be addressed to John Dougherty, The Times, Los Angeles, Cal.

AMONG THE FANS.

L. M. Lewis, the St. Louis expert, finally decided to visit California before starting on his homeward journey. He spent about ten days in San Francisco and arrived in Los Angeles the latter part of this week. The local club engaged him for a three-day exhibition, but he will more than likely remain much longer—everybody does.

A letter from Newell Banks—while not boastful—expresses confidence of being able to give a good account in his match with Stewart for the world's championship, which is scheduled to start in Glasgow, Scotland, on December 3. At present it looks ah though he would make the trip alone and will have to ask one of the Scotch players to act as his timekeeper.

Hopewell left last Thursday on a month's business trip in Mexico.

CORRECTIONS TO GAMES.

Some time ago E. H. Payne sent me corrections to games No. 1148 and 1149, but, through an oversight, publication has been delayed.

The last move (18-14) of variation 2, game No. 1148 (published August 7, 1921,) allows a win by 24-27 in reply. Instead of 18-14, play 26-22 and draw. (This variation 2 was copied from the Encyclopedia, where it is given as variation 45, on page 294.)

In Los Angeles Times game, No. 1149, published August 7, 1921, at 35th move the position is:

Black—1, 2, 10, 20, 21.
White—5, 12, 22, 30, 32.
White to play.

Instead of 12-8, as played, L. M. Lewis shows a win by:

22-18	8-3	32-28	7-10	19-16
20-24a	6-9	14-23	27-31	31-27
12-8	3-7	28-19	10-15	16-11

b—29-25 is considered best.
c—1-5 is the book play.
d—At this stage I played 11-16 against F. O'Melay and lost by 19-15, etc. The text draws easily and was overlooked by Mr. Dossett when annotating the game.
e—If 14-7, then 11-16.

LOS ANGELES TIMES GAME, NO. 2006.

LOS ANGELES TIMES GAME, NO. 2007.
Old Fourteenth.

After game No. 2001 had gone to press, Mr. Belden wrote, asking it be held until after he had time to look the effect of 2-6 at 31st move. I have not received Mr. Belden's play yet, so am giving the following game as "food for thought" until better play is at hand.

11-15	11-16b	11-15	2-6e	28-24
23-19	26-23	20-11	20-16	11-16f

15-18a	10-17	19-23c	8-3
23-14	21-14	24-20d	7-11

a—The bone of contention.
b—Experts seem to agree that 11-16 loses.
c—To here the play is same as given by Mr. Heffner in Times games No. 1172 and 2001.
d—W. C. Belden's move to correct Heffner's play.
e—Mr. Belden gave no play on this move, but wrote, too late to stop the game, to hold same until he had time to analyze this move.
f—If 23-27, 24-20, 27-32, 3-7, W. wins.

Greatly Reduced Prices on Service Motor Trucks

Through a special arrangement, and with the co-operation of the factory, we are offering SERVICE Motor Trucks at greatly reduced prices, the reduction on certain models running as high as $1025.

There has been no advance in SERVICE prices since February, 1920, the prices at that time being based on costs as they were in 1919.

Although material and labor costs have now dropped from the high levels reached in 1920, they are still higher than the costs upon which present prices (announced in February, 1920,) were based.

While costs do not warrant reduction in the price of SERVICE Trucks, nevertheless we and the factory are willing to do our share towards helping a speedy return to normalcy.

The arrangement we have made with the factory contemplates an increase of business in this territory within the next sixty days.

We believe we can sell our quota, and therefore are pleased to offer SERVICE Trucks at the following prices:

Model 15—1 Ton Speed Truck (chassis only)	$2025
Model 220—1-1½ Ton	2375
Model 31—1½-2 Ton (solid tires)	3245
Model 36—1½-2 Ton (pneumatic tires)	3595
Model 51—2½-3 Ton	3840
Model 71—3½-4 Ton	4580
Model 76—3½-4 Ton, Contractors' Special	4900
Model 101—5-6 Ton	5100

Prices F.O.B. Los Angeles include complete equipment of cab, windshield, curtains, lighting equipment and war tax.

We feel that at the prices above listed, SERVICE Motor Trucks offer absolutely the greatest truck values that may be had in the United States today.

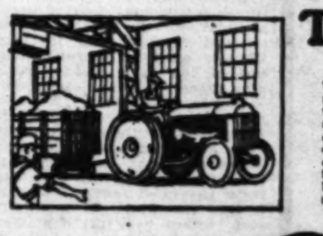
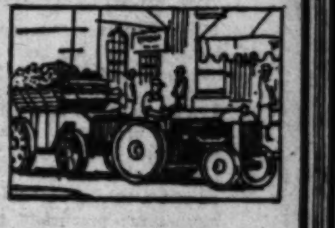
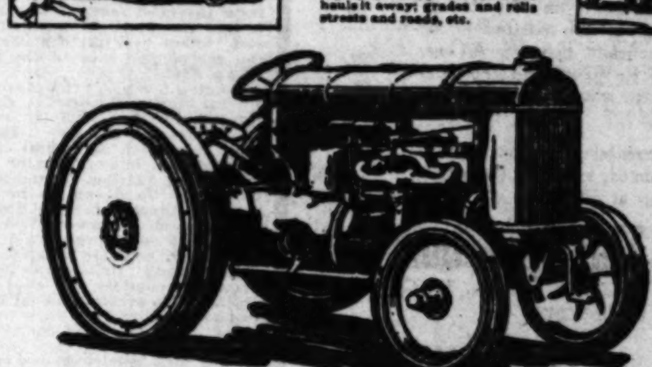
Fordson
TRACTOR



Tows freight cars, pulls tons of materials about factories, hauls trailers loaded with lumber, coal and crushed stone; drags logs; does excavating and hoisting; crushes stone; mixes concrete; drives piles; hauls street cleaning equipment; plows snow and hauls it away; grades and rolls streets and roads, etc.





Fordson Tractor equipped with Solid Rubber tired wheels for factory and street uses.

A Great Industrial Worker

There isn't any doubt about the dependability, adaptability, efficiency or economy of the Fordson Tractor. These things have all been proved by the most severe tests on farms all over the country where more than 170,000 of them are in daily use.

Light, easy to handle and operate in small spaces, there is absolutely no doubt about the practicability of the Fordson for industrial uses. This has been proved by manufacturers in most every line, construction and excavating engineers, cementing contractors, coal and building supply concerns, street and road building contractors, cities, towns and villages.

You can undoubtedly apply a Fordson to your line of business. Let's talk it over. It will interest you to get all the details.

RED-HOT ITEMS OF INTEREST GLEANED FROM FORD DEALERS IN AND AROUND LOS ANGELES.

Mr. Fleming of the A. L. Fleming agency, has made two additions to his sales force, Mr. Charles L. Tanner and Mr. Hubert B. Hobson. Mr. Hobson is well known to many Angelenos as the former chief draftsman for Redi-Cut House Company.

Atterbury-Kemper Company sold a tractor to the R. J. Schirm Construction Company for commercial use. This tractor will take the place of ten head of mules, which Mr. Atterbury says should make other construction companies sit up and take notice.

W. I. Tupman Company is breaking ground for its used car department, which will adjoin its present quarters. This will give it much better facilities for taking care of its constantly increasing business.

Mr. J. E. Coberly says they were nearly put out of business this week by the circus, whose tents were pitched across the street from their store, so Joe closed up shop and played "papa" to his salesmen by taking them all to the circus, buying peanuts and lemonade until they all cried quits.

The Gray Motor Company of Hollywood staged a series of reel comedies this week, in which Ford cars played the stellar parts, assisted by Miss Ethel Teare, Burt Roach and Dave Morris of the Hutchinson Company of Universal City. Various costumes were worn by the Ford cars, from the stately sedan to the lowly stripped chassis.

Clark & Leonard report an addition to their sales force in the person of Col. W. Sweet. Col. Sweet is one of the 188 who received a Congressional Medal for his excellent service to his country. He has just obtained leave from Clark & Leonard to go to Washington, D. C., where he will act as delegate on Armistice Day.

Mr. E. G. Sengel, sales manager for Joseph A. Moore, South Pasadena, reports that they have orders far in advance of deliveries and says they are booking orders rapidly for future delivery.

Hubbard Auto Sales Company is installing in its salesrooms a Lane & Bowler turbine pump, connected to a Fordson tractor with special attachments, and will give a demonstration of the amount of water per minute that a Fordson can pump. Mr. Hubbard says this is a new field for the Fordson and considerable interest is being evidenced as to just what extent the Fordson can be utilized for the pumping of water.

Mr. Hamlin W. Nerney has added Mr. C. O. Dewey to his sales force. Mr. Dewey is well known as one of the pioneers in renting Fords without drivers in the city of Los Angeles.

Mr. Ira B. Groves, assistant manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Ford Motor Company is visiting the Ford dealers in Arizona.

Mr. George Bellis, sales manager for W. D. Dunham, points out, among other late changes and additions in the new Ford model, green visor headlight lenses, front number brackets, new style radius rods, improved front spring hanger which insures easier riding and less spring breakage on rough roads, added protection to the wiring from moisture, improved carburetors (Holley and Kingston,) new style fan which eliminates one grease cup and creates larger air suction. (The Ford car now has only five grease cups.)

Mr. B. L. Graves, district manager, reports that during the past week they have received a number of carloads of automobile parts shipped direct from Detroit in their D. T. and I. freight cars, and that he now only regrets that the D. T. and I. Railroad does not extend from Detroit to Los Angeles, especially in view of the rumors of impending railroad strikes.

ASSESSORS WILL FURNISH PLATES.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Oct. 29.—Secretary of State Hall this year will turn over to the fourteen county assessors the work of furnishing automobile license plates. He ordered about 36,000 pairs of plates from St. Paul (Minn.) contractor and has had them shipped direct to the assessors. No licenses are issued unless tax has been paid on the car or the owner has realty to secure payment of the tax.

Used Cars

The Lexington Los Angeles Company have accumulated a stock of fine cars taken in trade on the new Lexington Lark. These must be sold before moving into the new quarters. All cars are exceptional buys.

1919 Big 6 Studebaker, thoroughly reconditioned, repainted, 5 good cord tires, with many extras. $1125.00.

1919 Chalmers, touring. 5 cord tires, looks and runs like new. Motor has been thoroughly overhauled. $775.00.

1921 Lexington, convertible sedan. Blue Spanish upholstery. Has been run only 435 miles. This is a Sedan during the rainy weather and can be instantly converted into a touring car with a stationary top in summer; practically two cars in one. Will sacrifice it for $2465.00. Remember, this is a brand new car, on which you are saving 20%.

Model R, 4-passenger Lexington sport; 5 good tires, repainted, retopped, thoroughly rebuilt. A snap at $875.00.

The Old Folks Enjoy Comforts Much the Best.

If the average motorist were asked the question of who enjoys most the upholstered, cozy comforts of the fine car of today, he would probably say that it was his son or his daughter.

But the answer would be wrong in the opinion of F. E. Lewis of the Lewis-Hilliard Company, Handley-Knight and McFarlan distributors. The grandmothers and grand-dads enjoy those comforts most, he says.

"Riding in the modern fine car is always a treat to old people," declares Mr. Lewis. "And they seem to find new delights with each new ride.

"You see the most of us, and especially the younger generation, just take motoring as a matter of course, as they say. But to the old people who spent the greater part of their lives in the age of horse-drawn vehicles, a ride over a smooth road in an elegantly appointed automobile is new. And the newness does not wear out with twenty such rides or even a hundred.

"They can't help recalling the plodding motive power controlled by leather reins from bridle to driver's seat and the cramped up, comfortless carriages of the old days. So they can really appreciate motoring in a way that never occurs to the younger generation."

Rapid Growth in Values of Modern Tires.

Announcement of the death last week in Dublin of John Boyd Dunlop, known as the inventor of the pneumatic tire, has caused more than one motorist to recall the vast advancement made in tire building since the first one was introduced in 1888. And the greatest improvement of all has been made within the last ten years, it is believed.

Pneumatic tires are better values today than they have ever been, contends Lute G. Gillelen of the firm of Lute G. Gillelen & Co., local Midco tires distributors. And because this is being realized by motorists and truck owners, the tire industry is now facing a period of honest prosperity, he believes.

"No one will deny," says Mr. Gillelen, "that while the tires made before the war were less expensive than those made in 1917 and 1918, the latter had more lasting qualities. And in turn it is obvious that the tires being manufactured today are better than those sold during the war. But it must be realized, too, how much less present-day tires cost than did the 1917 products. So from a purely dollar and cents standpoint in relation to mileage pneumatics are doubly increased in value."

Newest Hudson Contains Many Real Features.

Not since older Hudson models were displaced by the super-six with its patented motor in 1916 have changes so numerous and important marked the product of the big Detroit factory as are to be seen in the New Hudson car, which is now being displayed by Harold L. Arnold, distributor for California, Nevada, Arizona and Northern Mexico.

Because of its distinctive design the first super-six created exceptional interest. It became widely renowned shortly after its introduction by setting the round-trip record of ten days, twenty-one hours and three minutes between San Francisco and New York, which many cars have essayed in vain to lower. Since then its prestige has been enhanced by notable performances on track and highway, and in endurance and hill-climbing contests, the most recent feat throwing it into the limelight being its second victory over all contestants in the spectacular race to the top of Pike's Peak.

For the five years that the super-six has been in the market, the factory has been constantly refining and improving the car. Hitherto there have been no radical changes in its design, but on account of its widespread distribution and general popularity there can be no doubt that the announcement at this time of important changes, both in mechanism and appearance, will create more than ordinary interest, especially among those who demand maximum comfort and ease of operation. No previous model Hudson has so specialized on these two features. Take the front compartment as an example. By carefully redesigning this particular portion, the driver is entirely relieved of leg or arm strain in operating the car.

The control mechanism has been so improved as to provide easier starting, easier steering and the clutch and brake pedals take far less effort to operate. Then, too, a longer gear-shift lever has been so handily placed that it can be reached without the least effort.

NEW ADDITIONS TO J. V. BALDWIN FORCES.

WELL-KNOWN MOTOR MEN JOIN LOCAL DISTRIBUTORS OF COLUMBIA SIX.

Since the occupancy of their new quarters on Figueroa street at the corner of Twelfth, the J. V. Baldwin Motor Company, distributors for Oldsmobile Trucks, Columbia Six, and Saxon-Duplex motor cars, report a large increase in the sale of new cars and trucks. This has necessitated the enlargement of the sales force to double its former number. In keeping with the usual Baldwin policy, only long experienced, capable and efficient automobile men qualify for the Baldwin sales department.

A recent appointee is Carl A. Miller, who has been identified in the local field with the highest grade motor cars for over six years. Miller formerly acted as sales manager for one of the largest distributors in this city. He bears an enviable reputation as a man of high ideals and integrity, and carries to prospectiv epurchasers of Columbia Six motor cars a thorough understanding and knowledge of automobile values and mechanical improvements as they are today.

Another recent acquisition to the sales organization is George C. Ferman. Ferman is one of the oldest and best-known automobile salesmen in Southern California. Among his wide circle of friends and acquaintances are numbered nearly all of the prominent motor car distributors in Los Angeles today.

DO YOU REALLY KNOW YOUR CAR?

Survey Shows That Only One Driver in Six Does.

Rest Simply Understand How to Step on Throttle.

All Drivers Ought to be Up on the Fundamentals.

How many motorists know anything about their automobiles beyond the superficial details of how to start them and stop them, and how much the last tires cost? This is the question that is being asked by those who demand more strict qualifications for drivers' licenses.

ONE OUT OF SIX.

In a recent survey conducted by the police department of New York City it was found that only one driver in six knew anything about the mechanics of their automobiles beyond the manipulative use of the brakes and clutch pedals, gear shift, steering wheel and the few dash appertenances.

Choosing these startling revelations as the subject for some "brass tack" remarks on motoring ignorance, Fred Rutledge of the Rutledge Motor Company, local National Sextet Six distributors, says:

"Impatient to get behind the wheel and try out the car's pick-up and power, the average car owner is prone to pay but little attention to the explanations and admonitions courteously given by the dealer or salesman. Often it all goes in one ear and out the other without the retention of a single fact.

NATURAL ABUSE.

"And because he doesn't know when something goes wrong or what is wrong if it does, the new car owner is led unwittingly to abuse the mechanism of his car. The upshot of it all is, nine times out of ten, premature repair bills and dissatisfaction with his purchase.

"So many times, too, a driver will yelp for the tow car when there is really little the matter with his automobile. He loses time and he loses money; both of which might have been saved had he known how to make a simple adjustment, or diagnose a slight and often temporary ailment under the hood.

"With many other perplexed motor fans I am prone to wonder if automotive mechanics should not be a compulsory subject in the education of everyone holding a driver's license. Including a course in elementary mechanics along the same line in our grade schools might even be advisable."

SALESMEN SET RIGHT PRICES ON MACHINES.

MARK CARDS DOWN TO A POINT WHERE ACTION IS AN ASSURED THING.

One of the most unique sales schemes ever introduced into the local motor car industry has just been inaugurated this week by the Harold L. Arnold organization. It is a used car sale really operated and conducted by the salesmen of the organization. In fact, when the plan was laid before the salesmen they were so enthusiastic and advanced so many novel ideas, that the Arnold forces, appointed a com-Fred H. Schreiner, sales manager of mittee from the sales organization and turned them loose.

With all these data in his posses-of used cars today is presented in putting the price on the product. To arrive at a just market price, the sales force of the Arnold organization was called in. Each salesman inspected every used car in stock and wrote down what he thought it would bring at a fair value. No salesman knew what the car stood the house of Arnold. Most of these cars had been completely done over inside and out.

With all this data in his possession, Mr. Schreiner was able to fix the prices of the used cars on a basis of not what he would like to sell them for, but what they would actually sell for at a sale lasting not over two weeks. Relative to the method of pricing Schreiner said: "We have made up our minds that these used cars must be sold. They represent more real value in motor cars," we believe, "than any like number of cars ever offered to the public in the history of the industry."

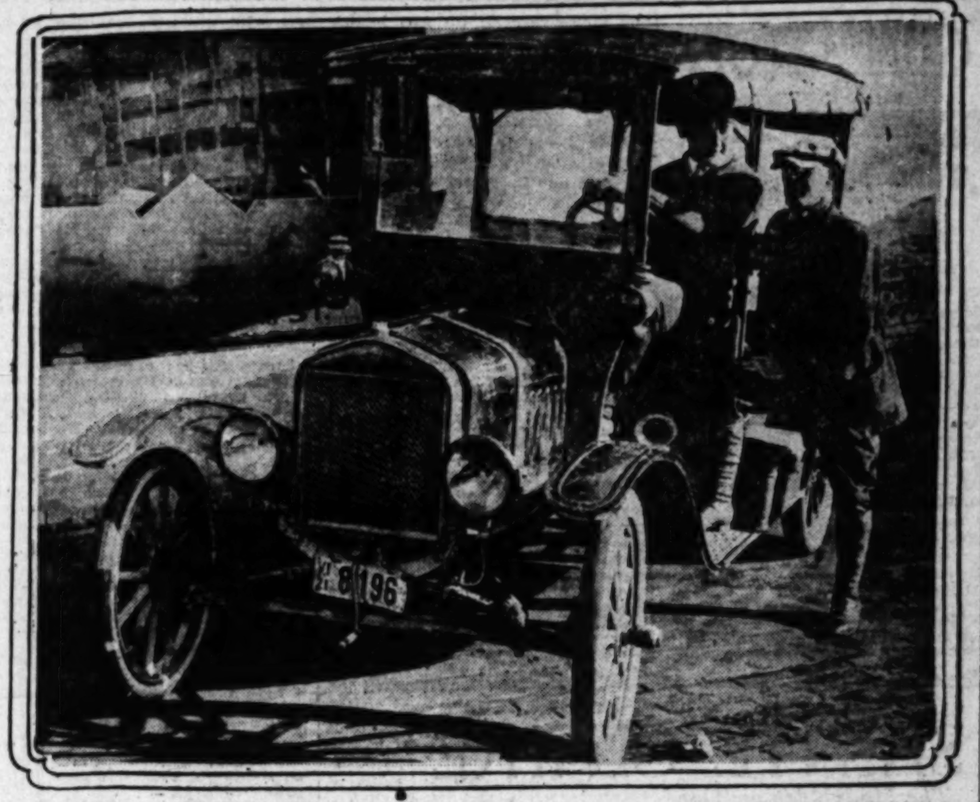
SHOUTS THE PRAISES OF HIS PNEUMATICS.

DRIVES ALL OVER NORTHWEST WITH THE MINIMUM OF TIRE TROUBLE.

L. A. Meinecke and his family started last February from Los Angeles on a combined business and pleasure trip visiting fairs in prominent cities in Northern California, Oregon, Washington and Canada. They returned here several days ago, having traveled 11,117 miles. Mr. Meinecke drove a ton and a half Reo Speed Wagon, equipped with McClaren Auto Crat cord tires. The entire load, including a trailer loaded with 2300 pounds, weighed five tons.

Mr. Meinecke on returning to Los Angeles immediately looked up Mr. Fred C Thompson of the C. Fred Thompson Tire Company, distributors of McClaren tires in Southern California and Arizona to tell him of the wonderful service these tires rendered him on his long trip over the roughest possible roads.

Mr. Meinecke said: "We took only one McClaren tire off the wheel during the entire trip and this was because we picked up a nail. Everyone who has driven up in the Northwest and Canada knows how bad the roads are in that territory. Often times we had to get out of the car to clear boulders off the road before we could proceed. The Reo Speed Wagon deserves a lot of credit for the way it stood up over this rough journey. We had hardly any mechanical trouble, though on account of the rocky roads I sometimes thought the car would be jolted to pieces. The McClaren Auto Crat cord tires look as if they are not half worn and I fully expect to get as much more mileage from these tires as I have already obtained."



Putting a Light Ford Delivery Truck Through Its Paces.

Burnard McNaney and John S. O'Connor of Bennington, Vt., who breezed into Los Angeles last week, having completed the long trek across the continent in twenty days. They came across in a Ford delivery truck and set some remarkable economy records in tires, gasoline, oil and practically everything else. W. D. Dunham, local Ford dealer, looked over their car after the long run and pronounced it in good shape for the return trip.

FLIVVER ACROSS THE NATION IN A HURRY.

TWO MEN DRIVE FROM VERMONT TO LOS ANGELES WITHIN TWENTY DAYS.

Burnard McNaney and John S. O'Connor of Bennington, Vt., arrived in Los Angeles this past week after completing the transcontinental trip in twenty days. They gave Mr. W. D. Dunham of the Dunham Ford Agency a remarkable record of Ford economy and speed in crossing the U.S.A.

McNaney and O'Connor drove a light delivery truck across the 3614-mile journey. Very little tire trouble was encountered and they had absolutely no mechanical trouble. Both are mechanics, but did not have to use their trade once during the trip.

These two men made the trip via Buffalo, Erie, Cleveland, Indianapolis to Kansas City and from Kansas City to Los Angeles by the Santa Fe Trail over Raton Pass. They took all the steep mountain passes without difficulty. They report that of the 3614 miles traveled, 3000 miles were over good average roads.

The Ford that brought them across the country in such short order had been used in a garage all summer as a service car and despite the fact that it had had no special preparatory work done on it, the trip was most satisfactory.

DIRECTORY LISTS ALL PISTON RINGS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—What is probably the most complete and authentic piston ring size directory ever published has just been issued by the Gill Manufacturing Company for the convenience of the trade.

The purpose of this book is to simplify the sale of piston rings by means of a single, compact volume containing the piston-ring size data of the entire automotive industry. To this end, every make of automobile, truck, tractor and airplane manufactured has been catalogued as far as possible, with a tabulation of past and present models, number of cylinders, piston rings, and the piston-ring sizes required for each.

Ten Thousand Miles Passed And Forgotten.

"Ten thousand miles gone and forgotten, it certainly is a joy," said Ira Purl Fleming, glancing at the 13,225 speedometer reading on his Olds six touring car. "I make hills today easier than the demonstrator car did, and stiffer grades than it could negotiate. I pass 'em all on grades, there isn't a car, new or old, I can't pick up on grade and show my heels to.

"Contact points? Haven't touched mine in 9000 miles. Not a bit of carbon in the cylinders. Plugs never foul. There it is," he pointed to a little mahogany box under the hood. "I'd never have a car without one.

"It's all in ignition. Get proper ignition, spark that burns up carbon and gets real energy out of gas. I made San Diego on three gallons. The spark's the thing and Vivo Oscillator gets it. I'll stack my coil, my battery, any part of my ignition against any that's made. Vivo has been attached 9000 miles and Vivo has kept the pep in it and added more."

The Reason Back of Its Great Service Records—the way it is built

It is not accident that hundreds of Essex Cars are serving well past their fifty-thousandth mile, with long expectancy of good service still ahead.

Service like that results from the way they are built.

Essex did not bring costly car performance and reliability to the light, moderate-priced field without duplicating or excelling the design and workmanship of the finest high-priced cars.

The care exercised in building Essex cars is not lavished merely on exterior "selling points."

It goes equally into parts you never look into. You see that workmanship only as it is expressed in long continued smoothness, and quietness of operation. The Essex does not become loose and noisy, grow wasteful of oil and fuel, and require frequent repairs and adjustments, even after long, hard service.

The New Improved Essex brings even greater reliability than the old car, which is famous for that quality. But you will find the greatest difference in the new thrill and charm of this Essex in action. Men speak of its lulling ease at high speed over all sorts of roads. We know no better way to describe it.

A METHOD IN MADNESS.

ingly Idiotic Ideas of Motorists Very Often Have Foundation of "Horse Sense."

surely a difference of opinion makes horse races—as Mark once remarked. And some the opinions may seem a bit to say the least, until there been an explanation of the why that opinion—and then quite we are surprised at the unamount of horse sense which hidden away in what might have seemed a queer idea.

DIFFERENT IDEAS.

are perhaps more differof opinion in the buying of than in any other line however, if we may judge by the yarns which the salesmen tell. There is the story about the woman who ordered a special paint job—the body of the car being a brilliant purple, the wheels red and the top white, and who insisted that the dealer give her a written guarantee that he would not duplicate the car for anyone else. Needless to say he gave it gladly and had a job on his hands quieting the head of the paint shop, who was a man of esthetic tastes.

Then there is the tale of the bridal couple who insisted that their car be painted a boudoir pink with gold wheels and of the sales manager who had to call in an expert interior decorator to get just the right shade of seat covers to go with the job. These all seemed like fool ideas at the time. But later it was discovered that the wild purple job went to a woman who traveled about advertising a full line of paints for a well-known manufacturer, and that the innocent appearing newlyweds were selling oil stocks to help feather their first nest. Under these circumstances their ideas did not appear so wild.

But for difference of opinion on what constitutes a demonstration, Fred Schreiner, sales manager for Harold L. Arnold is telling a new one. When in a reminiscent mood the other day he unburdened his soul of a tall tale and then got real peeved when some one started to mention a well-known berry. Here it is:

A WILD DAY.

"The last rainy day we had," said Schreiner, "a man entered the salesroom and said he wanted to see one of the new Hudsons. The cars had just arrived and that same day had been placed on the salesroom floor. Streets were slippery—not at all the sort of a day to try out cars—but rather the kind that drives the salesmen and demonstrators to thinking how busy they are on the inside out of the wet. But the prospect wanted a ride in the new Hudson, so a ride in the Hudson was in order. After the car was brought around all nice and clean, the prospect wanted to drive it himself.

"The salesman tried to beg off but I told him that it was part of his job, even if the car was his own. Just as they were starting out, the prospect said that all cars were alike to him under ordinary conditions. All of them went fast enough if he was fool enough to drive them fast, and all went up the hills in a manner satisfactory to him. He didn't care for just a car—he wanted a car that worked properly when the conditions were not exactly made to order. I'll tell the world they weren't made to order on that day.

HIS OWN WORDS.

"His own words were: "I want to try 'em on a wet day. I can tell more by the 'feel of the wheel' and the 'sound of the hound' than I ever will learn by having a trained salesman talk to me." He took his ride all right. He drove that salesman all over the town and then out in the country. The salesman came back on the street car. No, the Hudson didn't break down—it was sold to the prospect and the salesman had a certified check to prove it. Some folks have queer notions which have to be satisfied before they will buy—but we should worry if they all turn out like this one."

More Than Four Good Wheels

Nobody would accept a horse with one lame leg as a good horse, no matter how handsome or well bred it might be. A good horse needs four good legs.

And to be satisfactory a motor car needs much more than four good wheels. There are hundreds of parts in a motor car, any one of which may make you displeased with your car. And you can guard against this disappointment only by selecting a car that is no sense experimental. Fourteen years of proof behind the latest and finest Winton Six make it ideal to buy and use. Shown privately, without obligation on your part. Call Bdwy. 4180 or 60856. Direct factory branch at 1225-31 South Flower street.

No Luck.

Blackstone: Heard you had an accident with your car. Was it damaged much?

Webster: No such luck! The best I could get from the insurance people was a new coat of paint.—[New York Sun.

Nobby Cords in Strenuous Use on Big Busses.

Nearly every person who has visited New York has taken a trip to Coney Island in one of the big easy-riding Luna motor busses. Each bus carries thirty-six persons and the ride to Coney from the heart of Manhattan's business district is one of the sight-seeing events in a tour of the metropolis.

In a letter written recently to the United States Tire Company, the bus company said:

"Fifteen months ago our first set of your nobby cord pneumatic tires front wheels, and monotwin solid tires, rear wheels, went into service on one of our busses.

"To indicate the results obtained on this first set (still running) the following is a survey of the tire equipment today on our fourteen busses: All fourteen have nobby cord pneumatic tires on the front wheels. Ten are monotwin equipped on rear wheels, the other four will have monotwins when present tires are removed.

"The cushioning qualities of these tires mean smoother, easier riding busses for our patrons and the reduced vibration is a great aid in keeping the busses in excellent mechanical condition. Nobby cord pneumatics front and monotwins rear represent in our opinion the most efficient and economical tire equipment for bus wear. We shall therefore use them exclusively."

TIRE USERS WANT REAL VALUE TODAY.

ONCE THEY'D TAKE ANYTHING: NOW THEY DEMAND THE VERY BEST.

In their search for the pneumatic that will give them the most mileage per dollar invested motorists, who once replaced an old tire with whatever the nearest service station or tire dealer had to offer will now drive many blocks out of their way if necessary to get what they want.

Gorden Williams of the Stephens Tire Stores Company, believes this just as firmly as he does that, there is no such thing as business depression for the establishment that sells what the public wants. And the rest of tire row believes the same thing, it is declared.

Incidentally it is this increasing tendency of motorists to figure tire values in terms of miles per dollar that, Mr. Williams believes, accounts for the growing popularity of Stephens cords and Hydro-Toron tires. Both of these products carry 10,000-mile guarantees and are reported to be much sought after by tire users seeking more quality and endurance for their money.

SWING BACK TO STEADY PRODUCTION

E. M. House Declares That Now is Time for Vigorous Business Policies.

"The moment has finally arrived in the motor car trade for a resumption of vigorous and energetic business policies."

This is the opinion voiced the past week by Elliott M. House in a sales conference held by House & Meyer, Inc., during which plans were formulated for an aggressive sales campaign on the new Cole aero-eight.

ENERGETIC POLICY.

The opinion of the Cole Motor Car Company of Indianapolis that the mental and monetary attitude of the country now warrants a cessation of the rigid retrenchment policy which has been mercilessly enforced during the past few months, is indorsed in House & Meyer, Inc., the Cole distributors here. The fact that J. J. Cole sees fit now to assume an energetic manufacturing and sales policy is regarded by those who have carefully watched Cole strategy over a period of years as highly significant,— particularly since J. J. Cole's vision has been commented upon in business circles as being prophetic all during the fast moving business sequences brought about by the war and its aftermath.

When the armistice was unexpectedly signed, J. J. Cole was all set for immediate volume production, and almost before the echo of the bells and whistles had died away his factory was on a maximum production basis. The rate at which Cole cars rolled out to the shipping platform was as gratifying to Cole dealers as it was incomprehensible to other manufacturers, unable to swing back into peace-time production with equal alacrity. The result was a period of prosperity for Cole dealers from coast to coast, and the further strengthening of the Cole factory.

FEATHERED OFF.

Long before the reaction or readjustment period set in, Cole production had been skillfully brought past the peak and was being feathered off and brought under complete control against the period of greatly curtailed motor-car buying, which J. J. Cole regarded as inevitable.

Subsequent events proved the soundness of his judgment. It is a noteworthy fact that scientific control of inventories enabled the Cole factory to immediately pass on to the public the benefit of progressive cost reductions, made possible by the country's gradual deflation; and to this accomplishment is attributed the Cole factory's record of conspicuous activity during the blackest days of the buyers' strike.

"Watch Cole," has, in many instances, become the policy of manufacturing in both the motor car and allied industries. His ability, so often proved that it is no longer questioned, to anticipate and adequately prepare for great economic fluctuations, has earned him the reputation of being a business barometer.

CLOSED CARS COME WITH COLD WEATHER.

CHILLY, DAMP EVENINGS HAVE NO TERRORS FOR OWNERS OF SEDANS.

It requires no prophet to predict the approach of early fall, according to George Goodrum, manager Mission Motor Company, Southern California Dort distributors.

"An even more certain sign than the cool, damp evenings with their accompanying fog is the increased interest in the closed Dort models, which appear to be just the class of car the motorist has long desired.

"Aside from the exterior beauty present in the entire family of Dort cars, there are many ingenious developments which add to the convenience of these snugly inclosed cars.

"The step seems to be just the right height, and once inside the satin finish of the interior fittings is nicely set off by the subdued broadcloth upholstery in a rich, soft brown tone of the Chinese period design.

"Once in motion the car glides along with none of that annoying drum of the motor. This undesirable noise is eliminated by the lattice construction of the top, which instead of acting like a sounding board breaks up the sound waves, and replaces this disturbing hum with a restful quietness.

"We take especial pride in watching the pleasant reaction of motorists to the harmony and comfort of these inclosed cars. When they find the seats at just the proper slant, the windows gliding completely up or down with only a half turn of the adjusting lever, they seem to be fully as well pleased in inspecting these cars as we are in showing them."

SALES CAMPAIGN OFF TO A FLYING START.

HAYNES DISTRIBUTORS, IN NEW QUARTERS, OPEN UP FULL BLAST.

Moving into new quarters at the corner of 17th and Figueroa streets, the minute the decorators had left, Lynn C. Buxton, Hynes distributor early last week announced another move. But this time it is a concenrated sales campaign to boost the 1922 Haynes 55 and 75 models, according to G. M. Robinson, sales manager.

"The new Haynes cars, although they have been on display here but a short time, are already attracting more than ordinary attention among motor fans," declares Mr. Robinson. "And we are out to sell Haynes and mechanical prefection with real, determined enthusiasm. The readjustment period is over as far as we are concerned.

"Reports from the factory at Kokomo, Ind., indicate that Haynes officials are also optimistic. We hear that the organization there is working over time to supply the demand for new models. A force of 1800 men are now employed and the machine shops are running full blast at night to catch up on unfilled orders."

The new home of the Haynes in Los Angeles is declared to be particularly designed to meet the needs of the Lynn C. Buxton organization. Visitors at the sales rooms have commented more than once on the commodious appointments. New wall decorating of delicate tints serves to catch the light from the windows and give setting for the display of Haynes cars that is particularly attractive.

Blackwell Orpheum's Headliner.

Close on the heels of Bushman and Bayne, another motion-picture star comes to the Orpheum this week—Carlyle Blackwell, with a play by Mark Swan called "Eight, Six and Four." This engagement, which begins with the matinee performance tomorrow, is expected to prove another instance of the Orpheum's success in picking and choosing among the movie lots, for Carlyle Blackwell was a success on the stage before he went into pictures, and has had the experience and training necessary to stardom in either field.

Aileen Stanley is known to every owner of a phonograph, for she has made records for all of them. She will appear in person this week, singing many of the songs she has made for the discs, and some new ones.

Miss Stanley, before becoming the "phonograph girl," was known as the "personality girl," and she still retains the personality.

Felix Adler and Frances Ross bring a musical potpourri, which they say includes everything you like. Bowers, Walters and Crocker are "The Three Rubes" in a clever sketch. Wallace Galvinis, conjurer and expert manipulator of hen fruit, the Jack Hughes duo and the Littlejohns are the other new features.

Franker Woods and Bunee Wyde in "All Right Eddy," hold over from last week. Topics of the day and Aesop's Fables complete the bill.

"TURNING CORNER TO BETTER TIMES."

SO CLAIMS C. HAROLD WILLS, WELL-KNOWN MOTOR CAR EXECUTIVE.

"We have turned the corner for better times in this country and business men should prepare themselves to meet the renewal of commercial activity within the next six months."

C. Harold Wills, president of C. H. Wills & Co., made this statement to a group of the Michigan Bankers' Association, meeting in Marysville recently.

Mr. Wills's message, because of his close contact with industrial and business conditions throughout the country, was listened to with considerable interest by the bankers.

Addressing the visitors Mr. Wills said, in part:

"I am convinced that we have turned the corner in business depression and we are now in the midst of a sane upward movement. My barometer is the steel business, specially the operations of the blast furnaces. It is true that not much ore is being shiped to the furnaces, but the fact remains that there is an enormous inventory of ore on hand at the mills, which now is being rapidly converted into steel and shipped out to consumers.

"It is a well-known fact that the blast furnaces are the last to shut down and the first to start in periods of depression and prosperity. They, once shut down, are not reopened unless there is good reason for so doing for every time a blast furnace is started it costs a lot of money. Blast furnace conditions anticipate business conditions usually by about three months. If this is true we can look for a resumption of healthy business conditions within the next five or six months for the reopening of furnaces has been on the increase for some time past. We certainly have turned the corner if this is an index."

F.O.B. DETROIT

These reductions are not mere "cuts" in prices. In reality they represent another great Federal achievement in overcoming war conditions and getting back to a normal business basis.

Such prices are possible solely through Federal's enviable position in the industry. Federal is one of the very few companies to come through the readjustment period without a burdensome financial overhead—without over-extended factory facilities, without bonded or preferred stock indebtedness, bank loans and heavy interest charges that must be passed on to customers.

The Federal Motor Truck Company was never in as strong or as sound a financial condition as it is today. These new Federal prices, therefore, are rock bottom, based on lowered material and labor costs and upon the increased efficiency and capacity of the great Federal plants.

You can now purchase a Federal truck backed by eleven years tried and proven success at prices as low as in 1914 before the World War—at the lowest price now offered by any long and permanently established manufacturer of reputation.

Federal Trucks have always been good trucks—$75,000,000 worth now on the road demonstrate that. The Federal of today is an infinitely better truck than any preceding model—but its price is lower.

The Price is right—the product is right—the service is right. Every buying reason that appeals to sound business judgment says "Buy the motor truck you need now—buy Federals." It is false economy to do without motor truck haulage or to continue the use of units that because they are worn out or inefficient—cannot measure up to today's standard of performance.

Ask the Driver About the GMC K-16

Nothing can be said of the performance of the Model K-16, GMC One Ton Truck, which cannot be demonstrated better by the daily accomplishments of this truck.

You can find this model everywhere and you can get the story of GMC superiority from GMC drivers.

Ask these drivers to tell you how Removable Cylinder Walls, High Pressure Lubricating System, Removable Valve Lifter Assemblies, Positive Governor and other distinctively GMC features have lowered hauling costs.

Model K-16 has been reduced from $1995 to $1495, a cut of $500, without a change in the truck.

More details about this truck and the heavier models, also reduced in price, may be learned from GMC dealers.

FORDS RUN 34 MILES ON GALLON GASOLINE

Start Easy in Coldest Weather—Other Cars Show Proportionate Saving.

A new carburetor which cuts down gasoline consumption of any motor and reduces gasoline bills from one-third to one-half is the proud achievement of the Air-Friction Carburetor Co., 1255 Madison St., Dayton, Ohio. This remarkable invention not only increases the power of motors from 20 to 50 per cent, but enables every one to run slow on high gear. It also makes it easy to start a Ford or any other car in the coldest weather. You can use the very cheapest grade of gasoline or half gasoline and half kerosene and still get more power and more mileage than you now get from the highest test gasoline. All Ford owners can get as high as 34 miles to a gallon of gasoline. So sure are the manufacturers of the immense saving their new carburetor will make that they offer to send it on 30 days' trial to every car owner. As it can be put on or taken off in a few minutes by anyone, all readers of this paper who want to try it should send their name, address and make of car to the manufacturers at once. They also want local agents, to whom they offer exceptionally large profits. Write them today.—[Advertisement.

AUTOS COMBAT RAIL STRIKE.

National Automobile C. of C. Offers Assistance.

Nine Million Vehicles Ready for the Emergency.

Motor Trucks Prepared to Handle the Freight.

The interesting announcement made this week that Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, had offered the assistance of the entire automotive indutsry of the country to insure the public against serious suffering in the event of a railroad strike, is especially comforting in view of the fact that this assistance means real help in the form of over 9,000,000 automotive vehicles. Of these over 990,000 are trucks which last year hauled 1,200,000,000 tons of freight, or about half of the total handled by the railroads.

"This announcement," says Watt L. Moreland, vice-president and general manager of the Moreland Motor Truck Company, "is a striking indication of just what the motor truck has come to mean to the life of the people of this country. A railroad strike would be a serious thing, but as to actual suffering we can view the prospects with equanimity. Here in California we are especially fortunate, with our thousands of miles of splendid roads, our over 60,000 motor trucks, well-developed motor express and transit lines and our State's ability to produce within its borders for such transportation an abundance of the necessities for which people in other sections are dependent upon the long hauls of steam roads.

"While we must depend upon the steam roads and always will for such products and materials as come from long distances, the trucks of California will be able to take care of any emergency which may arise in so far as the transportation of the real necessities are concerned—and many of the luxuries as well."

Yellow Taxis Now on Steady Zerolene Diet.

The decision of the Yellow Taxicab Company to use Zerolene exclusively in their motor equipment again emphasizes the part that correct lubrication plays in the economical operation of large fleets of automotive equipment.

In the opinion of Mr. C. H. Hamilton, district sales manager of the Standard Oil Company, closer attention to the importance of correct lubrication as a factor in the cost of distribution has in many instances greatly reduced this expense, so that instead of being looked upon as a liability, the delivery equipment is considered a valuable asset.

Mr. Hamilton, in further discussing this subject, explained why different types of motor equipment require different grades of lubricating oil and stressed the importance of using the correct grade as specified by lubricating and automotive engineers, further stating that the lubricating engineers of the Standard Oil Company are always available to assist in an analysis of the requirements of operators of motor equipment.

After conclusive tests, the Yellow Taxicab Company found Zerolene No. 5 so satisfactory that it is now used in their entire fleet of sixty-nine taxicabs, which cover all parts of the city and vicinity.

Moreland Will Embark on Big Schedule Soon.

"After careful study of the situation," says Watt L. Moreland, vice-president and general manager of the Moreland Motor Truck Company, "we have definitely decided upon the biggest production for the year 1922 in the eleven years' history of the company. We are making the necessary preliminary plans for the production in our new Burbank plant of 2400 trucks during the year.

"The first of last month, after a period of quiet in production of several weeks, we started in on a limited schedule. The month showed a gratifying increase in sales and a general activity in prospects all over our Coast territory. This month we will make more trucks than last and gradually increase until by the first of the year we will be in full swing on our big 1922 schedule.

"All over the country labor troubles are being ironed out, prices are down to a less painful figure, money is much easier, buying is increasing and there is a strong upward tendency toward real business activity. This year, for many reasons, there was a marked letting down in truck buying. This to my mind means just so many more trucks to be bought from now on to keep pace with the inevitable forward rush of the truck as a vital, indispensable element of our economic life. We propose to be prepared.

"A new feature of our schedule for the coming year is a three-quarter-ton truck which we propose to produce. Full details concerning this new baby of the line I am not ready to make public, but it will be of typical Moreland quality at an attractive price and well worth waiting for.

"In view of conditions already developing in businesses closely allied with that of truck manufacture, I make the prediction now that by spring there will be an actual shortage in trucks for sale."

FARR RETURNS TO NORTHERN OFFICE.

H. A. Farr, head of the Pacific Coast tire division for the United States Rubber Company, left for his headquarters in San Francisco last week, following a several days' stay here, when he conferred with J. B. Magee, manager of the company's Los Angeles branch. Farr has just returned from a thirty days' business trip to New York, where are located the main offices of the company.

STEADY ACTIVITY AT DON LEE BODY WORKS.

Now that the summer season is over, the motorists of California are giving attention to repainting and general dolling-up of their cars for a very active winter season.

This rejuvenation of automobiles is reflected in the general activity of the Don Lee Coach and Body Works. There has not only been a tremendous increase in the amount of paint jobs to go through the establishment in the past month, but with the coming of the rainy season there has been a stampede to have tops repaired and new tops built. The top department has found an increasing demand for the special tops with sliding glass windows, but a great many motorists have taken advantage of the special service of recovering the old top bows with new material. This results in practically a new top.

The last rain also brought forth a big demand for new side curtains.

REVIEW VELIE RECORDS.

Wonderful Feats Accomplished Since First Light Six Made Appearance Two Years Ago.

The second anniversary of the day when the first Velie light six was completed in the Velie factories was celebrated throughout the country among Velie distributors last week, and special impetus was thereby given to the sales drive now being made to put the Velie at the top of the list for 1921.

Reviewing the accomplishments of this popular car, Harry Lord of the Lord Motor Car Company, Velie distributors said: "The Velie model 34 light six began its career in California by carrying loads of food and supplies to the fire fighters who were battling against the flames of the forest fire which raged in the Angeles reserve two years ago at this time. A few weeks after that a Velie model 34 was started from Los Angeles and after a fourteen-day battle won its way through snow, mud, debris and into Yosemite Valley, the first Southern California car to reach the floor of the Yosemite for the 1920 season, over the difficult Wawona road, and for this great achievement the coveted B. H. Dyas trophy was awarded to the Velie.

"The next Velie feat was made on the other side of the world, and it gave the Velie a degree of popularity in the British Isles that a foreign car has seldom been able to gain. In the great run from London to Edinburgh, where cars of many makes and many models were lined up to test their speed, endurance and economy, the Velie model 34 finished first and was awarded the gold medal.

"Then came the greatest of all Velie feats, and one of the most spectacular pieces of motor-car performance ever recorded—the trip into the bowels of the earth at Grand Canyon. In this trip the Velie 34 climbed successfully down to the bottom of the Grand Canyon of Arizona from the rim, then made its way over the boulder-strewn bottom to the very edge of the Colorado River, turned around and climbed back up and out of the canyon again under its own power, and then completed the trip back to Los Angeles. And the entire trip from Los Angeles to the bottom of the Grand Canyon and return to Los Angeles was made without putting a drop of water in the radiator of the Velie after it left Los Angeles at the start of the trip."

Many of the trucks listed in the roll call are known to have already passed the 100,000-mile mark. A number have gone over 200,000 miles and several have a service record of 300,000 miles, according to their owners. Another interesting fact, it is pointed out, is that these mileage figures represent the travel of all sizes of White trucks, the heavy duty vehicles vying with the lighter machines for endurance honors.

WESTWARD IS LOEW'S COURSE.

Vaudeville House is Large Incident in Progress.

But His Ambitions Run High for Picture-Making.

His Plans for Rex Ingram; His Future Home Here.

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT.

Vaudeville — or pictures? New York—or California? Which?

A question and an answer at once, if you know which way the breeze blows over the fortunate seas in the show world, and if you will note their particular effect on the sails of the theatrical fleet at present admiraled by Marcus Loew.

The answer is, of course, much more important than the question—and summed up it appears to be, Westward Ho!

Mr. Loew arrived in this city last Friday. He has come to the Coast for a visit. Incidentally, he will open a new theater. I say "incidentally" because that's the way he himself spoke of the housewarming at the emporium of varieties and the films, located on the corner of Seventh and Broadway.

The main objective of his trip is the Metro studios in Hollywood, which he controls, and for which at all times he entertains the most ambitious plans.

"The theater may look as if it is bigger than the studio," said Mr. Loew. "But it really isn't. There is no comparison. It is just an incident."

For the public, however, the new playhouse will be quite a large event. It is formally to throw its doors wide November 12. There will be an assembling of colonels and "colonels" ladies, not to speak of the scribes and perhaps a few of the pharisees which go to make any formal occasion of this kind.

Meanwhile Mr. Loew will be occupied with a large ratio of studio activities and a small ratio of the theater plans during his stay. He will probably remain here all of a month, if not longer.

Several important facts were cited by Mr. Loew in connection with his present trip. Of prime importance among these was the announcement of his ambition to send Rex Ingram abroad to make a spectacular feature. Mr. Loew himself has the idea for this already outlined in his mind, but declined to discuss this because it has not taken definite form.

"Making a picture abroad would only be feasible or advisable in the instance of a large spectacle, where the advantage of low-priced extras would prove an advantage," said Mr. Loew. "It is really too soon to

MARY FOLLOWS DOUG AT MISSION.

As the last fade-out of Douglas Fairbanks is flashed on the screen of the Mission Theater Tuesday night, and the "Three Musketeers" engagement is completed, the operators will be preparing to show Mary Pickford's latest picture, "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

Though films featuring these stars recently ran at the same time in two New York houses, this is the first time either has followed the other in the same theater locally.

Mary plays two parts in this Frances Hodgson Burnett story—the little lord and his mother. In the latter role she displays a side of her ability which will be altogether new to the public, a dramatic and emotional fervor the maturity of which is in tremendous contrast to the simple boyishness of the companion part.

William Robyn, lyric tenor, will make his Western debut Wednesday, furnishing part of the Mission's musical program.

California Revue Has Real Plot.

A California production quite up to the standards of the Great White Way is "Sun Kist," a musical melange which is announced for presentation at the Philharmonic Auditorium the week of November 7.

This revue was originated by Fanchon and Marco after their success of last year in the effervescent "Let's Go," which played in the East for forty-five weeks. "Sun Kist," it is said, has all the pep of the other production, but the rest of it is new.

There is actually a plot—a satirical one aimed at the motion-picture industry—which deals with the efforts of a Texas oil king to produce a feature film. The action takes place around the studios, which atmosphere, of course, makes for the utmost variety of costume and comedy.

The stars of "Sun Kist" are Dell Chain and Don Barclay, the latter once featured comedian with the Ziegfeld Follies. Others in the cast are the dancers, Sj Layman and Helen Kling, Hyman Meyer, Cornish Beck, Charlotte Woodruff, Lucita Corvera, Daisy De Witte, Helen Kennedy; Evyleen Gerald and Elsie Landa. The chorus is composed of the original "Sun Kist" California girls, whose beauty has attracted much comment.

"YANKEE GO-GETTER" IS HIP FILM OFFERING.

"A Yankee Go-Getter" is the title of the picture attraction at the Hippodrome Theater opening today. This film, starring Neva Gerber, is a red-blood story of Yankee pluck and adventure.

"Happy Days," a comedy skit, heads the vaudeville. Music and dances hold high carnival throughout this hilarious frolic.

A pair of charming girls are Donnabelle and Wilson, in harmony singing, planologues and violin interpretations.

The saying "Nobody Loves a Fat Man" does not go in the case of Fred Lewis, the comedian. Everybody loves Fred. Reason, he makes them laugh constantly.

That prolific writer, Jack Lait, is responsible for another breezy bit of fun called "Difficulties of Motoring." It is played by McGreevy and Doyle.

MAGIC OF THE SOUTH SEAS.

Treasures of Exotic Islands Uncovered by Film Players' Expedition.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

Bringing treasures of bright-colored native cloth, of baskets and shells, of coral, and even pearls, so that they looked when they landed like a bunch of Smithsonian Instituters, the members of the Far East Productions Company are with us aagain. Directed by Art Rosson, the company has been in Tahiti during the past three months, filming W. F. Alder's novel, "The Lagoon of Desire," with the author himself supervising the work.

"No, I'm not selling anything; I've just come in from Tahiti!" laughed Ruth Renick, who plays the heroine, as she landed in the lobby of the Alexandria Friday morning, laden with baskets and wraps, while a wicker basket reposed at her feet. From the basket came faint sounds.

"Oh, that's Mino," said Miss Renick. Mino is a pet monkey which will be added to the Renick household of pets.

It was at the beautiful country home of the Princess Teri Nuoi Pomeri that the company lived most of the time they were in Tahiti. The house, with its picturesque French architecture, is over a hundred years old.

"The island is the loveliest spot in the world, and all the natives are most wonderfully kind, hospitable and interesting," said Miss Renick. "The princess is extremely well educated and intelligent. But she loves her islands, and though she has traveled much, she has settled down to native ways, for she says her place is with her people. She is unmarried and probably never will be wed."

It seems her royal highness still after eight years suffers from the unhappy ending to the great love affair of her life. Her parents wanted her to marry a native of pure Tahitian strain, but she preferred another young man, a half caste. The young lovers were to elope one night, she was waiting as excited as a girl could be under the circumstances, when a casual caller reported the accidental death of her lover.

Now the Princess, who, of course, is Princess in name only, inasmuch as the French government owns the islands, spends her time among her people, who love her, and who obey her lightest request.

Every possible co-operation was given the Far East Productions in making their picture. The natives worked gladly, and showed themselves natural actors. Beside scenes made in Tahiti remote spots in the island of Moorea were likewise photographed, with the natives taking part, and some thrilling episodes were taken just outside the lagoon with Miss Renick and Edward Hearn holding onto the reef while the waves on the seaward side threatened to wash them off as each fresh breaker covered them.

A native feast on Moorea was given the company, which feast will also probably be seen in the picture. At this function the members of the company sat on the ground. A feature of the feast was a native dance, performed by the young men. They surrounded Miss Renick to do their stepping.

WEIRD DANCE.

"The dance was so weird and daring, and they kept dancing so close to me, I was frightened," she explained. "A native girl saw that I was alarmed, and called over to me, 'Oh, don't be scared; it's the dance of love they're performing for you!'"

Afterward she herself learned—ah!—one of the native dances—a mild one!

There are reported to be cannibals on the Marquis Islands, but they are rapidly dying out. They will be extinct in ten years.

Miss Renick says the natives of Tahiti seem to have no fear of them, and make trips to the islands where they live whenever occasion requires.

There are few motors and no street cars on Tahiti. Everybody rides bicycles, it seems.

"One of the funniest sights I ever saw," said Miss Renick, "was a fat, barefooted woman, clad only in the Quiet Rural Scenes Show at Clune's.

The atmosphere of childhood, of the "long ago" when meadow, orchard and pond made up our world, is perhaps the greatest appeal of "The Old Oaken Bucket," which comes to Clune's Broadway Theater today.

The story opens with scenes in the life of a business man who has found modern city life empty of real happiness, and cuts back to his boyhood days, with a succession of rural pictures that beautifully visualize the sentiment of the famous old song. "The bridge and the rock where the cataract fell," the swimming hole, the wildwood, the old well, are all shown with remarkable fidelity, it is said.

Some members of the cast are Joseph Smiley, Paul Kelley, Bobby Connelly, Violet Axzell, Mary Beth Darnelle and Kate Blanke.

In addition to "The Old Oaken Bucket," a new Christie comedy, a two-reeler called "Nothing Like It," will show. Dorothy Devore, who plays Cleopatra in this picture, wear costumes as beautiful and elaborate as those commonly seen in the serious drama. This is something new in the comedy field.

Barrymore in Semicomic Bennett Story.

Those who hold to the view that an actor must needs follow the tradition which has once been established by him in order to uphold his popularity upon stage or screen, will receive something of a shock, it is said, when they witness Lionel Barrymore in a picturization of Arnold Bennett's "The Great Adventure," at the Alhambra Theater today.

Barrymore is a name, which, as a general rule, is linked with drama of the more profound type. That Barrymore has the capacity to develop a remarkable characterization along comedy lines should prove interesting to his followers.

"The Great Adventure," in which he appears, provides him an opportunity to display a new side of his talent. The Arnold Bennett story has to do with a romancer who enters into a game of love half-heartedly and who experiences a series of comic adventures as a result.

An added attraction is Jack White's comedy, "For Land's Sake." Marvel Rea is featured as leading woman in the short-reeler.

Thomas Harris,

Who will do a large share of entertaining with the Georgia Minstrels at the Mason.

Real Darky Show Comes to Mason.

It seems to be a good time of year for minstrel shows. We have had Harvey's Minstrels, and now, coming to the Mason Operahouse for one week, beginning tonight, are Rusco and Hockwald's Famous Georgia Minstrels, a company of forty genuine darkies from the South, bringing with them all the melody and fun for which their race is noted.

Modern minstrelsy is evolved from the songs and jokes of the negro and the darky makes the best minstrel man as long as he can be kept from self-consciousness. Mr. Arthur Hockwald, the present manager of the Georgia Minstrels, is a native of the South, and from long experience knows just how to handle his performers to draw from them the best of their native ability.

This company has a record of thirty-three years of continuous travel in this and in foreign countries, which is the best possible guarantee of the quality of their entertainment. Daily street parades and band concerts every evening in front of the theater will be given in addition to the regular performances.

MAGIC OF THE SOUTH SEAS.

native, gaily colored pareu and a hat, with her hair down her back, riding a bicycle. Over her shoulders was swung a pole from which were suspended a string of fish and a big bunch of bananas. She was gaily pedalling home from market."

The native girls have a pretty custom of decorating with flowers strangers to whom they take a fancy, whom they see sitting in the parlors and on the verandas of the hotel or other public places.

"I was sitting on the veranda of the hotel in Papette one evening just before dinner," said Miss Renick, "when I saw a very beautiful young half caste girl observing me. She smiled sweetly, slipped out, and presently came back with the native flower of the country, the fragrant tarol, in her hand. She slipped up to me, and with a soft word or two placed the flower behind my ear. She turned out to be the lovely native girl, Pauki, who worked in our picture, and who was very clever, indeed, in her acting as well as doing some beautiful dancing.

EARLY WEDDING.

The girls, by the way, marry very early.

"I saw a little girl of 12 carrying a baby in her arms one day. 'Your little sister, I suppose?' I asked her.

"'No. My baby. Me married!' exclaimed the child proudly.

Legends abound, and the ex-queen is writing a book recording them.

There's an odd little legend in particular about the cocoanut, in which every native believes. It is touched on in the picture, and has to do with the likeness of an eel's head that is found in every cocoanut.

It seems a young girl was very ill, and longed for some shrimps. Her parents went to find some. They found a basket full but they belonged to an eel.

The girl was to be married, but the eel said he would let the girl have the shrimps only on condition she would marry him. The parents were aghast, but promised they would send the girl.

The girl got well and went to see the eel, and liked him so much that she consented to marry him. But finally she longed to visit her friends.

The eel told her to return to him next night. She didn't do so, and the eel set out to battle with the native men.

The men cut off his head nine times, but each time a new one grew, until the last time, he died.

The girl grieved so much that the eel's spirit came back and spoke to her. He said if she would plant the heads that something infinitely helpful to her people, and never harmful, would grow from them. She did so, and next morning nine cocoanut trees, full grown and bearing, were found to have sprung up where the heads were planted.

"And to this day," said the old native woman, who told the story to Miss Renick, "the cocoanut tree has been shelter, food, clothing and drink to us, and never has a cocoanut been known to hurt a native. Even in a high wind, with cocoanuts falling all around him, not one ever falls on a native. I know it's true, therefore, that story, and also as you can see for yourself, there's an eel's head in every cocoanut."

This story is being included in a number of legends of Tahiti, which Mr. Alder is collecting for the Century Magazine.

MUSICAL LEANINGS.

The natives are very fond of music, the native flute, called the viveo, and the accordion being the favorite instruments. In fact, you are likely to be awakened by the serenading of the natives playing these instruments at any time of night.

An old chief made two of the flutes for Miss Renick. Natives play these by breathing on them through the nose. Miss Renick is bringing them to Charles Wakefield Cadman, the musician, who is a great friend of hers.

The natives are also fond of pictures, their picture houses being bamboo structures, with bamboo seats. Mary Pickford is their favorite actress.

"A native girl, a friend of mine, asked me to go with her to a Pickford picture, one night," said Miss Renick, "and I found the place crowded. An interpreter was yelling his native interpretation of the subtitles at the top of his voice; the more thrilling the action, the more excited he got, and the higher rang his voice.

"The orchestra was very funny. It was made up for the most part of old-time native tom-toms and native flutes; but the long arm of John D. Rockefeller had reached out, even here, for the piece de resistance was a five-gallon Standard oil can, on which a native was beating time furiously and happily!"

Included in the company which has just returned are Art Rosson, director, Mrs. Rosson, Edward Hearn, Miss Renick, Messrs. Unander and Stanton, Walt Whitman and Harry Maynard.

"The Lagoon of Desire" is the first of a series of Far East Productions which will be put on. The next one is to be made in China.

SHAW COMEDY TO OPEN TOMORROW.

Community Players to Give "Fanny's First Play" Premiere Here.

"Fanny's First Play," Shaw's brilliant comedy, will open tomorrow evening at the Hollywood Community Theater for its first presentation on the Pacific Coast.

Its three acts are inclosed by a prologue and an epilogue. In the prologue we are shown a room in the country house of Count O'Dowda, who has fitted up a theater and engaged a company of professional actors for a trial performance of his daughter Fanny's first original play. The curtain then rises upon the play itself, which deals satirically with the dilemmas of two middle-class families who are suddenly threatened by a serious scandal. The characters are delightfully drawn, and the lines are among the most irresistible that Shaw has written.

The epilogue consists of comment on the play by critics from London, and involves conjecture as to the authorship of the play, which finally leads to a discussion of contemporary English playwrights, among them being Shaw himself. No one writes about Shaw quite as well as Shaw, so the epilogue is perhaps the most brilliant and stimulating part of the performance.

The players appearing in picture is "The Ten Dollar this production are Helen Jerome Eddy, whose latest Raise;" Roy Atwell who recently played in New York in "Apple Blossoms;" Arthur Clare, with Henry Irving for four seasons; Janet Scott, Theodor von Eltz, Thomas Ricketts, Elsa Rendel, Madge Houghton, Eric Snowdon, Gilbert Clayton, Helenita Lieberg, Phillip Hubbard, John Prince, Josephine Dillon and Wheeler Dryden.

DUNCAN BATTLES FOR FILM REALISM.

Those who demand realism in the films will get a liberal allotment thereof, it is averred, in "Where Men Are Men," at the New Pantages, next week.

William Duncan is both star and director, and his company thinks the boss worked that realism thing to extremes. But what Duncan asked of others he required of himself as well.

For a starter he left his hair and whiskers grow for six weeks, to get the right "desert rat" tonsorial effect. But that was just a minor affair.

Duncan is a husky prospector in "Where Men Are Men," the denizen of a mining camp in Death Valley. Of course, there has to be a bad man in every mining camp, and the hero has to run counter to him all through the five reels, with a big scene in the last thousand feet where hero and bad man mix it.

Now a thoughtful and self-considering director, having to play the leading role himself, would select a player for his opponent who would be easy meat. But not so Duncan's. For the role of Dutch Monoham, he picked out Tom Wilson, former trainer and sparring partner of Bob Fitzsimmons.

Duncan says he picked "out" Wilson, but Tom says Duncan picked "on" him for the part. Wilson says the star gets too serious in his fights.

Duncan, on the other hand, says Wilson thought he was still training Bob Fitzsimmons. Neither was actually disabled—but they didn't look the same for days.

However—they are friends again.

Also, Duncan is once more getting his shave and hair cut regularly.

GUEST OF ITALIAN SOCIETY.

Rudolph Valentino, who played the leading role in George Melford's production of "The Sheik," was the guest of honor in San Francisco recently at a banquet given by "Italia Virgis," a prominent social organization of the Italian colony of the Bay City. Mr. Valentino is now in San Francisco playing the male lead in the sea story, "Moran of the Lady Letty," which is being directed by George Melford. After the banquet the members of the Italian party and Mr. Valentino went to the society's athletic club, where a program was held. Mr. Valentino was called upon to make a speech. The actor is of Italian and French parentage, his father being pure Italian and his mother French.

Edward Everett Horton,

Who is evoking many smiles with his clever interpretation of the leading role in "My Lady Friends" at the Majestic.

"MY LADY FRIENDS" IN FIFTH WEEK OF RUN.

The delightful farce, "My Lady Friends," will begin the fifth week of a very successful run this afternoon at the Majestic Theater.

"My Lady Friends" contains a world of fun in the story of the rich married man who insisted on spending his money on some young girls because his thrifty wife would not permit him to do the same for her. He succeeds in becoming entangled with them to such an extent that he is compelled to call upon his lawyer friend to come to his rescue. The friend does this to his sorrow.

Edward Everett Horton has the amusing role of the spendthrift husband. Mary Newcomb is charming as the wife. Sara Sothern, Franklin Pangborn, Marie Curtis, Stanley Taylor, Caroline Rankin, Lela Bliss, Dorothy Wetmore and Christine Mayo are in the supporting cast.

Varied Climes Represented by Child Actors

It takes all sorts of children to make motion pictures. Just now those of three nationalities and two races are acting in Goldwyn productions. There are Chinese children for "What Ho the Cook!" a Gouverneur Morris story. There are Russian children for Anzia Yezierska's drama, "Hungry Hearts," and there are a group of dainty little Anglo-Saxons who have been engaged for the spectacular scenes of an unusual drama titled "The Octave of Claudius." When all these children meet at the gate to report for work, they look at each other with bewilderment. They neither quarrel nor do they mingle.

A little Chinese boy, who plays an acting role in "What Ho the Cook!" is a model of deportment. Although he is a regular boy at heart, his face wears an expression of sagacious innocence. Chaperoned by his dignified grandfather, he realizes that he must take his work seriously.

To the Russian children acting comes naturally; in fact, it is just a form of play. When they finished their play on the setting, they romp about the studio, dressed for the pictures in the costumes once worn by their immigrant parents.

The little blonde Anglo-Saxons are self-confident. They are experienced in dancing, most of them. To them the Chinese boy, with his philosophical manner, is a curiosity and something of a mystery. They won't join in the antics of the Russians; they are much too aristocratic.

All the children are carefully guarded by their parents. And the fathers and mothers of the three races are very much alike. With a smile, the elderly Chinese warns his boy that he must be respectful. With a severe look the Anglo-Saxon mother reminds her daughter that she must behave properly. And with a good-natured slap the Russian mother restrains her children from sliding down the banisters of the wardrobe department.

A BASEBALL ROMANCE.

"Mamma," said the Young Thing. "I want you to stop forcing me into Mr. Gott-it's company all the time. People are talking."

"But, my dear," protested the Solicitous Lady, "he is a wonderful catch!"

"He may be, Mamma, but if you keep on thinking you are pitcher, he'll get onto your curves and throw the game."—[Richmond Times-Dispatch.

WESTWARD IS LOEW'S COURSE.

discuss details of the project as yet. It would, however, be our policy to make this picture wherever the suitable settings could be found. Where large numbers of extras would be required we would probably confine our activities to Italy, where atmosphere can be obtained at about 5 cents a day per person.

"Conditions are not satisfactory in Europe for any extended program of picture-making. We have no intention of carrying out activities beyond one or two pictures.

"California is the one and only place to make films. That, we have determined. There are consequently no productions being made by Metro in the East.

"For the present, Metro will not likely expand on production. The output will be about twenty-eight program features and four or five specials.

"This is not an opportune time for expansion. Conditions in the country do not permit it. You do not feel this situation locally. Everything is in excellent shape here, but through the East, and especially up in Canada and the northern States, you will find the depression very dismaying.

"In the South, things are better. There are some points where conditions are bad, but the dullness is not so general as in the North."

Despite the conditions of which Mr. Loew speaks, his own circuit has gone booming along. Los Angeles will have about the one hundred and thirty-fourth or one hundred and thirty-fifth house added to that circuit, several being about to open. Mr. Loew controls or has a chief interest in all these theaters.

"We have acquired no less than seventeen new theaters since August," he stated. "In all but one of our houses we combine pictures with vaudeville to make the entertainment. The only straight vaudeville house is Loew's Roof in New York, where an evening program of variety entertainment is given."

It is an interesting fact that while Mr. Loew's name is essentially associated with vaudeville, he has not seen a turn himself in a number of years. With pictures, it is quite different, he sees these all the time at his office in New York, where he passes on them.

The Loew business offices are among the largest in the theatrical world—quite naturally, in view of the varied interests of Mr. Loew both as producer and exhibitor of pictures, and vaudeville magnate. He himself estimates the total of persons working for him at 500.

Locally the management of Mr. Loew's theater enterprise will be in the hands of Ackerman & Harris prominently associated with vaudeville on this Coast. The resident manager of the new house will be Nat Holt, formerly identified with the Hippodrome as manager.

The programs will combine musical features with vaudeville and pictures. The opening picture presentation will be "A Trip to Paradise," starring Bert Lytell.

Mr. Loew was accompanied on his trip West by his wife and is registered at the Ambassador Hotel.

But the day is coming not far hence when he will have his own home in Los Angeles. He's quite definitely decided that.

"I only wish I could stay longer this time," he remarked. "It will only be a few years now until my boys can take hold of the reigns of my New York offices; in fact they are doing that already, but as soon as they are sure of themselves, you can depend on it that I shall come West to live."

One of Mr. Loew's sons is at present in Europe. The other David Loew is in charge of the New York offices during his father's absence.

"Yes," concluded Mr. Loew, "and he has a boy 20 months old, who is just learning to call me grandpop."

LYTELL DESCRIBES FACIAL LINES OF AGE.

Bert Lytell, recognized as a specialist in makeup, is finding use for all of his knowledge in this direction in the making of his picture, "The Phantom Bride." For in it he appears as his own father in an important sequence. "Simply disguising one's self as an old man, or to assume some other character, is not a difficult task," said the Metro star, in explaining his methods of making up. "But to make up in such a manner as to add a given number of years to your own age, without losing your own identity—that isn't quite so easily accomplished.

"To achieve this it is necessary to study the lines of the face, to know enough of character to realize the meaning of every new line and shadow. Certain lines from the corners of the eyes add years to the face, deep lines under the eyes often give a certain dignity to age, while the lines about the mouth must be handled carefully in order to avoid the appearance of sadness, or anger when it is not intended."

was said long ago that there is ing new under the sun, and ly anyone in this day and ght be pardoned for supposhat it is no longer possible to riginal in the matter of locale motion-picture production. To who has kept track of the game last few years it would seem the world has been pretty ghly ransacked. Yet a half elaborate photodramas now ready for release prove that is territory yet unexploited.

"Beggar's Opera" Mason.

"The Sheik" Grauman's Rialto.

"Idle Class" Now on View at Kinema.

Charles Chaplin's picture, "The Idle Class," is to have its initial local showing at the Kinema.

Ever since the tremendous success of "The Kid" motion-picture fans have wondered just what sort of picture Charlie would give his followers next. He has provided in his latest comedy a plot which reveals his versatility.

Chaplin is seen in a dual role—first as the happy hobo, ever persecuted by the cops and then as a mirror of fashion, a devotee of the social life, a beau brummel and a millionaire in one.

While "The Idle Class" is shorter than "The Kid," it is said to be packed with laughs.

Edna Purviance and Mack Swain are seen in the support of Chaplin.

As an added attraction, the Kinema Theater will present David Butler in "Bing Bang Boom." The history of American rural drama is written in capital letters in this latest of Dave's pictures, it is said.

A cast of popular favorites are seen in his support, including Doris Pawn, Edwin Wallock, Carl Stockdale and others.

Among other features are a novelty stage presentation, "The Spirit of Halloween," with the dance numbers arranged by Ernest Belcher; pictorial review, Literary Digest Topics, Screen Snapshots and a musical program.

LOOM A PUZZLER.

Laskyites Look Long for Proper Atmosphere in "Minister."

One of the tough problems encountered during the filming of "The Little Minister" at the Paramount West Coast studio was discovering someone who knew how to operate an old Scotch loom of the vintage of 1830. Director Penrhyn Standlaws ordered the loom for the scene, which shows the interior of the Scotch weaver's home of which Barrie wrote, and the property department, after a long search, found such a contrivance in a home of an old Scotch family in Los Angeles.

But that was only half of the problem.

None of the 1921 actors knew anything about running a loom. It was as unfamiliar to them as Scotch whisky.

So another search had to be instituted for a weaver. The scene was delayed while a frantic effort was made to locate one whose knowledge of the art was sufficient to fathom the intricacies of the ancient loom. The right man was found and the loom now hums merrily on, while the camera registers the process.

Wicked, Witty Old Opera to Show at Mason

John Gay, author of "The Beggar's Opera," which comes to the Mason for a week beginning November 7, lies buried in Westminster Abbey, and upon his grave are cut these words that show as no other words can the nature of the man and of his famous opera:

"Life is a jest and all things show it;
I thought so once and now I know it."

It has been recorded that Gay was "very fat and fond of eating." He was also very fond of fun, and had a practical knowledge of human nature. Consequently, "The Beggar's Opera," when recently revived in London, had a run of over three years, despite many attempts to suppress it. For although it is exceedingly frank, as befits a picture of life in a debtor's prison in eighteenth century England, it is nevertheless considered one of the most melodious and humorous works ever written, and has the swing and action of a modern detective story.

The parentage of this piece was unusually distinguished; Dean Swift had a hand in it, as did Haydn, who composed some of the music. It is not surprising, therefore, that even after Arnold Bennett had finished trimming down the lines that were too unvarnished for modern consumption, there was plenty of spice left.

"HAPPINESS" SOON TO END ENGAGEMENT.

"Happiness" will enter the final week with today's matinee at the Morosco Theater.

Bessie Eyton and Gayne Whitman have the principal roles in this comedy of charm.

Helene Sullivan, William Austin, Vivienne La Rue, Joseph Eggenton, Dorothy Eggenton, Charles Buck and Estelle Allen have all shared in the honors.

"Happiness" is called by critics a cousin to that author's former success, "Peg O' My Heart." Miss Eyton is playing the part that Laurette Taylor created in New York.

The next attraction will be Ruth Chatterton's success, "Come Out of the Kitchen."

Chinese Magic Workers Head Pantages Bill.

Heading a vaudeville show of six acts, the Royal Peking trope of Chinese magicians will make their appearance at the matinee tomorrow at the New Pantages. The other features of the show are "The Edge of the World," a futuristic color drama, Gilbert and Saul, a comedy team who specialize on violin and piano-accordion, Ambros and Jeannette, appearing as the French "chappie" and the American girl in Paris, Garry Owen, the musical monologist, and the El Roy sisters in "A Tale of Three Cities."

William Duncan and Edith Johnson are co-stars in "Where Men are Men," a picture drama of Death Valley mining camps in which the lost mine, "The Peg-Leg," plays an important part.

It is said that Alexander Pantages offers in this show the headliners from three shows that played consecutive weeks in Eastern theaters immediatly prior to signing the Pantages contract. These three shows were run together, and the minor acts weeded out, giving the Western vaudeville fans the cream of all three shows in one.

VROOM IN LASKY FEATURES

Frederic Vroom has a rather unique engagement at the Lasky studios. He is playing the part of the Lieutenant-Governor of Canada in a dramatization of Gilbert Parker's novel, "The Lane That Has No Turning," in which Agnes Ayers is the star. At the same time he is in the cast of a new photoplay by Cecil De Mille.

GORGEOUS SETS ALLURE.

New York Sees Slow-Tempo Production of "The Wandering Jew;" Tyrone Power; Lead.

BY JAMES WHITAKER.
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—The curtain rises slowly on "The Wandering Jew" in the Knickerbocker Theater. The dark stage of the first act is slowly illuminated. Tyrone Power intones language slowly. The plot slowly progresses over two centuries of the legendary Hebrews' existence and a great deal of the geography of Europe of the middle ages. Intermissions are prolonged while loving stage hands replace one beautiful scene with another—slowly. And a good orchestra fills the languorously fleeting moments with slow music.

It is perhaps difficult to hurry a play in robes. I suppose the natural reaction to his costume on the part of an actor clad in a heavy purple nightgown is an inclination to take a nap. We were therefore glutted with elongated acting in the Knickerbocker last night.

Temple Thurston's play does not demand so lingering an emphasis. Mr. Power, who is the Jew, plumbs every line with his mean and meaningful bass. But the play is not half so deep as he thinks. It munches lightly and with an accomplished stage techniquan's skill, on the most flamboyant possibilities of the legend.

It takes just so much of two centuries of medieval pageant as the moving picture reporter for your favorite and snappiest news reel takes of the Elks' parade—a float, a Mayor there and the Flag to finish neatly.

Mr. Thurston finishes his Jew very neatly in the thirteenth century with a tableaux which represents him dying at the stake for another's fault, and redeemed and glorified martyr in a halo of pretty red fire.

And—to travel backward over the plot—he has preceded this with an episode in the wanderer's life where he is the persecuted Jew, with a glimpse into the magnificences and heroics of the first crusade, wherein the dark hero is an unrepentant and swashbuckler, victorious over the strength of the knight errantry of Europe on the field of the journey by day and victorious over the virtue of knight errantry's wife in his silk tent by night; and he has started his scenario with the curse—when the Jew who, according to legend, spits into the face of Christ on the road to Calvary is doomed to roam the world and sicken of life until the Messiah shall come to him again.

Each episode is a picture. The stage of the Knickerbocker hangs five glorious canvases. They are the five thrills of the production. Their electrical effect endures for many minutes after each curtain rises. It takes five minutes of the actor's elocution to spoil the picture. Often, while the cast chanted Mr. Thurston's blankety-blank verse tonight, I wished he had written his play without words.

The reporter saw this same play in London whence it has been imported by Messrs. Belasco and Erlanger. The fact that the stage pictures are pretty would suggest that the former's fine post-Raphaelite hand has touched the American production. But this is not the case. But for a bit of dry cleaning and irony the scenery is just as it came from the boat that fetched it from England.

It was a perfect bit of pseudo-religious bunkum there, and the wise reporters have tried to keep its spacious London appeal in the same camphor that protected its canvases. I imagined that the sea voyage had taken some of the starch out of it, as sea voyages take the fluff out of Paris gowns.

But that may be because I was seeing it a second time. "The Wandering Jew" is not a play to be seen a second time.

EDITORS IN DISGUISE.

"The Right to Strike" in the comedy theater, presents a number of editors disguised as actors trading best bits from their favorite editorials with one another, according to a system which has some of the more mathematical characteristics of conversation. It is played with bawl, pathos and bounce by unscrupulous play actors. As a play it is absolutely negligible.

It develops in a small English

MUSICAL LOS ANGELES.

Noted Critic Writes His General Impressions of City and Its Lyric Future.

BY PIERRE V. R. KEY.

To the stranger within a city's gates there sometimes is apparent a ray of light and an angle that do not impress similarly the resident. An outside viewpoint not infrequently offers as a consequence what is less clearly observed by those who see and hear, day after day, what a city may have to give.

When the editor of The Times called to our attention these facts we recognized the possibilities for consideration of what Los Angeles possesses in music ways—the accomplishments already set down in the history of the town; those who have participated in those accomplishments, and . . . the potentialities. So we approach the subject with our interest made the keener through what experiences we already have met in Los Angeles, and especially those of recent days which introduced us to the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

We wish at the outset to have no misunderstanding as to our intentions. We admit having the slenderest acquaintance with the details of what has been done here musically, and what has been attempted without success. In a way we are familiar with undertakings that have been of an import sufficient to leave a record that has been talked of in places remote from Los Angeles. What we do not know is each phase of the city's music development.

From such superficial news gathering as we have been able to do within a space of time all too brief it is evident that Los Angeles has gone farther and quicker than the average United States city. With natural advantages, Los Angeles put on its music cloak, and from season to season improvements have been made to that cloak in the way of cut, of adornment. Now it is a modern music garment, one to be worn where other modern cloaks are seen.

In brief, Los Angeles is getting its music feet on solid ground. After years of steady striving there has been built here a fabric worthy of serious consideration. The musicians are here, and music appreciation is here. With creative and interpretative talent in that degree required to make for genuine music achievement, the city appears also to have people enough with inherent good taste to make available consumers for what music is dispensed.

It is our opinion that the Los Angeles Philharmonic is the keystone arch on which the music future of the community is to rest. We have heard this organization on only two occasions — a week ago last Friday, when the opening concert of its third season took place, and on the evening following. The same program was presented at these concerts, and it was a program in substance which compares with what our best symphony orchestras prepare for their publics.

We have expressed in these columns our views in general regarding the orchestra and its conductor, Mr. Walter Rothwell. Deliberate consideration does not alter our first formed impressions. Our respect for the Los Angeles Philharmonic is deep, just as it is for the abilities and ideals of its music leader. But what conductor and orchestra have already accomplished would not have been possible if vision and money had not been forthcoming.

FAR-SIGHTED ACTION.

Our consciousness of these two paramount facts prompts dwelling momentarily upon the impulse which caused Mr. W. A. Clark, Jr., to seek a realization of what he saw in his mind's eye. He must have looked far into the future of Los Angeles' music welfare before deciding to assume so heavy a financial burden as must be borne to carry the Philharmonic over its first five-year period. Half a million dollars will scarcely cover the total deficit which must ensue.

Whatever it was, then, which moved Mr. Clark to found the Philharmonic, we find already apparent ample justification. We trust that the people will give proper thought to the value Los Angeles is to derive through its symphony orchestra. Those who are helping carry it forward through their patronage are, of course, clear-seeing folk. What we hope will come to pass is a widespread appreciation.

Introductory evidences may be found in the response shown by the public school children to the concerts given for their benefit. Inquiries we have made disclose encouraging facts, and it is our belief that ten years of such effort will develop for the Philharmonic a future clientele which will supply the sinews of its existence.

We have every confidence in the steady improvement of the Philharmonic's personnel and in its efficiency. It takes more than two years to mold a symphony unit of the highest rank. There are weaknesses in the Philharmonic ranks which both Messrs. Clark and Rothwell—we feel assured—appreciate. We are equally positive that these weaknesses will be gradually strengthened, and that little by little the orchestra will expand in those essentials which will make it conspicuous in tonal fiber, in technical unity, making possible that superlative precision necessary to the highest sort of attack and release of the phrase, and in a degree of responsiveness which several times was suggested during the two concerts we heard.

It is our firm belief that the artistic progress of the current season will be considerably greater than may be casually thought likely. Surely, with such spirit as exists in the orchestra, and with the sincerity we believe governs Mr. Rothwell's endeavors, there is supplied a combined element of rare value. Aware of Mr. Clark's whole-hearted support and constructive breadth in conveying all that is required as a stimulating medium, there must arise a measure of harmony which will help in a vital manner to achieve the ends sought.

THE SMALLER ENSEMBLES.

Next in real impovtance, as regards influence exerted on musical Los Angeles comes the chamber music organizations. There are, we believe, six societies: The Philharmonic Quartet, comprised of Sylvain Noack (first violin,) Henry Svedrofsky (second violin,) Emile Ferir (viola) and Ilya Bronson ('cellist;) the Trio Intime, Jay Plowe (flautist,) Ilya Bronson ('cellist) and Alfred Kastner (harpist;) the Los Angeles Trio, Calmon Luboviski (violin,) Ilya Bronson ('cellist) and May MacDonald-Hope (pianist;) the Zoellner Quartet, Amadeus Zoellner (first violin,) Antoinette Zoellner (second violin,) Joseph Zoellner (viola) and Joseph Zoellner, Jr. ('cello;) the Netherland, Trio, Christian Timmner (violin,) Anne Timmner ('cello) and Brahm Van den Berg (pianist;) the Ensemble Moderne, Henri de Busscher (oboist,) Emil Ferir (viola,) Blanche Rogers-Lott (pianist) and Fern Fitzwater (soprano.)

The people of this city owe it to themselves to see that these organizations receive audiences of adequate size and appreciation whenever they appear. And they need not fear of being bored by music which is dry. All chamber music programs cannot be ideal in make-up; there is certain to be a lapse here and there. But enjoyment of the highest type comes from listening to competent interpretation of the finer chamber music works, and those who would do themselves everlasting good should not overlook hearing what the great composers had to say in this field of the art.

There is not space enough to touch upon the part the other Los Angeles music associations have played in their contributions to upbuilding the city's music taste. There is the Ellis Club of male voices and the Lyric Club of feminine voices, both of which are directed by J. B. Poulin. We have heard much favorable mention of the California Federation of Music Clubs, of which Mrs. Cecil Frankel is president, and we feel confident that here is a force—as has been proved elsewhere—that must carry music forward in the way it should go. The Orpheus Club, with J. P. Dupuy conducting, gives young singers a deal of benefit, and, of course, the Los Angeles Oratorio Society and Director John Smallman are serving a constituency which feels the need of this splendid kind of music.

The Musicians' Club is a solid organization and, we are informed, serves as a stabilizer in many respects. The Dominant Club, too, where the ladies reign, also is doing positive service in a big cause. The Ebell Club, the Friday Morning Club, and the Hollywood Women's Club all have music sections, and all appear to have found an encouraging response to their efforts.

The Gamut Club may not do what others do musically, but it offers a helping hand in a variety of ways. Then there is the Pasadena Music and Art Association, the Pasadena Community Orchestra, conducted by Will Rounds, and the various community music societies which help in their respective fashions.

We probably have omitted some organizations, without any intent to do so. If we have we ask their forbearance and the reader's. It would be gratifying to speak of the individuals, were such a thing possible. There are quite a number of musicians who must have helped substantially to build up what now obtains here musically. The composers, the interpretative musicians—singers and instrumentalists—and the educators all deserve consideration. There is unquestionably a debt due, also, to those music conservatories which have held to ideals.

CONCERT AND OPERA.

From the public's standpoint the name of L. E. Behymer deserves its place in this article. For years he has been the purveyor of music as supplied by the distinguished and less distinguished artists of the music world. In concert and opera he has had so active a part that one instinctively associates this impresario with an enterprise which touches or seeks a unique objective. We are also aware of F. W. Blanchard's activities.

Casting the metaphorical eye over the music field of Los Angeles permits much to be seen. For it is not a small field. In the far corners of earlier years there can be caught glimpses of New York's Metropolitan Opera Company, of other opera companies, of visiting organizations which attempted much and succeeded oftener than not in their accomplishment.

The former Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra did a deal of pioneer work, and the city owes greatly to those public-spirited men and women who made possible its opportunities. What else may have been tried, or done, by individuals or organizations we are not in a position to state.

At the moment there is considerable interest being shown in the municipal bureau of music, which is being conducted by the Chamber of Commerce, with Miss Antoinette Ruth Sabel as its executive head. There is a touch of novelty to this enterprise, but it is not likely to be the only one reflecting this element. Take, for purposes of concrete illustration, the matter of opera.

We have had in our mind for a long time an idea for giving opera its rightful opportunity in those cities so far removed from the source of ready supply that obtaining performances meant an outlay of much money for a small quantity. Los Angeles is such a city. San Francisco is another. Two additional cities which must pay well for the finer brands of serious opera are Seattle and Portland. We recognize the benefits of representations by the Gallo company, and it is fortunate that this organization comes to this part of the country. Our belief is that it is time to launch generally—and that a test may be made to better advantage here than anywhere else in the United States—opera which shall rest on the basis of support in those districts it serves, and that may give opportunities to young singers.

A CHANCE FOR TALENT.

Some experts will no doubt rise to object that fine opera is not possible with inexperienced principals, and they are partly right. But we have a plan that offers practicable possibilities. It is not completely worked out, nor is it original with us. Others have felt as we feel, and regard such a project as practicable.

Personally, we should like to see an organization formed here which would provide for the development of unquestioned singing talent, and have that talent amalgamated with experienced principal singers. The details need not be set forth here. The suggestion is sufficient to give some progressive people a fine project-in-the-making to think about.

It would be necessary to form a corporation with a large capital, and it would also be necessary to move for at least a year in preparing a course offering certain success.

With an orchestra available in each city, and a chorus, and potential singers to take subordinate roles until they had grown in capabilities that would allow them to graduate into first parts, there would be secured part of the nucleus. Then, with seasoned first-role artists engaged to furnish the bulwark imperative, and a managing director and a first conductor of demonstrated fitness, the outcome would be only a matter of wise guidance and patient administration.

We can see such a project developed on the Pacific Coast into a broad and splendid institution. We can see public-spirited men and women who would contribute to such an enterprise made happy by its growth. For it would offer an outlet to those of our singing youth who cannot find operatic routine under convenient conditions—often under morally decent conditions.

We have discussed this idea with several Los Angeles people for whose opinions we have a genuine regard. One of them is Mrs. Caroline E. Smith, secretary and treasurer of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra. The very fact that Mrs. Smith has been actively identified with a large music undertaking for only two years makes her opinion in this matter one we wished to have.

Her judgment, we were confident, would not be warped through being too thoroughly saturated with music. She has shown in a short time qualities which are those that should be more generally found in public spirited music endeavors. Not that she might be in any way identified with such an opera enterprise as we have in mind; she is busy enough with her Philharmonic responsibilities. But we need in the music field more executives of her character.

Perhaps when we return to Los Angeles a year hence (if not earlier) it may be possible to lay out this opera project in detail. The time will not be ripe for another twelvemonth. When it is, and if it be formulated and launched along lines of wisdom and integrity, we have visions for the youth of our land no less than for their elders who will constitute the audiences available for opera representations. And when such a situation finally arrives we should find Los Angeles in a musical position envied by most of the others in the land, and equaled only by those few which are older, larger and have the advantage of having had a big start along the road to be traveled.

Will Dance to Gypsy Strains.

Picturesque Entertainers.

Betty Clifford Weadon and Shelia O'Gallagher, who will take part in the program at the Cinderella Roof.

"CLAY" IS FINISHED.

Model Record Attained is Report in Du Pont Picture.

Finished exactly according to schedule, the final scenes have been shot for "Clay," starring Miss Du Pont at Universal City. Very little night work has been necessary and everything has gone off with sailing colors, it is said.

"Clay" has caused interest, for it is regarded as something different. It has a subtle theme that runs consistently through the entire story. And though there are no stupendously elaborate scenes, the sets for the picture are unusually attractive.

The cast comprises Herbert Heyes, leading man, Bertram Grassby, Hector Sarno, Eugene Corey, Eric Mayne, Earl Lee, J. A. Roi and Dorothy Dale.

A huge statue which was modeled by Fran kWebster, a professional artist, is really worthy of a place in the cast, too, as it plays such an important part in the story.

PLAYCRAFTERS TO TRY OUT PROGRAM.

Instead of the usual meeting in the Tajo Building tomorrow evening, members of the Playcrafters will be entertained by Sydney Sprague, president of the club, at his home, 146 South Larchmont Boulevard. Three one-act plays will be given by the Stagecrafters, a group of actors affiliated with the Playcrafters.

The plays are "Fatherhood" by Sydney Sprague, "Pierrot of the Minute" by Ernest Dowson, and "The Last Kiss," adapted from the French by Karyl Marker.

Mrs. Estelle Lawton Lindsey will give a talk to the club on Chinese and Korean drama.

This is the second monthly social function of the club open to active members only. At these meetings plays by members are given a try-out. Later there will be public performances.

BUTLER WRITES ON MOVIES.

In the Photodramatist for November Ellis Parker Butler has an article on "What Ails the Pictures." Zona Gale, author of "Miss Lulu Bett," has an interesting article. Bryan Irvine lets the photoplaywrights in on the secrets of the studio reading staff; Beulah Marie Dix humorously and cleverly assails the censors. Other interesting articles appear by Cecil B. DeMille, Bradley King, Alfred Hustwick, Alice Evton, Ted LeBerthon and Harry Brand.

GYPSY DANCES.

Unique Embroidered Costumes to Embrace Numbers.

Betty Clifford Weadon and Shelia O'Gallagher, gifted dancers, will appear at the Cinderella Roof this week in a double Hungarian Gypsy number. A feature of the costuming is the fact that the embroidered silk and quaint lace were purchased direct from the original gypsies, it is said. The price for the gorgeous hand-worked gypsy shawl used by Miss Weadon in American money was $14.50, the cost being low on account of exchange conditions, it is stated.

An eccentric Slavic solo will be another number, rendered to especial music, garnered from the Russian peasant classics.

JAPAN LIKES FUN FILMERS.

On taking his leave from the Mack Sennett lot, K. Mukaeda, general manager of the Oriental Pictures Corporation, was almost insistent in his request that Mr. Sennett visit the Orient. Many of the Sennett comedy stars are popular in the Far East. "The people of my country think Ben Turpin is very funny—also your pretty comedians," said Mr. Mukaeda. "Charlie Murray, too, was very popular in Sennett pictures and we would like to have him, while making his personal apeparance, include in his itinerary, our country. We were all very sorry when Mabel Normand stopped appearing in your pictures, and our fans were happy again when they learned she had returned. Now since we have had advance notices that Miss Normand is to be starred in "Molly O," everybody is waiting and wanting to know when the production will reach our country. It would be wonderful if Miss Normand would only decide to visit our people."

TUCKER'S LAST PICTURE.

The last production of George Loane Tucker, and the only one since "The Miracle Man," namely, "Ladies Must Live," will open at Grauman's Theater tomorrow.

This picture shows Mr. Tucker's treatment at its best and broadest, it is said, and makes pathetically clear what a loss his death was to the screen world.

As in "The Miracle Man," Betty Compson is cast as the heroine. The story moves from extreme to extreme—from poverty to wealth, from sorrow to happiness.

Besides Miss Compson, the cast of "Ladies Must Live" includes Robert Ellis, Mahlon Hamilton, Leatrice Joy, Hardee Kirkland, Gibson Gowland, Jack Gilbert, Cleo Madison, Snitz Edwards, Lucille Hutton, Lule Warrenton, William Mong, Jack McDonald, Marcia Manon and Arnold Gregg. The scenario, as well as the production, was done by Mr. Tucker, it being an adaptation of a Saturday Evening Post story by Alice Duer Miller.

Gloria Swanson in "Under the Lash" will be seen for the last time today.

BEVAN NATURALIZED.

Under the name of William Bevan, Billy, as he has been popularly introduced to the screen and its followers in Mack Sennett comedies, appeared a few days ago before Judge Bledsoe, in the District Court of Los Angeles, to receive his final naturalization papers, and is now a full fledged American. Bevan was born in Australia, but migrated to the States ten years ago. For the past five years, or, as a matter of fact, ever since he has had a permanent address, he has been working to become an American.

RUSSIAN STAR WILL APPEAR IN "CAMILLE."

Modernized Version of Play to be Presented by Nazimova at California.

Appearing in "Camille," as modernized for the screen by June Mathis, Nazimova follows in the tradition which has led most noted actresses to include this role in their repertoire. Kyne Story Shows Editor Who Cleans Up

Under the title “Red Courage,” Peter B. Kyne's story, “The Sheriff of Cinnabar,” comes to the Superba Theater today, with Hoot Gibson in the leading role.

In this story Mr. Kyne shows the West in a rather new aspect. Instead of the usual vigilante proceedings a country newspaper is used in the fight against and final destruction of unscrupulous political powers.

If it requires a stretch of imagination to picture Hoot Gibson as a small-town editor, it is recalled that in the good old days editors had to be fighters, too, and no one can dispute that Gibson is a good fighter.

At any rate, in the part of Pinto Peters he manages to clean up the town, is elected Sheriff, fires the corrupt Mayor, solves an intricate murder mystery and wins himself a fair and blushing bride—all in the face of tremendous odds.

Others in the cast of “Red Courage” are Molly Malone, Mary Philbin, Joe Girard, Joel Day, Arthur Hoyt, Richard Cummings, Charles Newton, Joe Harris, William M. McCormick, Mac Wright and Jim Corey.

The Superba is also presenting an atmospheric prologue to the feature, and a Century comedy, “Seashore Shapes,” in which figure Baby Peggy and Teddy, the Century's canine star.

ROGERS BURLESQUE HITS HIGH AVERAGE.

Will Rogers continues to delight his followers with his latest comedy, “Doubling for Romeo,” in its fourth week at Miller's Theater.

As the bashful cowboy lover who attempts to find the Romeo method of love-making in a Hollywood movie studio, Rogers pokes good-natured fun at the film industry. His witty titles and equally funny capers keep the audiences thoroughly amused.

To climax it all, he dreams that he is Romeo. His adventures in the ancient city of Verona and his modernization of the Bard of Avon's love drama will live in the minds of those who come to laugh at this feature.

The picture was produced under the direction of Clarence Badger. Rogers's supporting company included Sylvia Breamer, Sydney Ainsworth, Al Hart, Raymond Hatton and little Jimmie Rogers, the star's son.

Another fun feature is the Al Christie's two-reeler, “Oh, Buddy,” featuring Neal Burns and Vera Steadman.

POLLARD MAKES RAILROAD COMEDY.

Harry (Snub) Pollard began production yesterday of a train comedy, the shots for which will be made at Hinds, where the company has chartered a train for the railroad scenes. Mr. Pollard is cast as conductor, Marie Mosquini, playing opposite, is a fascinating passenger, and Noah Young, brakeman. R. J. Ceder is directing, assisted by Bob Evans, with Charles Parrott, author of the script.

Dagmar Dahlgren,
Who will take part in presentation of original playlets this week at the Gamut Club.

MARITIME FEATURE.

Three Ships Are Used in Making “Lady Letty.”

Three ships were chartered for use in filming the exterior sea scenes of George Melford's production, “Moran of the Lady Letty,” which are now being filmed in and about the San Francisco water front. These are the “Narwhat,” a three-masted schooner, the “Olympic,” a four-master and a palatial yacht.

Both of the schooners have seen hard service all over the world. The Narwhal was formerly a whaler and just before docking at San Francisco this last time, was used in shipping copra, a cocoanut meat product from which oils, soaps and cosmetics are made. It is forty years old. The Olympic has seen twenty years of service.

The majority of the scenes of the new picture are enacted aboard ship, on deck and in the various interior cabins of two ships. This necessitated several weeks' work by the company, under Mr. Melford's direction, in the waters off the coast of San Francisco, as many obstacles were encountered.

Dorothy Dalton plays the featured role, supported by Rudolph Valentino, the hero of “The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse” and who recently completed the title role in “The Sheik.” Monte M. Katterjohn adapted the story, which was a novel by Frank Norris.

TO PROVIDE INSPIRATION.

An exhibition of her professional work in classical, character and toe dancing will be given by Mme. Orrea Waska every Friday at her studio, 1635 La Brea avenue, Hollywood. The purpose of these exhibitions, according to Mme. Waska, is to afford residents of Los Angeles the advantages offered by “a veritable conservatory of inspiration and art.” Mme. Waska holds the title of professeur de l'academie de danse de Paris, and for years was recognized as one of the most prominent teachers in the French capital.

Gamut Club Members to See New Plays.

Premiers of two one-act plays written by Los Angeles authors will be given by the Gamut Club next Wednesday night for club members and guests, following the monthly dinners. Three plays will be produced under the direction of Clyde McCoy.

Phillip Gastrock, well-known actor, is the author of “One Clear Call,” an “incident in life,” along the lines of telepathy. In the cast for this production are Gastrock, Mrs. Edith Yorke, Freida Byard and Vivian Caldwell.

Otto Lederer has written an as-yet-unnamed comedy drama, which will receive its premier Wednesday night. The cast is made up of Lederer, Victor Rottman and Miss Dagmar Dahlgren.

“The Moonshiner,” the third play of the evening, will be put on by Clyde McCoy and Cecil Irish. It has been enthusiastically received several times at the Hollywood Community Theater. The forthcoming event will be “ladies' night.”

LOVE OF CHORUS GIRL AND OLD DOORKEEPER.

A story built around one of the most romantic figures of backstage, the old doorkeeper, and his paternal love for a little chorus girl, is the basis of “After the Show,” a William De Mille production which opens at the Garrick Theater today.

In her loneliness and temptation, in need of friendship and guidance, the girl turns to the old doorkeeper as to a father. She believes his stories of how near he once came to being a great actor, and so fills the void in his heart. The story deals with the two kinds of love—that which builds for happiness and that which destroys.

Charles Ogle plays the old doorkeeper, Lila Lee the little chorus girl, and Jack Holt, now a star, is the leading man.

One feature of the picture is a complete behind-the-scenes view of a musical show, with chorus girls, models and actresses, all beautiful and elaborately gowned.

“COHEN'S MILLIONS” FOLLIES' OFFERING.

Amusement of extra high tension is promised in “Cohen's Millions,” a nonsensical musical farce which will show this week at Pantages Broadway. Henry Sherr as Abie Cohen will be the center of the comedy situations, and the rest of the Follies cast will be seen in laughable endeavors to get his millions away from him. The musical portion of the bill is better than usual, and all the Follies favorites will be on hand.

Bob Albright has promised some new numbers.

Gladys Walton will be seen in her new picture, “The Rowdy,” a romantic story of a California fishing village. The plot turns upon the mistake of two kind, but undiscerning old ladies, who think Miss Walton is their sister's child, and take her away from the simple fishing village to make a “lady” of her. She goes reluctantly, but comes back at last to the people—and the man—she loves. Jack Mower ably supports Miss Walton in the part of [illegible] Kincaid, her fisherman sweetheart.

LINING UP NEW STORIES FOR FILMING.

Goldwyn Company Schedules Eight of Varied Hue; Six Pictures in Production.

Eight new stories have been purchased by the Goldwyn scenario department for early production. Vice-President Lehr and Paul Bern, scenario editor, in selecting these, have read hundreds of books and manuscripts.

Gouverneur Morris has just completed an original which bears the title “Always Warm and Green.” Ruth Wightman is writing the continuity in collaboration with the author.

Although several of Kathleen Norris's stories have been screened, she is now working in a studio for the first time. She has written a story directly for the screen and declares she is fascinated with the work. She and Julien Josephson are collaborating on the scenario. The story, for the present, answers to the name of “The Happiest Night of Her Life,” but this is not likely to be the release title.

“Brothers Under Their Skins,” a magazine story by Peter B. Kyne, is being fitted to the screen by Grant Carpenter, playwright and scenarioist.

Interest attaches to the filming of Hall Caine's immortal novel, “The Christian,” because of the announcement that the famous author will take passage from England next month. Charles Kenyon has already completed the scenario. It will be held for the author's final inspection and approval.

Rupert Hughes, so-called white hope of the silent drama, has written another original, which at this writing is known as “Remembrance.” The success of his current productions has made him one of the outstanding figures in the industry.

Basil King, best remembered for “Earthbound,” is again at the studio and is assisting in the production plans of his novel, “The Dust Flower,” which, according to report, has no spooks in it. The author and Charles Kenyon are cutting the scenario pattern together.

Mary Roberts Rinehart has done something light and entertaining, it is said, in “Jane,” which tells how a spoiled girl was tamed. Isabel Johnston is the scenarioist.

Katherine Newlin Burt, who established herself with picturegoers through her “Branding Iron” and “Snowblind,” now has written another outdoor story,” “The Summons,” which is also to appear in novel form. J. G. Hawks is making the screen adaptation.

Six feature pictures are in production. They are Anzia Yezierska's “Hungry Hearts,” directed by E. Mason Hopper, with Helen Ferguson and Bryant Washburn heading the cast; “Yellow men and Gold,” by Gouverneur Morris, directed by Irvin Willat, with Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix; “Sent for Out,” a Rupert Hughes story, directed by Alfred E. Green, with Colleen Moore and Ralph Graves; “What Ho — the Cook!” a Chinese fantasy from Gouverneur Morris's pen, directed by Rowland V. Lee, with Jack Abbe and Winter Blossom; “The City Feller,” featuring Cullen Landis, directed by William Beaudine, and “The Octave of Claudius,” by Barry Pain, directed by Wallace Worsley, with Lon Chaney, Jacqueline Logan and Rayemond McKee.

EARTHQUAKE AND FLOOD TO THRILL.

CATASTROPHES OF NATURE IN TWO NEW FEATURE PRODUCTIONS.

Two pictures containing mighty spectacles of nature are in the formative stage and will be given to the public under the Robertson-Cole banner, it is announced.

The first to be released will be Louis J. Gasnier's production, “The Call of Home,” adapted from George Agnew Chamberlain's novel, “Home.” The story has a climax built around a flood in South America that sweeps whole villages before it and leaves a wake of disaster and desolation.

Mr. Gasnier took his company and a large staff of technical experts under W. L. Heywood, Robertson-Cole art director, to Yuma, Ariz., for the flood scenes. Arrangements were made to release a large volume of water impounded in the Colorado River regions and an actual flood was created for the picture.

“The Call of Home” includes in the cast Ramsay Wallace, Irene Rich, Leon Bary, Jobyna Ralston, Norma Nichols, Carl Stockdale, Emmett King, Margaret Mann, Genevieve Blinn, James C. Barrows, Sydney Franklin and Harry Lonsdale.

The second Robertson-Cole picture calling for a cataclysm is Sessue Hayakawa's “The Vermilion Pencil,” from the story by Homer Lea. The climax here is an earthquake which swallows up part of a village.

The Robertson-Cole technical staff is now busy building the earthquake. Norman Dawn, Hayakawa's director, has been engaged the past week in giving screen tests to prospective members of the cast. “The Vermilion Pencil” is expected to be one of the best oriental spectacles since “Kismet,” in which Otis Skinner made his screen debut.

GLOOM ADDED TO CAST MAKES MODERN TOUCH.

Enlarged and put into scenario form by Waldemar Young, George V. Hobart's play, “Experience,” will be shown at the De Luxe Theater today and tomorrow.

The screen affords scope for greater detail in stories than does the stage, so those who have seen the play with enjoyment should find additional interest in the handling of the scenario. One valuable addition made to “Experience” in the screen version is the character of Gloom.

Gloom does not appear in the original play; he probably was not considered necessary by the author, for the piece was written before prohibition. But now, to be thoroughly up to date, Gloom must figure as the antithesis of Intoxication.

MUSICAL.

SEASON UNDER WAY.

INSTRUMENTAL CONCERTS ARE PRIME ATTRACTION.

With instrumental programs holding chief sway, the new musical season is beginning to gather interest for lovers of the lyrical art. The first Philharmonic concerts have stimulated the taste for forthcoming events, in which small ensemble and orchestral programs occupy a chief place.

The first popular concert by the Philharmonic Orchestra will be given this afternoon. This will be followed Friday afternoon and Saturday evening of this week with the second pair of symphony programs Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink will be soloist.

The first concert by the Los Angeles Trio is to take place tomorrow evening. Soon the new Ensemble Moderne will make its debut. These are prominent affairs in the realm of chamber music.

Further interest will be lent to the present week by the appearance of Jascha Heifetz, who is the first artist to visit this season.

Philharmonic Pop Today.

The first popular program of the Philharmonic Orchestra, with Walter Henry Rothwell, conductor, will be presented this afternoon at the Auditorium. Mr. Rothwell has taken great pains to select a program that will appeal not only to the patrons of the symphony concerts, but to those more interested in concerts of a popular nature. The numbers are "Pomp and Circumstance," the Military March No. 4 by Elgar; the ballet music from "The Cid," by Massenet; the Gluck-Mottl "Dance of the Blessed Spirits," with flute obligato, "Rustling of Spring," by Sinding-Sitt, and introduction to Act III from "Lohengrin," by Wagner, and the arias sung by Mrs. Lela Johnstone, mezzo-soprano, "Amour Viens Aider" from "Samson and Delilah" and "Plus Grand Dans Son Obscurite" from "Queen of Sheba," with the program concluding with a Strauss overture, "The Bat."

On the second symphony program Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, the Philharmonic Orchestra, with Walter Henry Rothwell conducting and Mme. Schumann-Heink as soloist, there will be given Dvorak's Symphony No. 5 in E Minor, Opus 95, "From the New World." It will be remembered that this same work was selected by Conductor Rothwell to first introduce the Philharmonic Orchestra to Los Angeles at its concert two years ago. The improvement of the organization, it is said, will be easy to discern on the repetition.

Mme. Schumann-Heink has selected for her solos an aria from "Samson and Delilah," "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," and the recitative "Now, Vitellia," and rondo "Never Shall Hymen" from "Titus," by Mozart.

Other numbers making up the program are Liszt's Symphonic Poem No. 2, "Tasso, Lamento e Trionfo," and rhapsody, "Espana," by Chabrier.

This will be the first time the Liszt poem has been done at these concerts.

In "Mikado" Production.

Miss Ruth Hutchinson, soprano, has been selected to sing the leading role in "The Mikado," the opera to be given November 26 at Santa Monica, by W. G. Stewart, on the opening of the new municipal auditorium. Tuesday evening Miss Hutchinson sang at the Elks' Club Building for the Civic and Philanthropic organization. Saturday evening she was soloist on the program for the Three Arts Club.

Lesbian Trio.

An interesting program was presented by the Lesbian trio at the Ansonia Apartments, Thursday evening. This was the first of a series of recitals to be given by this new organization under the management of Jessie Weimar.

Those appearing on the program were Ruth Ellis Miller, soprano; Elsie Manion, violinist, and Meldon Schen, pianist.

Opens Opera Course.

Ray De Ville, formerly of New York City, leading tenor under the management of Charles Frohman, Klaw & Erlanger, Shubert and others, has opened a school for the study of opera in the Music-Arts Building. Mr. De Ville specializes in stage technique and operatic training, it is announced.

Benefit Recital.

Patrick O'Neil, Irish tenor, gave a program of interest at the Holy Cross Church recently for the benefit of the building fund of the church.

Among the musicians who appeared were Mr. O'Neil, in a group of Irish songs, Alice Mackenzie, mezzo-soprano, who sang a group of darky classics in costume, Conchita Chevez, soprano, and Almond Orlinkoff, Russian violinist.

Joins Music Colony.

Among the newcomers to the musical colony this season is Doris Struble, who has just completed a two years' concert tour of Australia and New Zealand, where she appeared as joint soloist with the English prima donna, Carrie Lanceley. Her most notable appearances were at the Royal Theater in Sydney, N. S. W., and the town halls of Melbourne, Victoria, Brisbane and Queensland.

Miss Struble, who is a graduate of Columbia College of Dramatic Art in New York and a vocal pupil of Oscar Saenger, besides being a pianist, has combined all of her accomplishments and gives planologues.

While in New Zealand, she witnessed many of the native ceremonials and learned some of their songs. These songs have a rhythm entirely their own and Miss Struble interprets them with originality, it is said.

Sing at City Club.

Melba French Barr, soprano, and John Smallman were the soloists at the Men's City Club luncheon Friday. Miss Barr gave "When Clovis Sleeps," by Samuel, "Lullaby" Cyril Scott and with Mr. Smallman, "I Feel Thy Angel Spirit," by Hoffman. Mr. Smallman also gave a group of French songs.

Before Glendora Club.

Leontine Redon, mezzo-soprano, will present a program before the Woman's Club of Glendora Tuesday. She will be assisted by Viola Wasterlain, violinist, and Mina Hellekson, pianist.

Returns from Vacation.

Edith Grimes, pupil of Estelle Heartt-Dreyfus and winner of the State contest for young professionals held under the auspices of the music club federation of California, has spent the summer in Helena, Mont. While there she was engaged to sing at the Shrine Mid-Summer Ceremonial Concert, at several private musicales and both the Rotary and Kewanis clubs.

In addition to her concert activities, Miss Grimes created the title role in an operetta, "The Moon Maid." She has recently returned to resume her studies in the Heartt-Dreyfus studios.

On Musical Programs.

Community Chorus.

The Hollywood Community Chorus will present its regular program Tuesday evening. Carrie Jacobs Bond will have charge, and will feature the song writer, Mrs. Cecil Ellis, who will render her own numbers.

Unusual Study.

The unusual experience of studying under the direction of a teacher who was closely associated with Richard Wagner, the composer, was enjoyed by F. X. Arens, who has lately come to this city to institute a course in vocal coaching. The teacher in question was Prof. Julius Hey and exponent of bel canto as it applies to expressive diction and intensity of dramatic delivery, demanded by the modern music dramas.

Prof. Hey acted as vocal expert in the preparation of singers for their unaccustomed task at the Bayreuth Festivals. Later he was engaged in the same capacity for the proposed Bayreuth School of Music by Wagner, but the scheme never reached fruition because of the death of the great composer.

Mr. Arens was recommended by Prof. Hey as vocal teacher at a large school of music in Berlin upon his graduation. He held this post until his return to America.

In his own instruction Mr. Arens exemplifies many of the principles advocated by Prof. Hey, it is stated.

Sir Henry at Worcester.

Sir Henry Heyman, well-known musician of San Francisco, was among those in attendance at the Worcester Musical Festival, at which the cantata, "The Pilgrim's Progress" by Edgard Stillman-Kelley was presented. Sir Henry's wide acquaintance with musicians brought him into popular light at the festival, and local dailies contained accounts of his experiences.

Pupils' Matinees.

Saturday matinees, featuring music, dancing and recitations are given each week by the pupils of the Abbott Dramatic School. Among those taking part in recent programs were Muriel Lingford, Nellie Baker, Margaret Threadgold, Billy Tragler, Elizabeth Krogh, Vera Webster, Yvonne Page, Audrey Howell, Isabel Eleye, Margaret Veronee, Kathryn Orphan, La Verna Mae Abbott, Alma Payette, Doris Frame, Dorothy Gilbert, Isabel O'Brien and Iris Kuhnle.

Woman's Orchestra.

The Woman's Symphony Orchestra has changed the location of its rehearsals to Choral Hall in the Philharmonic Auditorium Building.

The organization now comprises fifty members, playing under the direction of Henry Schoenefeld.

Organist Plays.

Sibley G. Pease, organist, gave a recital last Friday evening on the new instrument at the First Presbyterian Church.

Frank E. Geiger, basso, assisted.

Opera Singers Here.

Four members of the Sonora Grand Opera Company, a Mexican organization, which has toured the East and Middle West, will appear to take part in the musical program this week at the California Theater. The Sonora company closed its season in Shreveport, La., and during the time of reorganization of the company for the regular season, the principal singers have been appearing in various cities in recital.

Those who will sing at the California Theater include Beatriz Pizzorni, dramatic soprano; Speria Castel, contralto; Eduardo Lejarazu, baritone, and I. Del Castillo, at the piano.

Allen McQuhae, Irish tenor, who is making a tour of the West.

Irish Poems and Music.

Settings for verses by Kate Beirne O'Rourke will be respresented on a musical program to be given Thursday evening at the residence of Mrs. Thomas R. Cooper, formerly of New York City. Mrs. Lucille Gibson Pleasants, soprano, assisted by Mrs. J. W. Rowntree at the piano, will be soloist. Miss O'Rourke will read the libretto of the opera "Nadur," for which Brahm Van den Berg is composing the music.

At University.

Carolyn Alchin has been invited to teach at the summer session of the State University, at Berkeley again next year. The attendance was so large last summer that she will be given an assistant for the coming session, and the university will offer more courses in the theoretical department.

Federation Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the California Federation of Music Clubs will be held Wednesday morning in the Red Room of the City Club, Chapman Building. The meeting will be followed by a presidents' conference luncheon.

L'Ensemble Moderne.

Two compositions have been written by Arthur Foote for the first concert of L'Ensemble Moderne, comprising Henri De Busscher, oboe; Emil Ferir, viola; Blanche Rogers Lott, piano, and Mrs. Fern Fitzwater, soprano, to be given November 10 at Gamut Club Auditorium. The compositions are a Sarabande and a Rigaudon, especially suited to an aggregation of this type.

A Rhapsodie by Charles Martin Loeffler is also on the program. This is descriptive of a poem by Rollin, called "The Pool."

Costume Program.

After a prolonged arid period in the realm of the concert stage, the recital artists have returned with renewed vigor and variety.

Tuesday evening at the Gamut Club auditorium, Grace Wood Jess will present a costume recital. The art of this gifted American has a charm quite its own, combining as it does the dramatic with the music. Her program offers plantation melodies, Kentucky tunes, the Golden Legend from the French, Russian folk songs.

Heifetz Recital.

Jascha Heifetz, the Russian violinist, will play Friday evening at Philharmonic Auditorium.

Heifetz is one of the wonder-children of Russia, one of the many and undoubtedly most brilliant pupil of the Auer constellation. His training started when he was 3 years of age. He worked first with his father, later gaining admission to the Royal School of Music at Vilna.

He made his first public appearance at 6, playing the Mendelssohn concerto. At 9, after two years with Auer in Petrograd, he created a sensation by his public appearance as soloist with the orchestra at Pavlovska.

He made his debut in America about two years ago.

Buhlig Series.

Richard Buhlig will commence his series of eight piano recitals the evening of November 11. All of them will be given at the Gamut Club auditorium.

The first program will offer the twenty-four preludes of Chopin, the B Flat Minor Sonata and twelve etudes of Chopin.

Garrison Soon.

Mabel Garrison, one of the most prominent members of the Metropolitan Opera roster of artists, will start the Philharmonic artist series November 15.

She will be accompanied by George Siemon, her husband, who is also well known personally as composer and coach.

Matinee Concerts.

Ernestine Schumann-Heink will start the matinee Philharmonic series, November 19. This series will include Reinald Werrenrath and Cecil Fanning, American baritones, the Cherniavsky Trio, violinist, 'cellist and pianist; Anna Pavlowa and her ballet Russe, and a joint recital by Alice Gentle, recently heard here with the Scotti Opera Company, and Alfred Mirovitch, the Russian pianist. The last has just been heard in his first New York recital and has gained unstinted praise from the critics.

Staples's Pupils' Recital.

A recital by pupils of Mr. R. M. Staples, local violinist, was given last Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben F. Grays, 376 Windsor Boulevard.

Those who took part in the program were Jack Pepper, George Pepper, Miss Beryl Kroezer, Miss Whilhelmina Kent, Dwight Muma, Miss Maybelle Mulcahill, Miss Florence Sawyer, Eugene Powers, Miss Sylvia Harding and Eugene Welves.

Music-Language Teacher Returns.

After a stay of three months in Venice, Mrs. Elizabeth Adams has returned to her school of music and languages at 1714 South Ardmore avenue, and expects to present some of her pupils in piano recital in the near future.

Takes Studio Here.

Gertrude Ray, highly thought of in Chicago as a teacher of voice and expression, has taken a studio in the Adams school, and will be heard in recital this winter.

Song Recital at Ebell.

Mary Louise Perry, soprano, will give a song recital at the Ebell clubhouse, Thursday evening. She will be assisted by Adelaide Trowbridge, piano; Karl M. Bright, violoncello, and A. M. Perry, violin.

The program will include "Ah! Sad Indeed My Heart" (Tschaikowsky;) "A Swan" (Grieg;) "The Fount of Bimini" (Cadman,) and "In the Silence of the Night" (Rachmaninoff.)

Historic Music Lecture.

Illustrated with songs of the period, a lecture and program, covering renaissance music from 1558 to 1643, has been prepared by Victor Carly, Kathleen Shippen and Viola Wasterlain. Mr. Carly is a dramatic baritone, Miss Shippen a pianist and Miss Wasterlain a young Belgian-American violinist of great promise.

As the second part of their joint recitals, these musicians have a musical sketch called, "The Concert Rehearsal," the scene of which is laid in the drawing-room of a modern hostess who is selecting a program for an evening entertainment. From numbers sung and played by the three artists she makes up her program.

Oratorio and Ensemble Classes.

Opportunity to study the methods used by the Metropolitan Opera Company is being offered students and teachers of Los Angeles, it is announced, by Maestro William Tyroler's classes in opera, oratorio and ensemble, which opened at the Ruysdael studios, Mason Operahouse Building, last week.

Maestro Tyroler's twelve years of experience with Giulio Setti at the Metropolitan establish him as an authority on ensemble training. The greatest danger in chorus singing lies in forcing immature voices. To guard against this, Mr. Ruysdael will himself hear every applicant, and accept only those who are vocally mature. Classes are limited to eighty students.

Henry Foote Perrin Pupils.

The ninth recital of pupils of Henry Foote Perrin was given last night at Woolman Hall School, 381 East Washington street, Pasadena.

Among the most interesting of the numbers were a piano solo (Weber,) by Ruth Giltner, "Minuet" (Paderewski) by Alice Hickman, and song "In God's Garden" (Bond) by Natalie Jenkins.

The tenth of these recitals will be given Saturday evening, November 26 at the residence of Mrs. M. E. Spevey, 316 South Marengo avenut. The program will include "Humoresque" (Dvorak) played by Elsie Mercer; "Rondo Capricioso (Mendelssohn) by Ruth Turner, and "Rhapsodie" (Liszt) Ruth Turner.

Seasonal Recitals.

A program consisting of compositions by Bach, Chopin, Liszt, Palmgren, Debussy, Sinding, Friml, Grunn and Cadman was given recently by the pupils of Lewis A. Kerwin at his Majestic Theater studio.

Mr. Kerwin has lately been reappointed organist of the Knights of Columbus and the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and took a prominent part in the Columbus Day celebration. He is a teacher who strongly believes in combining pleasure with work, and his recitals usually possess some novel features suggested by the season. The next of these recitals will be a Thanksgiving party to be held November 25.

Los Angeles Trio Program.

The Los Angeles Trio, May MacDonald Hope, pianist Calmon Luboviski, violinist, and Ilya Bronson, violoncellist, will present their first program of the series tomorrow evening at Ebell Club auditorium. Their complete program follows: Trio No. 5, G major, W. A. Mozart. Trio G major Op. 1, Jan Brandst Buys (first time on Pacific Coast) second and third movement. Trio in A minor, Op. 50, Tschaikowsky.

DANCING GAINS FAVOR.

The method of dance training offered by Norma Gould in her own school is being exemplified by her assistant teachers this season in several schools of this city. Bertha Wardell is for the second year in charge of all dancing classes at the University of California, Southern Branch, where she prepares the young women for the pageant which Miss Gould directs each spring. Dorothy Lyndall is conducting the classes in the San Pedro School of Arts and assisted in directing the Cabrillo pageant recently produced in San Pedro. Ruth Wilton is director of dancing at the Elliott School for Girls, where she has the opportunity of establishing the same high ideals of the Gould school. Margaret Case, present assistant to Miss Gould, conducts the dancing classes in the Ambassador school for small children, and Leah Wooton is director of the Arroyo Seco Playground.

BAD FOR THE EYES.

Oculists have often called attention to the fact that the eyes are easily fatigued by the reflection from white paper, especially when the surface is under a strong light. Since green is known to be the color most restful to the eyes, it is a common practice to use wall papers and draperies of that color in libraries and private studies. For writing paper, however, green is an unsatisfactory color. It imparts a reddish appearance to the writing and makes it hard to read. Yellow writing paper is not open to the same objection. In strong daylight it is softer than pure white paper, and in artificial light is not too dark. Black letters on a yellowish background show clear and distinct. Many mathematicians use yellow paper in figuring long and difficult calculations, and many writers have adopted it for manuscripts. It has the additional merit of cheapness.—[Indianapolis News.

NEWSPAPER MAN HERO.

Carl Laemmle has authorized production at Universal City on a series of short-reel features which will be based upon the experiences of a newspaper man on a metropolitan daily. The series will be sent to the screen as "Ned of the News." Albert Russell will direct with Percy Pembroke in the featured role. "Ned of the News" will travel out of "Central" with the flying squadron of police to give playgoers a thrill and anyone who has any idea of the hourly activities of the modern police reporter will anticipate speed in the picture. town cut off from produce by a railroad strike where means are adopted by one element of the town's middle class to strike against the strike.

Among the town institutions badly disorganized by the transport tie-up is the hospital. Young doctors organize a service of motor truck supply. They are listed as scabs by the rail brotherhood, a truck is ditched and young sawbones at the wheel is given a largely attended funeral. The counter strike of fellow doctors is a strife of the knife and the pill.

Having gone this far with the case the town awakens. None dies for lack of a prescription and, when the inevitable situation arises in which an eleventh-hour operation is necessary to save the labor leader's wife from death in childbirth, he puts a convenient remark about love and fraternity into the mouth of one of his acting editors, and the curtain falls while Anna, the maid, rushes off stage left with towels, hot water and the hero's tools.

However, this tardy mush does not matter. The damage is already done. And if ever there is a riot in the Comedy Theater it will have taken place before the play ends at that third act moment when the doctors draw up in a hollow square at their side of the stage and cut labor off from its medicine.

The audience I sat in was small and distinctly pro-doctor. Faint excitement prevailed when the young medico delivered his antilabor speech.

WRECK WRECKS PLAY.

The awful train wreck in the first act of "The Six-Fifty," the comedy by Kate McLaurin, which has come to the Hudson Theater, is a liberal gesture by the management. My guess is that Miss McLaurin never hoped for so much wreck. Probably she merely wrote into her play script something like this: "Small boy enters kitchen door and shouts, 'D'ye hear that noise? The six-fifty just ran off the tracks.'"

But the management is relentlessly generous. It has equipped Miss McLaurin's meek comedy with $1,000,000 (as they say in the movie ads) worth of wreck. Lee Kugel is kind, but he has half-killed "The Six-Fifty" with his kindness.

The amusing mildness, a witty mildness, which reminds of Clare Kummer's receptive calm and the unobtrusive power of Miss McLaurin's play are mangled by the wreck.

Her story of people of two worlds meeting in farmer Dan Taylor's kitchen by the fortunate accident of an open switch and doing each other two worlds' of good is delivered delicately in a manner which is jeweled with fine little reticences and shy trusts of feminine humor.

Were it not for the monstrous incident of the wreck of the first act one could settle down comfortably to a pleasant evening with a slightly garrulous but always entertaining lady author. But the wreck spoils all that. It breaks in on the tea party like a bad accident in the kitchen and bombs all taste for tea away.

The clever actors of Miss McLaurin's comedy pay no attention to the wreck. They ignore it with a fine politeness. This is a cast of gentle folk and they give you Miss McLaurin's prose with gracious, tactful skill.

Only Lillian Albertson who plays the fretful, disappointed wife of Farmer Taylor aggravates her part unnecessarily. She drops a tear into her larynx before the rise of the curtain and gargles it for the rest of the evening. The trick has the cumulatively distressing effect of the dripping of a bathroom water faucet which will not quite close.

But this is the play's minor ailment. Its real organic trouble is that wreck. A manager may annoy a good play by trying to produce its $1,000,000 effect on 30 cents. But he can completely hamstring a good play when he creates a 30-cent noise with $1,000,000 worth of fireworks.

AMERICAN STARS FAVORED.

A contest to determine the most popular picture stars in Norway, Sweden and Denmark, conducted in the public schools of the three countries, has been determined in favor of the Paramount stars by a large margin, according to information received by E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The leading American and European film artists received many votes from the young motion-picture enthusiasts, Paramount winning first, second, fifth and ninth places, in addition to other honors. Wallace Reid was the favorite of the Scandinavian public by the judges when they had completed their arduous labors. Thomas Meighan finished a strong second. Karin Molander, a Danish actress, third; Marjorie Daw fourth, and Dorothy Dalton fifth. Ninth place was won by Elliott Dexter, who left recently for London to appear in pictures made in the studios of Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd.

NOR ALL YOUR TEARS.

By Joy Bennett.

O women of America! In all the world most free,
How long will you remain in soul-destroying apathy?
Have you no mission in these days, no duty to fulfill?
You served your country in her stress, that country needs you still.

Have you forgotten war's black days, those nights of bitter tears?
When broken hearts were agonized by devastating fears?
The terrors of each morning's news, the aching load of care-
Can you forget your sacred dead, whose graves lie over there?

Wake from your idle dreams of ease, of trifles gained and lost,
If there should be another war, on you will fall the cost.
While politicians play with words, and move their pawns at will,
Will you be dumb, while day by day men learn new ways to kill?

O women of America! from every clime and place,
Rise up and make your fierce demand, forgetting creed or race;
And where each unknown hero sleeps, at peace for evermore,
Let mothers, wives and sisters vow, THERE SHALL BE NO MORE WAR.

Couldn't Escape It.

The charwoman was lamenting the fact that baldness was attacking her son.

"But there!" she wound up, resignedly. "I s'pose e'll 'ave to put up with it. 'Is father's bald and so was 'is gran'father, and they do say as it's airyditty."—[Edinburgh Scotsman.

REPORT SHOWS EXTENT OF LEAGUE ACTIVITY.

LIBRARY COMMUNITY BUREAU AND CHILDREN'S THEATER ARE INCLUDED.

Much work of educational as well as artistic and literary value has been done in the past year by the Los Angeles Center, Drama League of America, according to the annual report of the president, Mrs. W. W. Burton.

Perhaps the most important activity here has been the establishment of a bureau of community drama, which co-operates closely with schools, colleges and all dramatic movements, both civic and educational. This organization, called the Drama League Service Bureau, has been given great assistance by Miss Marjorie Day of the Los Angeles Community Service, with whom it has co-operated in making up reference files, sending out lists and providing literature.

Another ambition which has been realized successfully is the dramatic library. A children's community theater is now also in operation with great plans for the future. The Drama League is also able to report a membership of 380 active and paid-up members.

Seven open meetings were held by the league during the past year, including a tea with Miss Rita Weiman as speaker and guest of honor, and one at which Garnet Holme spoke and gave interesting readings.

There were two luncheons in the course of the year, one for members of the Los Angeles and Pasadena drama league at the Ambassador Hotel, attended by 250 guests, and a special get-together luncheon for members only.

Six special program meetings, nine convenings of the play-reading section and ten of the play-writing section were held, the latter under the direction of Mrs. Richard Ingalese. Altogether thirty-seven meetings in nine months indicate the activity of the league. In the calendar eighty-one performances from outside sources are reported, and the league entertained during the year more than forty guests of honor.

Future plans include a home for the league, indorsement of a group of community repertory players, further evolution of the children's theater, co-operation with the better film movements, a ticket exchange for students and the sending out of lecturers.

LOCAL BANKER TALKS ON INFLUENCE OF ART.

Disclaiming any intention of treating the subject from a technical standpoint, Orra E. Monette gave a very stimulating talk on art at a meeting of the Los Angeles Art Center last Sunday evening.

Mr. Monette took for his text a satirical picture entitled "The Quick and the Dead," which appeared recently in one of the local papers. He pointed out that the object of art is always the quickening of dead impulses and dead lives, that from true art must result a revitalizations of human relationships and a new birth of human hopes.

Rupert Hughes and Edmund Russell, both speakers and guests of honor, expressed their entire approval, and spoke of the necessity for an art center in Los Angeles.

The interesting program was in charge of Madame Sprotte, and included Myrtle Colby, George Willey, Ann Thompson, Carolyn and Lysbeth LeFevre, Rupert Hughes and Lawrence Tibbets.

WRITERS ARE SOON TO ENTERTAIN.

The Writers, composed of creators of photodrama whose common quality is originality, are planning an entertainment at the Ambassador; eight committees, the names of whose members alone have shone on silver sheets in every land, are marshaling details for the event already. Under the generalship of Marion Fairfax, chairman of the entertainment committee, subcommittees are operating efficiently toward their goal.

The Writers' new clubhouse was given a Halloween housewarming last night with celebrities of screenland present. That was merely the introduction to the pleasant home of the story-tellers of the world, officials say. Evidence of their combined powers of originality, talent and entertainment are promised for the night of December 1.

USEFUL INVENTIONS.

A French scientist has evolved a system for rejuvenating used lubricating oils.

A machine designed to accompany music with harmonious lighting effects, has been invented by an eastern artist.

For the instruction and education of deaf mutes, inventions have just been perfected, which visualize the sound of human speech.

An imitation wool for filling mattresses and pillows is being made from cork in Spain.

The art of refining sugar and making what is called loaf sugar was invented by a Venetian citizen toward the end of the fifteenth century.

The most sensitive instrument yet made is the bolometer, originally invented by Langley, which is used for measuring variations in the radiation of heat. It registers to a millionth of a degree.

An odd suggestion was recently made as to conserving wheat. It is proposed to crush or rough-grind wheat, then soften with superheated steam and compress in hard blocks and store until wanted, when a simple crushing process would fit it for flour manufacture.

"Atomized" coal—different from merely "powdered" coal because very minutely divided—is a new product that is finding important uses. It is used for making a high-grade paint and also as a substitute for lamp-black in the manufacture of ink. Another valuable employment for it is in "facing" foundry molds, to give the surfaces a smooth finish in preparation for castings.

POLA NEGRI
Read what the critics think of her:

Florence Lawrence, Examiner:
Pola Negri plays a modern Jazz tune on the hearts of her admirers.

Guy Price, Herald:
I feel justified in saying that Miss Negri is the biggest new figure on the silver sheet today. Her Carmen is different from any you have ever seen.

Grace Kingsley, Times:
Pola Negri is without doubt the most fascinating personality on the screen today, besides being perhaps its best actress.

Monroe Lathrop, Express:
Miss Negri's Carmen is a tempestuous, intemperate gypsy girl, a magnetic, unmoral animal, a fierce-living, free-loving savage of capricious appetites and a consuming zest for satisfying them.

Underwear

For Children

R. A. Underwear for children has the same wear, and fit as the women's garments.

It's comfortable warmth is a protection to health.

R. A. differs from ordinary children's underwear because it is cut to exactly fit the lines of a child's figure and because it wears for several seasons, if properly washed.

The back of the pants are made full, and special button holes keep the garment buttoned. The wide special gusset gives room and prevents gaping at the seat.

R. A. Underwear is made for children and women.

Medium and heavy weight cotton—unions and separate garments.

Mrs. Murray C. Goodell, 377 West Holt avenue, gave a delightful children's party Monday afternoon, entertaining in celebration of the fifth birthday anniversary of her small son, Russell Goodell.

FULLERTON.

One of the prettiest of Fullerton's social events recently was given Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hiltscher, when their daughter, Josephine, entertained a large number of friends at a masquerade party. The house was attractively decorated with Japanese lanterns, flowers and foliage of which there was also improvised a huge arch under which the guests began the grand march introducing the terpsichorean pleasures of the evening. A program of delightful music was also enjoyed and elaborate refreshments were served by the hostess.

The presentation Thursday night of the musical comedy, "A Day at Coney Island," with an all-home talent cast resulted in an entertainment that was well worth while and which proved vastly diverting to the crowd that practically filled the high school auditorium. The enterprise was sponsored by the Ebell Club and directed by Carolyn Elinor Staley, who styles herself the "whirlwind directress." The cast included seventy-five adults and 100 children. The stage settings were very pretty, the chorus and solo singing was tuneful and the various drills and marches in costume were colorful, particularly the Japanese swing scene, which closed the program with the entire cast appearing.

Rev. Mr. Messias, rector of the Anaheim Episcopal Church, was the principal speaker and guest of honor at the Parent-Teachers' Association held in the central grammar school in Fullerton Thursday. The program of the afternoon consisted of the following numbers: Reading by Victory Dupuy; two charming songs, "The Swallows" and "I Pass by Your Window," by Miss Shrode, accompanied on the piano by Miss Schaff; two delightful vocal numbers, "Lassie of Mine," with violin obbligation, and "The Rose in the Garden," by Miss Dorothy Browne, director of music in the grammar schools. Following an interesting and edifying address by Rev. Mr. Messias, refreshments were served in the domestic science room.

The social section of the Ebell Club spent one of the most enjoyable afternoons Saturday in recent months when Dr. Harriet Brigham told of her impressions of past war conditions in European countries from which she returned but recently. Other numbers on the program were provided by Miss Margaret Abel with a reading, and vocal solos by Mrs. Farley. Tea was served during the afternoon.

DELANO.

The Delano Woman's Club is working on plans for its bazaar to be held November 5 in the clubrooms of the American Legion post. Mrs. D. L. Sears is head of the committee on arrangements and the subcommittees are as follows: Mrs. R. A. Root, Mrs. H. B. Cameron and Mrs. E. Curtis Clark, food sale; Mrs. H. M. Schalwitz, Mrs. Irwin Dunkle, Jr., and Mrs. Rodney Bacon, fancy and novelty table; Mrs. Robert S. Smith, aprons; Mrs. John Upton and Mrs. John Maehl, candy; Mrs. L. A. Baker, Miss Ruth Wilkin and Miss Eskaleen Stewart, doughnuts and coffee. Mrs. Harry Hawley is president of the club.

The next regular meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association will be held Friday night, November 4, at the grammar school. A committee composed of Miss Eskaleen Stewart, Miss Ruth Wilkin, Miss O'Riley, Mrs. J. A. Copeland and Mrs. E. Curtis Clark will prepare the program.

The parliamentary section of Delano Woman's Club met last Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Robert D. Swarts. The afternoon was devoted to business, the reading of the section's constitution and the formulating of plans for the parliamentary drill to be given before the club proper at the high school on Saturday afternoon, the 29th inst.

The Masonic Social Club held its first autumn social in the Masonic Temple. There was a large attendance. All the contests and games of the evening were in keeping with the Halloween season. Refreshments were served. Those who took part in the program were Miss Ruth Wilkin, Miss Thelma Ammons, Miss Mary Bower, L. A. Baker and Miss Ruth Bower. The committee that arranged the entertainment included Miss Verna Bowhay, Miss Eleanor Zimmerman, Mrs. G. W. McClintick, J. K. Hamilton, L. A. Baker and Ward Robertson.

EAGLE.

The women of the Congregation Church will give a Harvest Home dinner Tuesday evening in the Women's Twentieth Century Clubhouse. The regular monthly dinners have become so popular that it has been necessary to secure a larger dining-room to accommodate the 250 guests, who have made reservations. Dr. George Kengott, moderator of the Congregational churches in this district, Dr. Carl S. Patton of the First Congregational Church of Los Angeles and G. P. Willey of Eagle Rock, are to be the speakers of the evening.

Mrs. G. E. Arbogast was hostess on Friday to the music section of the club. This was the first meeting of the season and included business meeting, program, social hour and refreshments. Twelve members and friends were present. Mrs. F. A. Yoeck accompanied by Mrs. Alvin Hamer and Miss Laura Mattingly accompanied by Miss Langdon offered the musical program.

The serious overcrowding of the primary grades in Central school,

GROCERS WANT TO HELP LOWER FOOD COSTS

Not to Blame for H.C.L.

The idea that the rank and file of grocers throughout the country are boosting prices for the sake of realizing exorbitant profits is absolutely false.

Retail prices have gone up because the retailer has been compelled to put them up. The grocer has to pay more for his goods, more for rent, more for clerks' salaries; consequently, must charge more.

Shortage of raw materials, of productive labor and a demand that has far outstripped production are the direct causes of present-day prices. As a rule, the grocer is transacting business on the same percentage of profit as in the days of low selling prices.

Grocers depend upon you for a livelihood. They know just as you know that to cheat in any way, shape or form, would kill their trade outright. Common sense says that no intelligent grocer will attempt to "kite" prices beyond legitimate profits. He can't afford to.

BUSINESS NOT A BED OF ROSES

For Man Behind Counter

Because of a scant supply the grocer often has serious trouble in procuring merchandise. He has to stand the sharp cut of complaints from buyers because of high costs. He all too frequently is blamed, when absolutely blameless. And is not, on a whole, making a wider margin of net profit than he did when conditions were normal, trade better satisfied and business transactions decidedly more pleasant.

The grocer is your servant. He is in business to serve your requirements. He doesn't make you a slave to high costs. He is in exactly the same boat you are in. He sells goods you want and ask for. He must meet your demands or get out of business. He has no choice in the matter. He can't go contrary to your wishes.

The consumer can do more towards restoring prices to normal levels than the grocer can. This can be accomplished with positive certainty by buying only food products of sound value and proven economy. Careless buying and rank extravagance are unquestionably vital factors in maintenance of high costs.

When a consumer forces a grocer to sell a sixty-five-cent article where a thirty-five-cent article would answer the purpose equally well he is encouraging production of high priced goods of short value and hampering the manufacture of food products of sound value and fair prices. On the other hand, when the consumer insists on goods of inferior worth he is inviting inevitable waste that stands for loss rather than economy. In such occurrences the consumer, not the grocer, is at fault. For, remember, the grocer must give you what you want despite the fact that he would rather supply your requirements with goods of sterling value at a minimum cost.

FOOD PRODUCTS

Of Utmost Purity and Food Value

If you will but consult your grocer regarding the true values of different grades of goods, you most assuredly will increase the purchasing power of your dollars and strike straight at one of the main roots of high costs by weeding out extravagance.

What the buyer demands more than any other one thing determines the market price of commodities of all sorts. If you demand full-value foods, insist upon having them, you will get them and at legitimate prices. Persistent demand for top-price goods of questionable value will then be sharply curtailed and production stimulated in lines of maximum merit. And with this increased production will come lower costs, just as sure as day follows night.

The solution of the problem so far as the consumer is concerned is simply this: select only proudcts of recognized value, sold at lowest prices permissible under present conditions—eliminate waste—don't encourage the production of price-heavy products—co-operate with your grocer—don't lose sight of the fact that he must cater to your wishes. Your demand for the right type of goods is the best means at your command to straighten out topsy-turvy conditions which are a burden to the conscientious manufacturer, the square-dealing grocer and the consumer who are putting forth every effort under the sun to reduce the high cost of production, high cost of merchandising and high cost of living.

Mr. John A. Ulman, President of the National Retail Grocers' Association of the United States, an eminent authority on food values and intimately acquainted with manufacturing and marketing conditions, urges close co-operation between retailer and consumer and careful discrimination in the selection of merchandise—as a means of restoring prices to normal and promoting the distribution of the best grade of goods.

CALUMET BAKING POWDER
Sold by all Fair-dealing Grocers

Your grocer deals with thousands of buyers. If the merchandise he sells is not satisfactory, he hears about it—customers complain. If buyers are pleased he hears about that.

In this way, experience shows him the real worth of the goods he sells. He knows absolutely which brands give greatest satisfaction—have greatest merit.

That's why grocers everywhere, not only sell but also strongly recommend Calumet Baking Powder. They have confidence in it. They know it satisfies better than any other make, because of the satisfaction expressed by users.

They have faith in the organization back of the product. They are acquainted with the high standards of manufacture—the perfect purity of materials—the extreme care in production.

They know that Calumet will never disappoint the housewife—because it always has been and always will be the same grade—the best.

Used by Millions of Housewives Familiar with True Values

Calumet Baking Powder can't fail to make a reduction in baking costs—in living costs. Because it never fails.

It is the most dependable leavener made—for it is made in a way that does away with all uncertainty. Every baking is certain to be properly leavened, finely grained, feathery light and wholesome.

Makes Most Palatable and Sweetest of Foods

It is the most economical of baking powders. You save when you buy it—moderate in price. You save when you use it—has more than the ordinary leavening strength, therefore, you use less. You save materials it is used with—no spoiled bakings—nothing wasted or thrown away.

Made in the largest, best equipped and most sanitary baking powder factories in the world. Used by more Housewives, Domestic Scientists, Chefs, Restaurants, Hotels and Railroads than any other brand.

Contains only such ingredients as have been officially approved by U. S. Food Authorities.

Proved best—most economical by millions of tests. Order a can. Get greatest value at least cost. A baking powder you can depend on because it has demonstrated its superiority through thirty years of use.

A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 oz. Some baking powders come in 12 oz. cans instead of 16 oz. cans. Be sure you get a pound when you want it.

The People and Their Daily Troubles

DOROTHY DIX TALKS

Coming Up To Expectations.

BY DOROTHY DIX.

I was trying to comfort an old woman whom death had robbed of the husband with whom she had lived in almost idyllic happiness for nearly fifty years.

"You were such a wonderful wife to him," I said to her. "Only a few weeks before he died he said to me that you were one of God's own noble women and how blessed he had been in having you for a life companion."

"Ah," she replied, "John always thought the best of me and so I had to give him the best that was in me. It would have amazed him so to find out that I could be petty and mean, and little that I had to be big. It would have horrified him so to see me give way to my temper and act like a shrew that I learned to control myself.

"Why, I even learned how to cook and keep a budget, and be thrifty and economical, because he married me under the delusion that I would be a good manager and know how to run my end of the partnership as well as he ran his.

"He always made me feel that he expected great thing of me, that I would always do the right thing in every situation; that I would have courage and wisdom, and patience, and I tried not to disappoint him. We all make an effort to live up to our blue china, you know.

"He always thought the best of me, and so I gave him the best that was in me."

I wonder if that is not the real secret of how to make marriage a success? I wonder if husbands and wives, who only look for the gold in each other, don't find the precious metal instead of dross? I wonder if in every human being there is not both an angel and a devil, and if the one does not come forth that we summon.

Certain it is that most husbands and wives seem to believe the worst of each other, and to call forth what is most disagreeable in each other's natures. The average married couple live in a state of perpetual bickering over trifles. Apparently neither one ever expects the other one to do the right thing under any circumstances, and they spend their time criticising each other, and dwelling on each other's shortcomings.

Compliments in the family circle would cause the recipient to fall dead with surprise. Secretly the husband may still admire his wife, but he would die before he would tell her so. At the bottom of her soul a woman may think her husband a giant among other men, but wild horses could not drag the admission from her. Each feels it to be the sacred duty of a husband or wife to be an expert hammer wielder, and not a salve spreader.

The man has listened to his wife recite the litany of his faults until he feels that she regards him as a poor, miserable, make-shift of a man, who will never make a success of life, and who is stingy, and tyrannical, to boot. The woman has had her husband tell her so often that she is a fool, and a bad manager, and wasteful and extravagant, and that she muddles a story when she tries to tell it, and has the outlook of a hen, that she thinks that he regards her as a failure as a women, and doesn't expect any more of her than he would of a half-wit.

And this induces in the man and the women a what's-the-use attitude towards matrimony, which is the most demoralizing thing that could happen to it. The man says what's the use of my trying to be a good husband, and a good provider for my family, when all the thanks I get at home is criticism because I don't do better. The woman says what's the use of my denying myself things that I want in order to save, and do my cooking and sewing to make a comfortable home when all the reward that I get is a knock from my husband.

So both slump, and both are very apt to come to justify the evil expectations of the other. One might as well be killed for a sheep as a lamb and if one is going to be blamed, anyway, one might as well have the game as the name.

The jealous and suspicious wife, who is always watching her husband and keeping tab on him, and who reads wrong into his most innocent relationship with other women, will inevitably drive him into justifying her belief of him. The man who will not give his wife a dollar to spend, or trust her out of his sight, may rest assured that in the end she will outwit him and deceive him, and be as false as he expects her to be. But there are not many men and women who do not repay faith with faith, and who are not true to those who trust them.

Praise is more potent than blame. The thing that we try hardest to do is the thing we excel in, the thing we know we will be extolled for doing. The people we take most pains to please are those who love and admire us. We make every effort to increase their good opinion, but our enemies and critics may go hang for all of us. We do not put ourselves out to propitiate them because no matter what we do they are going to lambast us anyway.

We all try to be what people expect us to be. We give the best that is in us to those who expect the best, and that is worth remembering, married people.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

Says It's Useless.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 27—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am a much traveled man, was born, and lived in Boston many years, and if Miss Smith had not stated in her letter in the Times of the 24th inst. that she was from there, I would never have believed it, for she refers to an elevator as a lift, a term seldom used in this country and uses the word lady, instead of woman the former being commonly used in this State, and the latter, a much stronger word to my mind, in New England. As to giving up seats in public conveyances, it is very rare that a feeble or elderly person finds it necessary to stand in this city, and they are the only kind of people for whom seats should be given up, and the courtesy should apply to both sexes. As for taking off hats in elevators, it is a rare thing to be seen in New York or Boston, except in hotels, and personally I think it an absurd custom to pull off one's hat just because a woman has stepped into the elevator, as it is in reality a passageway in a building, and should be classed with the hallways.

Perhaps we do not show as much courtesy toward the opposite sex as our forefathers did, and the reason may be that the present modes of dress and coiffure may have something to do with it, not to forget the complexions that are contained in a box.

C. M. CLOUGH.

Can the Stool Pigeons.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 28.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Let us hope we get 500 new police and that the Times will encourage Chief Jones to retire 500 stool pigeons. Chief Jones wants to do right. He tried to abolish the purity squad which is known as the stool squad. When stools are used by reformers they are called investigators. If we want to get rid of evil we must destroy it where we find it. One of O'Leary's stools was arrested, with his wife, for bootlegging. He told on others, it's the same, dope fiends, burglars and all thieves. One class of thieves and lawbreakers is immune because they tell on the other fellow. It's an endless chain of crime. When the Volstead Vamp wasn't vamping druggists she was consorting with Japs and Chinese. The stools are the very lowest type of criminal, and they are developed by the yellow press and reformers. Judge Davis of San Diego put a stop to it there also Secretary Denby stopped it in the Navy.

A. L. STOKES.

What Ails Him?

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Since beer has become a medicine and can be had from the drug store upon a physician's prescription, will you kindly inform me what the symtoms are that will cause the physician to prescribe beer? I've been quite sick since reading that beer could be had, twenty-four bottles in a lump, with a doctor's prescription. I fear to go to my doctor for this prescription because I may answer his questions in such a way that he will prescribe castor oil, so please give me the right dope.

A few years ago beer was a poison but all of a sudden it becomes a medicine—a great white star through a rift of clouds on a night of darkness. Bully! What I need is the recipe for fooling the doctor and if you will make the same public it may be a star of hope eternal in the mental firmament of millions more of your readers.

In the past our sickness and ailment were alleviated with Lydia Pinkham, Nature's Remedy and even with Boots Leggings and though we lived through I am satisfied that I will die now, and leave a widow and orphan dependent upon charity, if I don't succeed in getting at least twenty-four bottles of Eastside inside pretty pronto. I am satisfied that I will have to commit perjury to obtain it, and likely the rest of the world will likewise, but the law must be observed and I want to hear the song of men and maidens, singing "The Harvest Moon" once more before that kind old nurse comes and rocks me to sleep.

If I need a doctor's prescription to obtain the medicine known as beer, why is it that I do not need one to obtain all other medicines? Does it not appeal to you that there is a great deal of graft in this medicine? Tribute to the doctor—tribute to the retail druggist—tribute to the wholesaler—tribute to the distributor and God knows who else—I don't. When I need a dose of salts I go to the drug store and get it—why can't I go to the brewery and get it now? Graft, graft, and more of it. Perhaps it is just as well—it is only by making the people—the electors—suffer the consequences of their own legal folly, that they will ever be taught the rudiments of common sense. In every State in the Union we send a bunch of yaps—narrow-headed old stiffs and half-baked goslings to our legislative halls, who imagine themselves duly commissioned to reform mankind and regulate the universe, and the public pays the freight. Perhaps we'll wake up some day. O God, why sleep Thy thunderbolts?

JEROME CRAITE.

More About Cats.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 23.—To the Editor of The Times:] Why not take better care of our expert rat killers and save ourselves all the trouble of having to "exterminate" rats?

For some hundreds of years the cat has been serving our interests loyally in protecting our property from rats and mice.

She can still be relied upon to do her work faithfully and well if given a fair chance, but her enemies have waged a most cruel war upon this dumb friend, with tales of her cruelty and treachery, in order to create public sentiment, but in spite of all this she seems to be holding her own, with new friends rallying to her cause.

It is a mistaken idea that cats need to be underfed in order to catch mice—the better fed the better work, as the better condition for work. Everything should be well fed, there is enough for all, and everything is entitled to food and shelter.

Ill will and enmity toward any animal are a blow to the teaching of justice and mercy and the moral effect upon children is to blunt these finer sentiments. The cat, from the question of both health and economics, should have her place in every home—she should be classed with the horse and the dog and be given the same kindly treatment.

N. H. DUNNING.

Notes a Change.

BUTTONWILLOW, Oct. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I wish to call your attention, and also that of your readers, to the remarkable change that has come over the average man of late, regardless of his age, social, or financial standing. The change manifests itself in peevishness, bad temper, and what is commonly known as "blowouts" at some fancied grievance or insult. It is particularly noticeable among men employed in stores, offices, and factories. Women, who are the closest observers of men, have been commenting on the change, and especially the married women, no doubt a great number of them are worrying over it, fearing that they may be losing the love and affection of their husbands.

A married woman writing to a ladies' magazine states that she has watched the change gradually creeping over her husband during the past year, and accounts for it in this way. He had formed the habit of chewing cloves on his way home from work each day but had given up the habit a short time ago. Previous to that he was one of the most lovable of men, and always had a cheery smile and a kiss for herself and the kiddies when he opened the front door.

I believe that this strange malady afflicting men will soon disappear, now that we have gotten the initiative, referendum, recall, woman's suffrage, prohibition and home-brew.

"The Iron Food for Vitality"

The Iron Food for Vitality

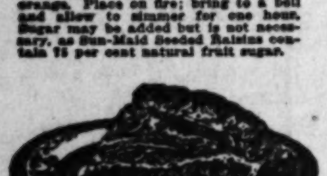
Real Raisin Bread

Add raisins to "the staff of life" and you have a perfect food

Stewed Raisins

Serve for breakfast every morning and get your daily iron this way

Cover Sun-Maid Raisins with cold water and add a slice of lemon or orange. Place on fire; bring to a boil and allow to simmer for one hour. Sugar may be added but is not necessary, as Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins contain 75 per cent natural fruit sugar.



Raisin Pie

Men are quickly refreshed at night by a dessert like this

2 cups Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins
2 cups water
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon corn starch
1 teaspoon sugar

Wash the raisins, put in saucepan with 1 cup cold water and bring slowly to a boil. Add sugar, salt and corn starch, which has been mixed with 1 cup cold water. Boil 2 minutes, add lemon juice. Pour in pie tin which has been lined with crust, while hot cover; brush top with cold milk and bake in moderate oven until brown.

All measurements for these recipes are level.

Free We'll send 100 luscious raisin recipes in a free book to anyone who mails coupon.

Let Children Vote

Offer them plain bread or raisin bread. See which they select and why

Some day, soon, do this:

Offer raisin bread and plain bread—side by side—to your boy or girl.

Note how the little hand at once selects the bread with raisins.

The flavor first attracts them—they know the deliciousness of raisins.

Unconsciously they know too that those raisins are good for them.

Every normal child craves sweets naturally and should have them. Here are Nature's own sweets—the kind they should have—practically pre-digested and rich in vital iron.

The iron builds up healthy blood—lasting vitality for play or study.

Children need but a small lot of iron daily, yet that need is vital.

Other healthful foods sometimes must be forced on children.

Not so raisin bread. Children choose it for themselves. Just try and see.

SUN-MAID RAISINS

Use Sun-Maid Raisins, made from California's finest table grapes—American raisins, processed and packed immaculately in a great modern California plant.

Seeded (seeds removed); Seedless (grown without seeds); Clusters (on the stem). Also a fine ever-ready dessert.

Raisins are cheaper by 30 per cent than formerly—see that you get plenty in your foods.

The Companionship of Health

The Debt Every Mother Owes to Her Children.

It Is the Health, Strength and Vitality of a Mother Which Makes the Happiness of a Home

There Are Countless Numbers of Mothers Who Are as Youthful in Spirit and Action as Their Boys and Girls

Their sports are her sports, their pleasures are her pleasures, and her health, vigor, and strong nerves keep her always ready to take part in their fun. By keeping her blood filled with iron she drives away the approach of signs of age and ill health—her brow is unmarked by the imprint of lines that weariness and nervousness bring—her body is erect, her flesh firm and her skin clear with all the freshness and charm of youth.

It is the happiness and well-being of the mother that gives home its true meaning—where the mother is nervous and irritable the home is clouded with a shadow that casts its darkness over husband and children. If these women only knew how quickly the state of their health is reflected in the whole nature and appearance of their children they would want to build themselves up into stronger, healthier women, better able physically to take an active interest in the welfare of their children and home.

In most cases mothers who have allowed themselves to become weak and generally run-down fail to realize the importance of building up reserve strength and energy by keeping their blood rich in iron. The strain of home cares and work cannot be borne by a woman unless she does feed her blood health-giving iron. It is the strong, healthy woman who can smile at the trials of life, for she has the strength and stamina to weather reverses and come thru a winner—and this is the kind of woman Nuxated Iron helps make.

When your blood is starving for iron no or stimulants can put you right. Starving must have iron, the same as a starving have food; iron is red blood food and you iron to supply such food. But be sure the take is organic iron, and not metallic iron, people usually take. Metallic iron is comes from the action of strong acid on of iron, and is therefore entirely different from ganic iron. Organic iron is like the iron in blood and like the iron in spinach, It may be had from your druggist under the Nuxated Iron.

Nuxated Iron also contains a remarkable brought to the attention of the French Academy Medicine by the celebrated Dr. Robin, which resents the principal chemical living nerve force, FOR FEEDING THE so that NUXATED IRON may be a BLOOD and a NERVE FOOD.

Over four million people annually are ated Iron. It will not injure the teeth the stomach. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain factory results. Beware of insist on having genuine organic Iron. Look for the letters NI on every —Chosen by Bullock's in France to be the leader among Velvets for the Functions of the Southland—and directly imported by Bullock's to be where its need is greatest—

—The gentle touch of a falling snowflake could not be softer than the touch of "Circe" Velvet—flaming tints of California sunsets were never more charming than the colors of "Circe" Velvet.

—"Circe" Velvet is an "all-silk" Velvet, manufactured under traditions of Quality and Beauty, and chosen by Bullock's in France, because of these and other attributes reflective of Bullock's own Ideals and the wants of women of the Southland. It is 38 and 39 inches wide and will go on sale at $10.00 a yard—Monday—

Here is a Brief List of Other Imported Silks that Were Personally Selected by Bullock's

WHAT CONFERENCE CAN DO TO HELP CHINESE.

Only Unselfishness at Disarmament Meet Will Result in Success in Pacific Settlements.

BY PATRICK GALLAGHER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PEKING (China) Sept. 24.—It is now fully admitted here that so far as Pacific peace is concerned, the Washington conference will most probably make or break itself upon the manner in which it deals with the open door and the integrity and sovereignty of China. Europeans, Americans, Japanese and Chinese all utter warnings against reposing any faith in mere expressions of principle or agreements as to principle. The practice, they say, must be stated. Plans must be thoroughly worked out in detail while the conference is sitting, and these plans must take into account China's inability to save herself without foreign assistance on the political as well as on the administrative side of her problems; also, the real danger of international rivalry for control of the political destinies of China.

This summary represents the considered views of all friends of China, in China. I have canvassed them carefully in an effort to test the probability of a workable agreement or failure at Washington. There seems to be a sufficiency of sweet reasonableness among all the major interests to enforce harmony at the conference, if its Far Eastern decisions are governed by this more experienced and more moderate body of international Far Eastern opinion. On the other hand, if any one of the extreme elements is given headway—European, Japanese, Chinese or American—it is recognized that however superfically it may seem to succeed, actually the conference will fail, and the subsequent situation will be far worse than the present very dangerous condition.

SOVEREIGNTY A MYTH.

The accompanying photograph of the American naval wireless station, within the walls of Peking, illustrates the fact that we are not in a good position to prate about the integrity or sovereignty of China. It towers over everything else in the so-called capital of China. It is an eyesore to many Americans as well as to all the Chinese in Peking. It mocks our fine phrases and yet it serves a useful purpose. It yells out the truth, China's sovereignty is a myth.

The purpose of this station is to control communication with the sea, so that warships and transports may bring gobs and soldiers to the relief of Americans, in case the Chinese should endanger American life and property in the Chinese capital. American marines mount guard on the ancient walls of Peking. The American legation is an armed fortress, and so, too, are the European and Japanese legations. A rear-admiral has just been appointed to command American gunboats on the Yangtze River, China's Mississippi. China is a nation in name only. The Chinese republic is a geographical term of doubtful and dangerous significance. The fact is recognized by everybody in China; and that is why the Peking and Tientsin Times, a stanch British supporter of the League of Nations, joins other foreign and native newspapers in laughing at the recent performance at Geneva, where Dr. Wellington Koo, the Chinese Minister at London, "presided over the government of the world." The official representative of a people possessing no government of its own was given the job of "sitting on the top of the world." In China, that incident has given the League its deathblow. It might give the Harding plans a useful inspiration.

Dr. Schurman returning in state from the Chinese President's

The Far Eastern task of the Washington conference is to produce a plan—not a principle—that will assure the Chinese a real chance to enter the family of nations as a genuine, going concern; a real nation. The alternative is a continuance of chaos in China, international competition over China, and an inevitable smash-up.

DOES NOT EXIST.

FRATERNAL AFFAIRS.

[In this department The Times will each Sunday print news of the activities of the various fraternal orders, State societies and allied organizations. Contributions should be brief and concise. They should be addressed to the Fraternal Editor, Times, Los Angeles, Cal., and must reach this office by Wednesday noon.]

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45, Ramona Parlor No. 109 and Corona Parlor No. 196, of the Native Sons of the Golden West, have completed all arrangements for one of the greatest membership drives ever undertaken in the State by that order.

A special effort will be made to increase the membership in the local parlors until together they will be larger than either the San Francisco or Oakland parlors, which lead today in the matter of numbers.

Social dances and various other entertainments, for eligibles, their families and friends, have been arranged, to be held at least once a month. Open meetings for eligibles, after the regular business meetings, have also been planned. These meetings will be concluded with entertainments and refreshments.

The Los Angeles and Corona parlors have each set their goal at 500 new members, while the Ramona Parlor is anxious to enroll 1500 members before December 31. When the quota of 5000 members for this city has been filled, plans for the erection of one of the finest fraternal homes and clubrooms in the State will be completed.

ODD FELLOWS.

Highland Park Lodge No. 69 will hold a regular meeting Tuesday at Miller's Hall, 6311 Pasadena avenue. Preceding the last meeting, a supper was served to seventy-five Odd Fellows. Five new members have been recently admitted to the lodge.

Los Angeles Lodge No. 35 will meet Wednesday at 220½ South Main street, where Colonial Lodge No. 89 of Oxnard will exemplify the third degree on another class of candidates. Visiting Odd Fellows from New York, New Jersey and other eastern States attended the meeting Wednesday, and were pleased with the spirit of co-operation evidenced by the local lodges.

EAGLES.

An old-fashioned barbecue and high jinks will be held today by Los Angeles Aerie No. 102, and members of other aeries in Southern California, at the Pacific Film studio in Culver City.

The barbecue is being held for the benefit of the Eagles' annual Christmas fund. One of the features of the day will be the entertainment furnished by members of the local aerie.

Last night a Halloween ball was given at the clubhouse, 617 West Sixteenth street, for the benefit of the degree team, which had charge of the entertainment.

MACCABEES.

Los Angeles Tent No. 2 will hold a dance at the lodge rooms, 730 South Grand avenue, Wednesday evening, November 2.

The degree team of Tent No. 2 exemplified the ritualistic work for the tent at San Diego last night. More than fifty candidates were initiated. Following the ceremonies an elaborate supper was served. Great Commander S. W. Hall of Oakland, was present, and delivered an address on Maccabeeism.

AMERICAN YEOMEN.

Progressive Homestead No. 5934 will hold a meeting for the installation of officers Tuesday evening, November 1, at the Knights of Pythias Hall, First street and Rowan avenue.

Past Supreme Chaplain Charlotte Rawlings will act as installing officer, assisted by Chief Overseer El-stice for China is Necessary at Arms Limitation Conference.

MUST BAN SELFISHNESS.

ss of Chinese and Lust for Power are Stumbling Blocks to Settlement of Problems of Pacific.

ued from Forty-sixth Page.)

Mary Americans in China Europeans in China think time has come when the government and the Chi- people would do well to recog- fact that "the republic of has never existed and that no present Chinese hope of a republic upon the ma- now available in China. On other hand, it is pointed out, and Japanese friends of must recognize the fact that attempt to restore the monarchy modified shape or form is as of realization and as dan- to international peace as is in the "republican" believe. An attempt to restore monarchy would be opposed by of the contending Chinese fac- and by most Americans in It might be the match that would explode the international powder barrel in China.

One of the chief causes of Chinese chaos is the existence of a huge horde of so-called Chinese "foreign advisers." They prey upon the poor Chinese, fatten at the cost of bankrupt China, loll in the lobbies of the two big Peking hotels and roll around the city in fine limousines. They spend most of their time stirring up trouble between Chinese factions, quarreling over the putrid carcass of a once-proud empire, plotting against this legation or that. Disgusted, disinterested observers declare that a way must be found to save China from the poisoned stings of these western wasps or they will make it their special business to destroy any plan for the real salvation of China.

These bogus advisers should not be confounded with the genuine advisers of the Chinese government, technical experts on railway, mining, forestry and other work, who are rendering really valuable service. Several of these experts are Americans of high standing in their own fields. They seem to be well respected by Chinese and foreigners. The point is urged that China needs more of this type of honest adviser, and that they require more authority.

In the interest of the Chinese people as well as for the protection of international peace, Chinese government expenditure must be open to public inspection. That there may be enough "honey" to feed the "bees"—the real, efficient Chinese civil servants, native and foreign—China and the powers must cooperate to shoo away the "wasps." Today, China may be likened to a vast jam pot surrounded by a swarm of buzzing bloodsuckers, each stinging the other and all stinging poor old Mrs. China who works early and late over her washtub to provide the jam.

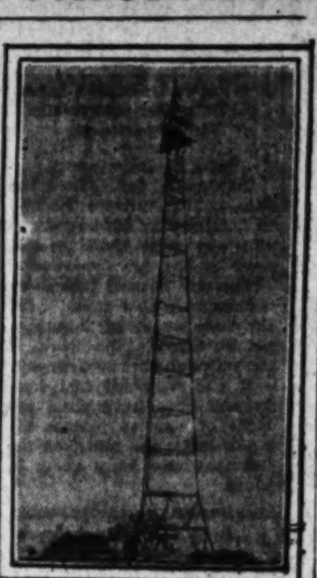
An attempt to apply "benevolent idealism" to the ugly realities of international business in China has just culminated in a very ugly scandal. A new railway bridge is needed to replace the old bridge over the Yellow River, on the Peking-Hankow line. Famous American, British, French, Belgian and Japanese bridge constructors sat down to the task of picking a prize plan and letting the contract. Now, the American and Japanese are holding one end of the bridge and the British, French and Belgians are holding the other end. Nasty epithets are being bandied across the frail old structure, and millions of Chinese dollars will probably be dropped into the mud of the river.

WHAT CHINA NEEDS.

What China really needs is one thing; what the Washington conference can do for China is quite another thing. This is the way the problem is summed up by the soberminded friends of the Chinese:

"A Chinese republic is an utter impossibility, because most of the Chinese millions don't give a hoot who owns or governs China. Prophecies as to how the Chinese would rise up in wrath against foreign intervention are the sheerest buncombe. The danger of foreign intervention is the certainty of conflict between the foreign interveners. That is the real fly in the ointment. How little the Chinese care about foreign rule is proved by the fact that, despite all the howling against the Japanese, there are, today, in Kiao-Chow three times the number of Chinese that were there when the Germans developed the concession.

"Stern facts force the Chinese to concentrate upon making a living, getting on in the world. The grafters, for the most part, monopolize the politics of China, and the attention of the world; yet there are many honest men like C. C. Wang doing their level best against long odds in the seemingly hopeless task of pulling China out of the hole. Little is heard of the C. C. Wangs. The C. T. Wangs get the limelight. C. T. Wang was until recently quite a figure among the Chinese republicans. His fame was blazoned all over the world. Within recent months, his performances have earned Chinese and foreign condemnation. He is a leading figure in a Shanghai exchange scandal. He has been read out of the republican party by Sun and the Cantonese.



The American Naval Wireless Station, Peking

"What China really needs is an American repetition of what has been done for the Filipinos, or a British repetition of what has been done in India. Anti-Japanese agitation has rendered that ideal solution impossible. Now, it would be as dangerous for us (or for the British) as for the Japanese. Suspicion would reproduce the Samoan incident on a vast scale. It is instructive to think of what might have been, because but for this legacy of suspicion it is a fact that there is a strong body of British opinion that might have favored a proposal of this sort. Now, it is not practical Far Eastern politics, and the Chinese are thereby the chief sufferers. They cannot govern themselves and (for their own sakes) the powers dare not attempt the task of governing them.

"A restoration of monarchy is impossible, because the Manchu has forfeited the mandate of heaven and there is no new son of heaven within the celestial domain. The imperial prisoner of Peking is a menace to the peace of China and the peace of the world. Many Britons would like to see him back on the Dragon Throne. It is thought that he is being held in reserve for that purpose. That dream must be abandoned. Thus, a republic is impossible and a monarchy is out of the question and international government of China is the way to war in the Far East."

So "Old China Hands" assure me. I believe they are right; but I asked the question:

"What, then, is to be done?"

The answer should be carefully considered by the Washington conference. Here it is:

CANCEL RECOGNITION.

"(1.) Withdraw recognition from the present fictional government of China.

"(2.) Recognize none of the competing Chinese governments, none of which offers any prospect of unity or stability.

"(3.) Accept the fact that diplomatic dealings with unrepresentative Chinese governments inevitably lead to intrigue, promote divisions among the powers and prevent united action for Chinese welfare and Pacific peace. The legations are organized for diplomatic service in China. Conditions make salutary diplomatic service impossible and diplomacy of any sort undesirable. As a temporary measure, transform the legations into special commissions properly equipped to carry out certain specific work in the common interest of China and the world at large.

"(4.) Instead of recognizing a Chinse delegation repudiated by the majority factions in China and chosen by a bogus government that is flouted even by its own militarist masters, accept the facts of the actual Chinese situation, invite all the factions to send their delegates to Washington, give them equal treatment and an equal hearing and consult with them as to some detailed plan for a provisional Chinese government to be assisted in specific ways by the international high commission that should take the place of the present unsuitable diplomatic corps.

"(5.) Stipulate that the international high commission shall work under the provisional Chinese government; provide a time limit and specific means by which the Chinese themselves can change the membership of their Chinese provisional government and the way in which each and every reform is to be carried out. Include in this series of practicable plans a provision for the publication of all Chinese accounts. That will stop the chief source of danger—the use of Chinese government funds for dangerous propaganda and other forms of vicious intrigue."

HAS BAD SPOTS.

I give this proposal for what it is worth; because, while undoubtedly some of its features are almost as objectionable as the so-called Hoover plan for the "internationalization of China," many natives and foreigners regard it as the best way out of a seemingly impossible situation. I have yet to hear of a plan that is not denounced by some large body of interested opinion.

The Japanese assure me that they are unalterably opposed to any form of international pressure on China. The area apparently moving heaven and earth to win the friendship and the confidence of the Chinese. That is about the healthiest sign in China, and it may yet result in bringing the Chinese, the Japanese and Americans closer together.

This prospect has not escaped European calculations, and it is possible that these "international plans," now so much in the air, may have a European source. They did not originate in Europe, but among Americans during the Hukuang loan discussions, just before the fall of the Manchus.

Anti-British writers, not to mention the most prominent young Chinese member of the official Peking propaganda (Hollington K. Tong) agitated along these lines before the present critical situation arose.

Facts like these relieve the Europeans from any charge of paternity. Yet, the thing is very much in the air; and, when the Washington conference comes to a close, adoption of some veiled form of international "assistance," properly sweetened to tempt the celestial palate, may prove it to be the only "open door" to Chinese and international safety in China.

How Mastin's Yeast Vitamon Tablets Make Skin Clear and Flesh Firm

Easy and Economical to Take. Results Quick.

Of what use are fine features, with an ugly skin, flabby flesh, sunken cheeks, a scrawny neck or a careworn face? If you want to quickly clear your skin and complexion, put some firm, healthy flesh on your bones, increase your nerve force and power, and look and feel far better, here is a simple test you will find well worth trying: First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Next take Mastin's VITAMON—two tablets with every meal. Then weigh and measure yourself again each week and continue taking Mastin's VITAMON Tablets regularly until you are satisfied with your gain in weight and energy.

Every woman who has heard of the wondrous health and beauty-making power of vitamines in yeast, fresh vegetables and other raw foods will be glad to know of the amazing results being obtained from Mastin's VITAMON Tablets. These contain in highly concentrated form the three vitamines (Fat Soluble A and Water Soluble B and C) in an active state such as Nature originally provided them in fresh yeast and certain raw foods, and all of which are regarded as absolutely necessary for perfect health, vigor and proper physical development.

Mastin's VITAMON Tablets are now being used by thousands who appreciate their convenience, economy and quick results. Containing as they do all three vitamines, highly concentrated, Mastin's VITAMON Tablets are ideal for mixing with your daily food, as they supply all the needed vitamines which are so often lost in the cooking and preparation of many everyday foods, and which the body should have to make firm tissue, strong nerves, rich blood, clear skin and a keen active brain. Mastin's VITAMON Tablets do not upset the stomach or cause that bloated feeling, but, on the contrary, are a great aid in overcoming indigestion and constipation. Under their influence pimples, boils and other skin eruptions seem to vanish as if by magic and the complexion becomes clear and beautiful. So remarkable are the benefits from these highly concentrated tablets that entire satisfaction is absolutely guaranteed or the small amount you pay for the trial will be promptly refunded. Be sure to remember the name—Mastin's VI-TA-MON—the original and genuine yeast-vitamine tablet. There is nothing else like it, so do not accept imitations or substitutes. You can get Mastin's VITAMON Tablets at all Owl Drug Stores and other good druggists.

OF ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

From "Amalfi."

This is an enchanted land!
Round the headlands far away
Sweeps the blue Salernian bay
With its sickle of white sand;
Further still and furthermost
On the dim discovered coast
Paestum with its ruins lies,
And its roses all in bloom
Seem to tinge the fatal skies
Of that lonely land of doom.

On this terrace, high in air,
Nothing doth the good monk care
For such worldly themes as these.
From the garden just below
Little puffs of perfume blow,
And a sound is in his ears
Of the murmur of the bees
In the shining chestnut trees;
Nothing else he heeds or hears.
All the landscape seems to swoon
In the happy afternoon;
Slowly o'er his senses creep
The encroaching waves of sleep,
And he sinks as sank the town,
Unresisting, fathoms down,
Into caverns cool and deep!

At the MacDowell Club.

The MacDowell Club's activities are increasing at a great pace, and its importance in the art life of our community can hardly be overestimated. The exhibition of graphic arts in the club's Los Angeles headquarters, the Tajo Building, is both large and comprehensive. You cannot afford to miss it. The exhibition rooms are open till 5 o'clock every afternoon.

Karl Yens shows about twenty of his best oils and water colors, in the ratio of one to five—which is well, for as a rule his water colors are far more delightful than his oils, interesting as many of these are. He has a sure and deft touch in the lighter medium, and yet there is strength behind it all. With it he catches the more fleeting aspects and effects in nature, giving us poetic bits of a naive charm.

Lovely things from the Yens water-color brush are "Eaton Canyon," "The Sower," "The Harvest," "Monastery of Brookland," and those two having the same name, "In the Foothills, Pasadena," the lower one being especially lovely, as delicate and as subtly gray as a landscape by a Japanese—and, it may be added, as decorative. Fine oils are "The Resting Giant," a rock in the swirl of waters at Laguna Beach, where Yens has his studio, and "Their Castle," two seabirds perched among crags above dark troubled waters. Both pictures are somberly attractive.

From John Rich we have a very nobly characterized portrait, "Miss Yup See," a Chinese woman in a robe of state, the modeling of face and figure being both strong and simple. Rich also gives us a charming bit of genre, "Afternoon Tea," alive with sunlight and holding figures of the graceful young girls he paints so well.

Mabel Alvarez's "Carmen," portrait head of a little girl, is well modeled, attractive in pose, equally attractive in color and handling. Luvena Buchanan's two still life studies are broadly direct in the modern way, alive with harmonious yet strong color, well arranged.

Stunning big things in color come from Edouard Vysekal, very fine, yet rather strange, being the portrait of a young woman which he calls "Arrangement in Green." His "Klamatjka," which is probably Czech for "The Dance," is also powerful and vibrant in color, alive with movement in youthful girlish figures garbed in gorgeous peasant costumes. "Undaunted" is a character study of an old man, a commanding figure in spite of cane and limp.

Roscoe Shrader's "Wet Night," a scene from Hollywood, is instinct with truth, a difficult phase of nature rendered with breadth of brush as well as much imaginative insight. Clarence Hinkle's five sketches, all small, are daring experiments in color harmonies—and, be it said, highly successful ones—done with a simplicity that shows how well this artist has studied economy in effort.

We have interesting wood blocks from Bessie Hazen, May Gearhart, Frances Gearhart, Vivian Stringfield, Marjorie Hodges and Fannie Kearns. I wish I had space to mention them in detail, for many of them are fine. Douglas Donaldson gives us two bits of enamel of striking beauty and originality. Tolles Chamberlain, a child's head in plaster that is exquisitely sympathetic. Max Wieczorek, two portraits in chalk, the one of a young girl being especially lovely in pose and feeling.

There are notable batiks, beautiful in design and color, from Roubaix De Richey, and some exceedingly imaginative ones from Milton Monroe, who handles the figures in the way of the medieval painters—a way that is peculiarly effective in batiks, if indeed, it is not the only way. Monroe's purples are superb.

There is a rich little collection of photographs from the pictorialists—Margrethe Mather, with her "Gray Vase," "Spring Dance," portrait of Ricardo Roblo, etc.; Edward Weston, with "Prologue to a Sad Spring," a bit of lyricism, and "Sibyl," as finely sculpturesque as Michael Angelo's; Edward Curtis, with classic studies of Indians and wonderful figures and heads from Ferdinand Earle's "Omar Khayyam;" Karl Struss, with nudes that are superb, posed with an unerring instinct for beauty.

All in all, a pretty good show, don't you think?

Southwest Museum's Exhibit.

The Southwest Museum's first annual exhibition of pictures and sculptures by artists of California promises to be one of the big events in the art history of Los Angeles. Opening next Tuesday, it will continue all through the month of November, to be followed at once by a loan exhibition of twenty canvases from the brush of William Keith. Meanwhile, Mrs. Blanche Dugan is loaning the Southwest Museum, for an indefinite period, four important canvases by European masters of the past century.

The jury of selection for this first annual show now stands as follows: Samuel L. Kingan of Tucson, Benjamin J. Hampton of Los Angeles, Lockwood de Forrest of Santa Barbara, Ernest A. Batchelder of Pasadena, Frank van Shoun of San Francisco. Two of these men will compose the jury of awards, but the names of these two have not yet been made public. A prize of $100 will be awarded the picture that wins the greatest number of votes from the public.

The William Keith exhibition will be held under the direction of C. W. Keith, the artist's son, who will contribute eight fine examples of this American master; the other twelve that complete the exhibition will be selected from works in possession of Los Angeles collectors, many of whom own splendid examples. The exhibition will be a notable one.

Mrs. Blanche Dugan is one of the most discriminating of our picture lovers, and the four convases that she lends to the museum are all of first-class quality. The Gerome "Algerian Girls," two graceful figures, is especially fine, a beautiful example of academic painting. Then we have a Diaz, "Forest Interior," a Corot, "Trees," a Rousseau, "Quiet Pastoral Scene."

It is the intention of the directors of the Southwest Museum to hold exhibitions of pictures and sculptures in rapid rotation throughout the year. Art is indeed receiving a fine impetus in Southern California, an impetus that will soon land us on top of the heap.

The American etchers included in the exhibition of prints at the Stendahl galleries, the Ambassador, deserve much more space and attention than was devoted to them in these columns last week. The wealth of etchings by the old masters offered such an opportunity to the critic for renewing acquaintance with old and trusted friends that many newer acquaintances were dismissed in an apparently perfunctory manner.

The American etchers of today are entitled to very serious consideration. It is obvious to the critic, the artist, and even the layman, that definite schools of graphic art have flourished in the past, and we refer glibly to the Barbizon school of 1830, the Whistlerian school, and, much farther back, to the "Little Masters of the Sixteenth Century."

To the close student and observer of trends and influences it must be equally obvious that we are today in the midst of another high period, an etching heyday, and that the American school of the first quarter of the twentieth century will go down in the history of the graphic art as one of great productivity and variety, of technical excellence and faithful adherence to the observances of the tradition—in fine, as another epochal school of etching.

These facts are obvious, but it is by no means so clear that any one man of the group represents more truly than his fellow etchers the spirit of the period or stands as the acknowledged leader of the school. In a word, the question of who is the leading American etcher is purely an academic one, and can properly be left to some critic of the next generation to decide. What is of vital interest is the fact that Benson's wild birds, Kinney's "Dancing Etchings," Washburn's architectural and portrait etchings, Webster's streets and Haskell's trees, portraits by Levy and Heintzelman, Pennell's London and MacLaughlan's Venice, are all included in this amazing period. These men are today maintaining a standard so high and setting a pace so swift that their output must be reckoned with in any survey of the great etchings of the past.

Among the finest examples of their work included in the exhibition must be mentioned Benson's "Broadbills," Washburn's "Portrait of a Navajo Indian," Levy's "New Talmud," Haskell's "Hilltop," Heintzelman's "Three Score and Ten," MacLaughlan's "Songs of Venice," and Kinney's "Tortola." These are more than fine etchings, they are great art.

California Exhibit Once More.

The twelfth annual exhibition of pictures and sculptures by the California Art Club will not close at the end of October, as originally planned, but will continue at the Los Angeles Museum to the middle of November. This is good news, for the exhibition is well worthy of close study from all of us.

Somebody asked me, out at the museum the other day, if I could tell him where Benjamin Brown's two landscapes were hung. I could, and I did, for I had looked many times at these well-painted pictures, though, curiously enough, I have somehow neglected to mention them in either of the reviews written about this exhibition. I do it now with genuine pleasure, the delicately colored and well-modeled "Kearsarge Pinnacles" and the sunlit expanse called "San Timoteo Canyon." They are fine specimens of Brown's later work in landscape.

Loren Barton's "The Caller" hangs next to Von Schneidau's "The Caller," offering us an interesting study in contrasting methods. Von Schneidau's canvas is full of light, Miss Barton's is low-toned in subtle grays and browns, a Whistleresque effect of great charm. Which will you have? I like them both—up to a certain point—though for different reasons. Each gives us desirable qualities in painting. Miss Barton's "The Dance" is also low-toned and delightfully harmonious, though perhaps not as alive as it might be. Edouard Vysekal's cartoon in last week's Laguna Life hits off its main fault with much cleverness, when he places the central figure on a wooden peg and a round stand.

One of the best of William L. Judson's landscapes is "Edge of the Desert," a close and truthful study of nature, its sky full of movement. John Coolidge's "First of May," though larger in size than its subject warrants, is yet a notably good study of grays. I like the truth of Wallace DeWolf's "Skoogie Marsh," and of Anna A. Hill's "Surging Sea," and of that fine piece of synthesis by Paul Lauritz, "Evening, Topanga Canyon" and of Roscoe Shrader's study in atmospheric subtleties, "Fog Wraiths."

The few miniatures suffer from being placed in a case instead of being hung in shadow boxes, for the passerby throws reflections—tangible and literal ones—on the jewel-like little pictures. Miss Mitchell's simply modeled and delicately toned portrait, "Mrs. Wernigk," suffers much from this undesired intrusion of shadows as the other miniatures.

An exhibition of the recent work of Russell Iredell of New York will be held this afternoon in the studio of Douglas Donaldson, 4960 Melrose Hill, from 3 to 5.

SUFFERED SEVEN LONG YEARS

Finally Relieved by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ravenswood, W. Va.—"For seven long years I suffered from a female trouble and inflammation so that I was not able to do my housework. I consulted several doctors but none seemed to give me relief. I read in a paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I decided to try it, and before the first bottle was gone I found great relief so I continued using it until I had taken eight bottles. Now I am very well and can do my own housework. I can gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine to suffering women."—Mrs. BERTHA LIERING, R. F. D., Ravenswood, W. Va.

The ordinary day of most housewives is a ceaseless treadmill of washing, cooking, cleaning, mending, sweeping, dusting and caring for little ones. How much harder the tasks when some derangement of the system causes headaches, backache, bearing-down pains and nervousness. Every such woman should profit by Mrs. Liering's experience and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

NO RED AUTOS FOR CHICAGO.

City Passes Ordinance Limiting Particular Color to the Fire Department.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—After Jan. 1, 1922, private vehicles in Chicago may not be painted with the same shade of red used by the fire department.

The city council passed an ordinance to that effect under the State law giving it authority to expedite the work of the police and fire departments.

It was explained that traffic policemen have given the right of way to private vehicles under the mistaken belief that they were going to a fire.

ROYAL ARCANUM.

Los Angeles Council No. 1489 will meet Wednesday, November 2, at Ramona Hall, 349 South Hill street, to put on initiatory work, after which an entertainment will be given. Members of local and eastern councils are invited to attend.

MASONS.

Westlake Lodge No. 392 will hold a Halloween ball and party at the Goldberg-Bosley Hall, Sixteenth and Flower streets, tomorrow evening. Prizes will be awarded in spot dances, and at card tables provided for those who do not dance.

STATE SOCIETIES.

Plans for the all Southern California picnic reunion of the Loyal Illinoisans to be held Saturday, November 12, in Sycamore Grove, are now being completed. More than 10,000 visitors are expected at the picnic, which is to be conducted by the local Illinois organization in conjunction with the societies of Pasadena, Long Beach, Whittier, Pomona, Riverside and other towns. The events planned include a program, registers and basket dinners.

The first meeting this year of the Loyal Illinoisans will be held next Friday at the California Hall, South Main and Thirtieth streets, where meetings of the society will be held on the first and third Friday evenings of every month during the year.

Headquarters of the Canadian Tourists' Association of Southern California have been opened in Ocean Park next to the Municipal Auditorium, according to a statement issued by John Hooper, president of the association. Beginning next Friday evening, a program will be given each week in the auditorium to which anyone interested will be admitted. These programs will include popular entertainments with music, addresses, dancing and social activities.

The Canadian Maple Leaf Club will offer a program to be followed by refreshments and dancing next Saturday evening, November 5, at the Gamut clubhouse, 1044 South Hope street. Canadians and their friends are invited.

Idahoans will hold the opening social reunion of the fall Saturday evening, November 5, at Clara Barton Hall, 1605½ South Main street. The program will be followed by dancing.

The Nebraska Association will hold a reunion Monday evening, November 7, at the Friday Morning clubhouse, 940 South Figueroa street. Col. R. W. Richardson, who succeeds Col. F. M. Rublee as president of the association, promises an interesting program.

The Seamstress

Now, ain't it just like folks what ain't got no worry at all and don't have to be bothered with all kinds of important questions, what most people can't get around, to go and hatch up some questions what they ain't no kind of use of learning onless you want to invent something or take a trip around the world?

Well, if a man wants to sit up nights, like Mr. Edison must of, to get together a whole lot of foolish ones, why he can do it. But my land it would be a heap more use in the world for a body to try to he'p solve some of the real troubles. Yes'm, like where you are agoing to git the next meal from, if you ain't got no money to pay for it, and you ain't got no work, either.

Yes'm, if a body could invent a way to git bread out'n a stone and water and coffee and ham and eggs out'n the rain pipe, why it might be all right putting so much time on foolish questions. But my land! They ain't a day but what you are called on to answer some kind of a problem what has got to do with living and breathing, and gitting along with your fellow man, or not taking the shirt off'n his back to put on yours, or keepin' a roof over your head without robbin' somebudy of their natural perch.

Yes'm, I believe a man has got mighty little to occupy him if he gits to the place where he can ask them kind of questions. You know it don't take much sense no-how, to ask questions. It's answering 'em what takes gumption and education and experience, and all them things.

Well, if I was you and going away why I would make me a black lace dress if I didn't have any other thing. No'm, I shore wouldn't be without a black lace dress this summer, because it's goin' to be most a uniform.

Well, mebbe you don't want anything so common. But lemme tell you it ain't what you call common. It's a fad. And most stylish people will have something what all the other folks has, if it is a fad, when they will turn their noses up at something what is common. Well, the difference between a thing being common and it being a fad is that it comes in cheap dresses, and is easy copied. Now, you know you can't ever make a black lace, what is handsome black lace, common. It's black lace, and handsome black lace as long as it stays in style and just as different from cheap black lace as it can be.

Oh, if it is plum out of style, and even good black lace gits thataway onct in a while, why then you can't wear it, of course. But you can't make good black lace cheap looking. And if it is made up stylish and has some kind of original touches on it why, it always looks like a real lady. You know they ain't nothing prettier than a black lace dress for dinner, whether it is made over white or black or flesh chiffon. . . .

Yes'm, they are still making 'em up over flesh georgette the same as the white lace dresses. And most of 'em ain't got no other color at all. Well, and you know the flesh is so light that you don't realize it is color; but it just makes it look a little handsomer and a little softer thataway instead of being made up over white satin or black satin.

Well, some of 'em have ribbon sashes with long loops and end at each side and these can be in black satin or moire or they can be in green. A heap of folks like green and black together, I do myself. If you get a real piece of ribbon, not just cheap stuff, why, it looks just fine in jade green on black lace. . . .

Oh, yes'm mebbe it is real expensive, but mebbe if you ain't got a piece of good black lace you can have a dress made of something else and take a black lace shawl or mebbe a scarf. Why you can still have a mighty pretty stylish dress. And if you don't want to do that why they ain't nothing in the world so stylish as a black lace scarf or shawl for this summer. You just fling it around you kind of careless and stylish-like in the evening over a light-colored or a black dress and you will be all the go, it don't make no difference where you are.

Ma'm? Why, yes'm, theys all the difference in the world the way you wear anything.

Goodness gracious! I'd just as lief try to use a rail to pin with as these here pins. Why, they feel like I have got a lot of toothpicks in my mouth instead of pins. I certainly do hope I don't swaller one of these. They certainly would have to cut me open to git a holt of it and keep it from killing me. Yes'm, indeed, why now there would be a question worth asking if I was to swallow several of them pins I reckon I'd up and ask mighty quick if it was going to kill me. . . .

Yes'm, you take anybudy what knows they are going to always be warm enough and fed enough and living easy the rest of their life, I reckon it's just play to git up a lot of questions like we used to do when we played guessing games when we was little. But when a feller like Lonny (that's my husband) is got to forever and eternally wonder and ask himself where the next year is agoing to hit him, why, he ain't got much time to dwell on asking other folks any kind of questions.

Now, you know my cousin William (what I believe I haven't spoke of for a long time because none of us didn't know where he was) turned up the other day. He was always the wind that would set around when the rest was busy and git up all kinds of puzzlin' questions and arguments. Yes'm, he was mighty good at it. And whilst he didn't know no more than the rest of us what next year was going to do to him, whether he would be awalking the railroad tracks or staying with his kin, why he would just not ask nothing about the future at all and would just busy hisself with all kinds of queer talk about, "What if the world was square?" and things like that.

Well, it never did get him a living and he always had to live on the rest whilst he set there a thinking and whittling. . . . .

ATTRACTIVE HOME WEDDING.

A most attractive home wedding was witnessed by a company of guests last evening; when Miss Elizabeth Monser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Edward Monser, of 262 South Van Ness avenue, was united to Clifford Biehl. The house was beautifully decorated in pink chrysanthemums and other flowers, with ferns and palms.

Preceding the ceremony John Smallman sang a group of songs. Mrs. James McPherson Reynolds of Pomona played the wedding march.

The bride, on the arm of her father, was preceded by her sister, Miss Dorothy Monser, a student in the University of California, as maid-of-honor, and little Betty Hoobler, namesake of the bride, as flower girl, scattered rose petals in her path.

The bride's gown was of ivory mirror crepe, draped in Princesse lace, embroidered in pearls. Her veil, also of Princesse lace, was caught in a crown of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white orchids, bride's roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor looked charming in a gown of rose taffeta with silver slippers and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses, while the little flower girl was dainty in a pink ruffled organdie.

The groom, attended by Robert Burns Sherwood, cousin of Miss Monser, awaited his bride at an altar formed by cathedral candles, palms, smilax, pink chrysanthemums and delphinium. Dr. Herbert Booth Smith of Immanuel Presbyterian Church performed the ceremony, the bride's father giving her in keeping. Supper was served after the ceremony.

The bride has been a resident of this city for the past four years. She is well known in musical circles here and is the contralto soloist in the First English Lutheran Church. She has been chosen by the Los Angeles Oratorio Society to sing the contralto role in the "Messiah" to be given Christmas time.

Mr. Biehl, formerly of Pittsburg, Pa., is assistant cashier of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company plant here. He is also a tenor of note and has been heard as soloist for many musical organizations in Los Angeles.

The couple departed by motor for a trip to San Diego and Coronado Beach, and upon their return, will reside at 2729 Francis street.

ON EBERLES' ANNIVERSARY.

In celebration of the wedding anniversary of Admiral and Mrs. Eberle, Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Hutchison entertained at tea Monday afternoon. Their guests included Vice-Admiral Shoemaker, Rear-Admiral Hughes, Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Stickney, the captains of the battleships and their wives, members of Admiral Eberle's staff and the wives and officers of the flagship New Mexico. Rear-Admiral Hutchison is chief of staff to Admiral Eberle. The ship's band played music for dancing.

Admiral and Mrs. Eberle were honor guests at a small tea at which Mr. and Mrs. George S. Patton of Oak Knoll assembled forty guests, all family connections. Mrs. Eberle is a cousin of Mr. Patton and of Mrs. Hancock Banning.

Admiral and Mrs. Eberle have been given a hearty welcome by society, many notable affairs having already been given in their honor. The largest yet chronicled of course was the tea dance given by Col. and Mrs. Charle Rivers Drake a week ago yesterday.

Mrs. Harold B. Wrenn gave a smart luncheon for Mrs. Eberle on Tuesday when she had as guests Mmes. George J. Denis, Cameron Erskine Thom, Michael J. Connell, Ernest A. Bryant, T. E. Brown, Sydney I. Walles, Arvin Brown, Charles Rivers Drake, J. Kingsley Macomber, Alfred H. Wilcox, Dean Mason, Granville MacGowan, Hugh Stewart, LeMoyne Wills William Preston Harrison and Mrs. Henry Norman Jenson.

Featured in Society Affairs.

Col. and Mrs. Drake entertained at a tea-dance Saturday, a week ago, in honor of Admiral and Mrs. Eberle. The Drakes have been in San Francisco, but returned in time to arrange a dinner and loge party to see "Rigoletto" tomorrow evening. Mrs. Harrison was one of the society women who assisted at Col. and Mrs. Drake's tea. She is posing with her young son, Preston Carter Harrison, whose picture is published for the first time. Mr. and Mrs. Parrot have just returned from Montecito, where they spent the summer. Announcement of the betrothal of Miss Francis and John R. Cudahy was made Tuesday. She has been at the Ambassador all summer with her mother, Mrs. A. G. Francis of St. Louis. Miss Appel is a Chicago visitor at the Ambassador and is seen putting on the golf links at the Ambassador Golf Club at a luncheon and putting contest at which Mrs. Charles Jeffras was hostess.

GIRLS BACK FROM EUROPE.

Miss Verle George and Miss Gwendolen Tennant, her cousin, have just returned from a tour of Europe with their cousin, Mrs. Eugene Gillet of Paris, in whose home they visited several months. Mrs. Gillet chaperoned the girls to London and various cities throughout Europe. They met many distinguished personages while abroad. They left here last January. They are now in Chicago visiting Miss George's brother, Harrison B. George, Jr. They will return to California next month, coming by way of the Canadian Rockies. Miss Tennant will stop in San Francisco while Miss George will come on to Los Angeles.

BETROTHAL INTERESTS.

St. Louis Girl is to Wed Chicago Man in Early December.

The most important engagement announced last week was that of Miss Louise Chenier Francis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Garesche Francis of St. Louis, and John P. Cudahy, eldest son of the late John and Mrs. Cudahy of the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago. No date has been set for the wedding, but it will probably take place early in December.

Miss Francis is one of the leading society girls of St. Louis and has been a favorite here during her stay at the Ambassador with her mother since early summer. Mr. Cudahy has been there, too, convalescing from a recent severe illness. Mrs. Cudahy has been at the Ambassador several months and is a distinguished figure at many affairs given at the hotel. Miss Francis's father is a cousin of the late John Brown Francis, several times Governor and United States Senator from Rhode Island.

SOCIETY.

BY VIRGINIA WOODS.

Last evening was a gay time at the Midwick Country Club which was dressed up for a Halloween dancing party. Those who entertained dined with their guests there first. The rooms were adorned with sunflowers and corn stalks, and many lights glowed from pumpkin faces. There were all kinds of scarecrows and other Halloween motifs including many black cats. The music was fine.

Misses Mary and Dorothy Gray had a company of twenty-nine including Misses Olga Simpson, Florence Kays, Corinne Eisenmayer, Florence Marsh, Margaret Kellogg, Byrd Wallis, Cecile McLaughlin, Eleanor MacGowan, Leontine Bayer, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Etienne, Messrs. Eugene Tracy of New York, Earl Bingwell, Andrew Tribele, Donald Kennedy, John Challis, Watson La Force, Preston Hotchwis, Albert Simpson, Clyde Burr, Harrell J. Harrell, and Dr. Frank Browne. Mrs. W. W. Gray, mother of the hostesses, chaperoned.

George P. Wilson had a party for fourteen which included Mr. and Mrs. Remington Olmstead, Mr. and Mrs. James Woolwine, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Elmer Waetherholt and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lee Woolwine.

Miss Mildred Landis presided at a small table and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Scott Dudley had ten in their party. Mrs. Neil Snow had places for ten and so did Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bishop. Mr. and Mrs. John McWilliams, Jr., were hosts at a table for twenty and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Stevens had twenty-six with them. Others who entertained included Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Hall, Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Price, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Harris, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Card, John Leggat, W. L. Brown, Mrs. E. M. Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Rathbone, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Pelton, and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Kelleher.

At Buffet Supper and Dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Stanton entertained at a Halloween dance and buffet supper last evening. They used a gay array of sunflowers and corn stalks with many spooky motifs.

There were eighty guests, among them being Messrs. and Mmes. Roy Bayly, Clark Bonner, Forrest Q. Stanton, Kenyon Lee, Asa V. Call, Harvey Hewett, Harry Van Horn, Dr. and Mrs. John Curran, Messrs. and Mmes. Victor Ford Collins, John Cooper, Leo Smith, Hooper Churchill, Robert Shrader, Robert Smith, Marion Terry, Henry Swofford, Frank Boswell, Horace Wilson, James G. Scarborough, Jr., Dwight Whiting and Hoover, Misses Gertrude Orcutt, Skinner, Margarita and Carolina Winston, Mabel Seeley, Eve Rawlinson, Carmelita St. John, and Messrs. Louis Wilson, Allen Archer, Victor Brown, John Pike, Preston Hotchkis, Warren V. Bovard, Bradner Wells Lee, Harry Laine, Howard Rath and others.

Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Avery McCarthy are among the hosts doing much en-

Colonial Furniture is Distinctively American

Styles change, the fad of the moment flares briefly and flickers out. But the beautiful simplicity of artistic perfection remains eternal. True art never dies.

So Colonial Furniture—America's contribution to the home furnishing art—because of its rare beauty, its graceful yet simple lines, has ever been an artistic triumph through all the countless vogues that have intervened since the inception of this furniture of our forefathers.

Doubly dear to our hearts is the true Colonial for, aside from its inherent beauty, it is distinctively American, reflecting in its graceful yet sturdy lines the spirit of those stalwarts who carved the destiny of our nation.

Because of the cherished thought we all have for these fine old mahogany pieces of fond association the "California" carries and shows a very comprehensive line of Colonial furniture for every room in the home.

Included in these cherished pieces are exact reproductions of many lovable old masterpieces that have been family heirlooms for generations.

An invitation is extended to inspect these charming examples of the Colonial Period at the "California." We invite value comparisons.

An interesting display of Colonial Furniture Pieces will occupy one of the windows at the "California" this week.

Diamonds and Pearls that Emphasize the fame of Feagans & Company

THE PRESTIGE ENJOYED BY FEAGANS & CO. not only in California but throughout America and even into remote corners of Europe is due in no small measure to the famous "Feagans" collection of Diamonds and Pearls.

The elaborate "Feagans" diamond collection is known for the purity and perfection of each individual stone. No diamond in which the slightest imperfection is visible to the powerful magnifying eye-loop may find a place among this galaxy of gems

And but few collections any where are comparable to the "Feagans" wonderful showing of perfectly matched strings of genuine Oriental Pearls. Here are necklaces ranging in price from a few hundred dollars all the way up to the perfectly graduated strings valued as high as a queen's ransom.

Although Feagans & Co. have but recently announced lowered prices on all their diamonds every indication now points to an upward trend in the diamond market. This, therefore, is a propitious time for the purchase of these gems.

tertaining this autumn. They have been hosts lately at several teas, and last evening gave a dinner-dance at the Midwick Country Club having as guests Dr. and Mrs. J. J. A. Van Kaathoven, Mrs. Dorothy Hill, Capt. Symington, Vice-Admiral and Mrs. Schumacker, and Capt. and Mrs. Campbell.

Tomorrow evening Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy will entertain at the screen version of Rigoletto with supper afterwards.

The Bachelor's Club Plans.

The board of governors of the Bachelors' Club, of which Gabriel Duque is president, is arranging for the annual dinner which is to be held about the middle of next month. At that time the new board of governors and officers will be elected and the date set for the annual fancy dress ball which will be held some time just before Lent. Bradner Wells Lee is secretary and Charles A. Sheedy is treasurer.

Studio Warming.

Mrs. May Mott Small, well-known sculptor and artist, is to be hostess at a large reception today at her new studio home at 941-A West Sixth street. The hours are from 5 to 9 p.m. She expects 200 callers. Tomorrow she will go to San Francisco where she will have an exhibit of medals, miniatures, jewelry and sketches at the opening of the New Alladin Tea Room on Sutter street.

At Bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Palmer Hill of North Kinsey Drive entertained twenty-five guests at a bridge party last evening in honor of Mr. Hill's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Abercrombie Hill. The Halloween motif was carried out in decorations and at the midnight supper.

The hostess, who formerly was Miss Helen Hargis, was assisted by another sister-in-law, Miss Bettina Hill. The honor guests have recently returned from Antofagasta, Chile, where Mr. George Hill was in business the past five years. They brought home a small daughter, Joan Patricia, and plan to make this their home.

For Mrs. Bixby.

Mr. and Mrs. Grove C. Fiske presided over a buffet supper and bridge party on Tuesday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Arthur Bixby who are soon to make Montecito their home. They had eighteen guests.

On Tuesday Sir Frank and Lady Popham Young are to give a large bridge tea as a farewell compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Bixby.

Mrs. Albert Sherman Hoyt presided at a tea last Sunday for Mrs. Charles Hinman Graves of Montecito who was Mrs. Bixby's house guest.

Halloween Dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde J. Eastman of Hollywood Boulevard are arranging a Halloween dance for tomorrow evening and 125 of the younger set are expected.

The two-acre garden is to be brilliantly lighted with Japanese shades and hobgoblins hung from the big trees arranged in a charmingly weird effect. Halloween motifs are to be arranged from the ceilings in the dance rooms and much yellow and black is to be introduced in the color scheme.

Mrs. Eastman is to be assisted by Mrs. C. E. C. Hodgson, Mrs. Reginald Jones, Mrs. Seward Cole, Mrs. John Combe, Mrs. A. W. Williamson and Mrs. William Quale.

From Kansas City.

Mr. and Mrs. Porter Henry Hovey of 317 Doheny Road have as their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Lee Overall of Kansas City for whom they are planning to entertain extensively. Mr. and Mrs. Overall have a great many friends here.

Back to Tennessee.

Mrs. Bruce Douglas and daughter, Miss Evelyn Douglas, have returned to their home in Nashville, Tenn., after a visit here with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lee Woolwine and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Weeks Banks. They enjoyed a delightful round of social courtesies.

Junior Cotillion.

The first function given by the Junior Cotillion was held on Friday evening and brought out a notable group of girls and boys. Many dinners were given preceding the dance.

Miss Charlotte Darling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Darling, entertained a dinner company including Misses Nancy McClung, Helen Tibbins, Luigina Carpenter, Dorothy Fox, Emily White, Elizabeth McArthur and Messrs. Stewart Stevenson, Edward English, Herbert Day, Oscar Trippet, Danforth White, Jack Donnell, Jim Stevenson, and John Chapman.

Miss Mildred Lewis, daughter of Mrs. Mildred Howell Lewis, also entertained at dinner.

The patronesses were Mmes. Boyle Workman, Albert Crutcher, Thomas L. Duque, Herman Kerkhoff, Eugene O. McLaughlin, Joseph Francis Sartori, George Wigmore, Alfred J. Bayer, Burton Edmund Green, Nicholas Milbank, G. Allan Hancock, Daniel Murphy and W. P. Jeffries.

Returned Home.

Mrs. Fred Miller has returned from Kansas City where she was the guest of her sister, Mrs. C. E. Wilson, for several weeks. She and Mr. Miller plan a trip soon to New York.

Mrs. Beaumont.

Mrs. Margaret Beaumont was hostess at a dinner and dancing party at Cocoanut Grove Tuesday evening. Her guests were Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell, Dr. and Mrs. Edward Anthony, Mrs. Jane Pendergras, George Hess and Alexander Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Warton.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Warton were hosts at a dinner dance at the Ambassador Tuesday evening having with them Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Hamilton, Miss Mae Ridgway and Walter Kays.

Loge Parties for "Rigoletto."

"Rigoletto" in screen version is to attract a large and fashionable attendance for tomorrow evening at the Philharmonic Auditorium. Many are arranging to give supper parties afterward, while some are to entertain their company at dinner first.

Col. and Mrs. George J. Denis are to entertain a small company at dinner at the California Club preceding the performance, while Mrs. Charles H. Sharp, who will assemble her guests in a loge, will entertain them at supper afterward at the Alexandria. She will have with her Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hacker, Mr. and Mrs. Jack V. Rittenhouse, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thomas and Ferdinand R. Bain.

Mrs. Albert Sherman Hoyt will give a Halloween midnight supper at the Midwick Country Club for her party for which she has taken a loge. Mr. and Mrs. Dean Mason are to entertain a small group at dinner before the performance and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Allen Phillips will entertain their guests at their home at dinner first.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Arthur Bixby of Pasadena will have in their loge Mr. and Mrs. Grove C. Fiske, Sir Frank and Lady Popham-Young and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Howard and the group will have supper at the Alexandria later.

In one group will be Mrs. Marshall Wellborn, Mrs. Samuel Brown Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Smith, Miss Virginia Woods, George Cole, Edward D. Ulrich, Charles G. Adams and Ralph Gage.

Mrs. Hancock Banning is to entertain her group at dinner first and assemble them later in a loge. Mrs. Charles Jeffras has taken a loge and will entertain her guests at the Halloween supper-dance at the Ambassador afterwards.

Mr. and Mrs. William Preston Harrison are having a loge party and supper afterwards.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Preuss are entertaining for Mrs. Geraldine Baird Story and will have their guests at a supper at their home afterwards.

Dr. and Mrs. Granville are to entertain and so will Mrs. Hugh Livingstone Macneil. Miss Ellen Andrews is having a company of young folk. Others giving parties include Messrs. and Mmes. Mr. and Mrs. Page.

Mr. and Mrs. James Rathwell Page presided at a dinner and dancing party at Cocoanut Grove on Tuesday evening, having a company of eighteen.

At Los Angeles Country Club.

The Los Angeles Country Club furnished the setting for many parties last evening. Mrs. J. D. Fredericks was hostess at a small party while Mrs. H. L. Hitchcock and Mrs. Fred O'Brien were cohostesses at a table for twenty-four. Others entertaining were Mrs. M. J. McCartney, Mrs. M. J. Cooper, Mrs. Earl Howland, Mrs. C. H. Hamilton and Mrs. F. M. Beall.

At Bridge Luncheon.

Mrs. William Boothe Guyton entertained Tuesday at a bridge luncheon. Red dahlias centered the luncheon table while the rest of the house was decorated in chrysanthemums.

Halloween Supper-Dance.

Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Sanders (Ruth Hoyt) were hosts last evening at an old-fashioned Halloween dance and midnight supper party. They entertained at their home, Huntington Drive and Orange avenue, San Gabriel. The patio, which is in the front of the house, was illumined from skulls and pumpkin faces. Two immense bronze vases weirdly lighted the entrance to the house with flames of various colors. Fortunes were told and there was a whispering vase. An old-fashioned supper was served in the double pergola near the swimming pool. There were thirty guests.

Mrs. Young to Entertain.

Mrs. William K. Young, who was Miss Mary Dockweiler, is the first bride of the season to arrange to entertain with any but a small affair. She has asked 100 of her girl friends to a tea on Wednesday afternoon at her new home at 611 South Kenmore avenue, where she resides with Mr. Young's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Young, while she awaits the furnishing of her own flat.

Mrs. Young is to be assisted by Mrs. Thomas A. J. Dockweiler, Mrs. Myron Etienne, Mrs. Hayes Busch, Mrs. Robert Frank Gross, Mrs. Frank Casey, Mrs. Paul B. Hammond, Mrs. Herbert McGaffey, Miss Marion Wigmore, Miss Eleanor MacGowan, Miss Genevieve McDonald, Miss Eleanor Anderson, Miss Gertrude Grant and Miss Rowena Schneider.

Mr. and Mrs. Young are also entertaining at "Rigoletto" tomorrow evening.

For Returned Travelers.

Mmes. J. A. Donato and George Fusenot, both of whom have just returned from more than a year's sojourn abroad, were cause for a charming tea at which Miss Verna Simmons of Hollywood was hostess. She assembled thirty of the intimate friends of her honor guests. Miss Wilma Chancellor assisted.

Misses Golden Entertain.

Misses Agnes and Winifred Golden were hostesses on Thursday afternoon at a tea arranged as a courtesy to their sister, Mrs. Kimball Mooers (Jane Golden) and Miss Katherine Anderson, both of Sacramento. They have been visiting Misses Golden, and with them have been enjoying some motor trips, including a week-end party at Coronado. Forty-five guests were at Thursday's affair.

Assisting were Miss Elizabeth Brant, Mrs. Hooper Churchill, Mrs. Harrison Lobdell, Mrs. Charles Bayly and Miss Maude Dunlap. Yellow chrysanthemums and pink and yellow dahlias adorned the rooms and tea table. Miss Dunlap is from Paris, France, and is soon leaving for Cuba.

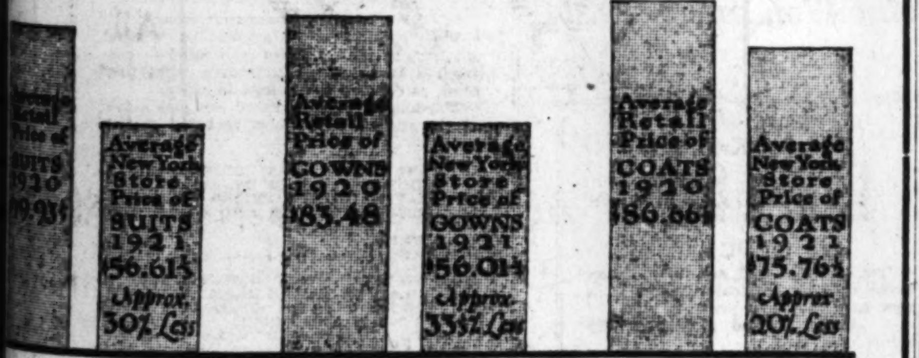
Some Comparisons That Are NOT Odious

By making estimates from our duplicate sales checks for September and October and up until last Friday we find that the average prices paid by our customers for suits, coats and dresses are about one-third less than they were for the same months last year. This diagram tells the story in detail.



But that is not half the story—

Wholesale Prices Have Not Come Down In the Same Proportion

And the reductions are due solely to our own efforts. Materials and labor are both still high, and while The New York Store had no hopes of mending a national price situation, we felt that we could "break the circle of high prices" as far as we and our own customers were concerned. So by reducing our operating expenses to a minimum, and marking our merchandise on a smaller margin of profit than ever before we have brought prices down to about a third less than last year, and we have the figures to prove it.

But please note that while our prices are lower, quality has been maintained. You can get the same fine styles, fine materials and conscientious workmanship which has always made New York Store garments most desired.

More and more women are discovering every day that leans, who was much entertained during her visit here and in Santa Barbara, left Thursday morning for her home in the South. Among those entertaining her while here were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Storrow, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Lissner, Miss Emeleen Childs, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur MacFarland, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cotton, Miss Virginia Woods and numerous others.

SOCIETY.

To Compliment Mrs. Baker.

Mrs. Milo A. Baker, who, with Mr. Baker, has just returned from an extended eastern trip, was honor guest on Friday at an elaborate luncheon at which Mrs. Leon F. Moss was hostess. Places were set for eighteen.

In New Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Butler (Edith Whitaker,) whose marriage was an interesting event of a year ago, have given up their home at Hermosa Beach and are to reside in North Whittier Heights in La Puente Valley, where they are moving now.

Returned Home.

Mrs. Stanley G. Harris, who came to assist at the marriage of her young sister, Miss Dorothy Bent and Edward Pringle, has returned to her home in Chicago. While here she was a guest at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Bent of 2205 Gramercy Place. Her sister, Mrs. Dorothy Bent Schnering of San Francisco and Los Angeles, was also an attendant at the wedding. Both have been much feted.

For Bride Elect.

Miss Helen Van Vorst, whose marriage to Kenneth Carrier is set for November 22, is the central figure at many social affairs just now. Last week was full and every day this week there is something planned in her honor.

Mrs. Doris Fredericks has invited 100 guests to a tea on Wednesday to meet Miss Van Vorst and on Thursday Mrs. George Musaphia is to give a luncheon for twelve in her honor.

Yesterday Miss Eloise Zundal entertained thirty guests at a luncheon and kitchen shower in honor of Miss Van Vorst. Mrs. Harold Wheallton and Mrs. Bernard Higgins gave a surprise miscellaneous shower for her Friday and had a company of twenty-five. Miss Van Vorst is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Van Vorst of 615 South Western avenue.

Takes Bride in Owensmouth.

Perry Mulholland, son of William Mulholland, the well-known civil engineer, married Miss Addie Haas of Owensmouth last evening at the home of her mother, Mrs. Kate M. Haas, who gave her daughter away.

The house was gorgeously decorated in white chrysanthemums, roses, palms and ferns. Rev. L. Holt performed the ceremony in the presence of seventy-five guests. An elaborate supper followed.

Mrs. Warren Hull, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and Earl Haas was best man. Miss Rose Mulholland sang. Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Mack (Lucile Mulholland Sloan) whose wedding was a June event, hurried home from Honolulu where they had been enjoying their honeymoon, to be here for the ceremony.

The bride wore a gown of beaded white georgette with a veil held with orange blossoms and her shower bouquet was of white orchids and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Hull wore pink georgette and carried pink rosebuds. The couple left for a two months' trip to Honolulu and will reside in Owensmouth.

At Dancing Party.

Mr. and Mrs. John Missroon Morris of 111 North Alexandria avenue entertained a small party of friends at a dance at their residence in honor of Cyril Fillingham Pearson of London, who after extensive travels through Europe and North Africa has decided to become a permanent resident in Los Angeles. Among the guests were Commander Charles Morris of the flagship New Mexico, Pacific Fleet, and Carl H. Witenberg of St. Louis. The scheme of decoration was Halloween throughout, with subdued lighting effects.

At Halloween Luncheon.

Mrs. Justin Fielding Gibson (Loretta Mary Roberts) entertained with a charmingly arranged luncheon at her home on Wednesday. Halloween suggestions were carried out in the decorations, the rooms being filled with huge yellow chrysanthemums. This was the first of a series of similar little affairs with which this young hostess plans to entertain during the season.

Mme. Fortune.

Mme. Phyllys Dyrenforth Fortune will hold her first Sunday afternoon salon this afternoon. She recently returned from her summer in Chicago and yachting on the Great Lakes. She is at home again for the winter season.

By Mrs. Weirick.

In honor of Mrs. Clifford Biehl, who until last evening was Miss Elizabeth Monser and for Miss Janet Wright, bride-elect, Mrs. E. B. Weirick entertained with a music tea at the Wilshire Country Club. Asters and chrysanthemums were used in profusion to adorn the rooms. The then Miss Monser, who has a rich contralto voice, Mr. Biehl, Miss Edith Grimes and Miss Doris Struble gave the program. Others assisting were Miss Josephine Weirick, Mrs. Parker Foster, Mrs. E. Monser, Mrs. Elizabeth Young, Mrs. Henry T. Wright and Mrs. Eugene L. Spearman.

Home from East.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Brent and their son, Edwin J. Brent, Jr., have returned from a ten weeks' trip to Baltimore, New York, Philadelphia and Washington, by way of the Panama Canal. They are at home at 20 Berkeley Square, where Mrs. Brent is planning to give several affairs.

For Edmund Russell.

Mrs. Dorthy B. Rice, assisted by members of the upper school at Palm Hall School for Girls, presided at the school's October tea on Friday, which was arranged as a compliment to Edmund Russell, the lecturer. Others on the program were Mme. Phyllis Dyrenforth Fortune, Miss Duquesnay and Misses Marjorie Hornsley and Pauline Baker.

Here From North.

H. Jones-Bateman of the San Francisco Press Club, and Mrs. Jones-Bateman, motored down from their home in Kentfield, Marin county, and are spending a few weeks at the Winn Apartments in Venice.

For Bride-elect.

Miss Marymae Cattern entertained with a matinee box party at the Mason Operahouse in honor of

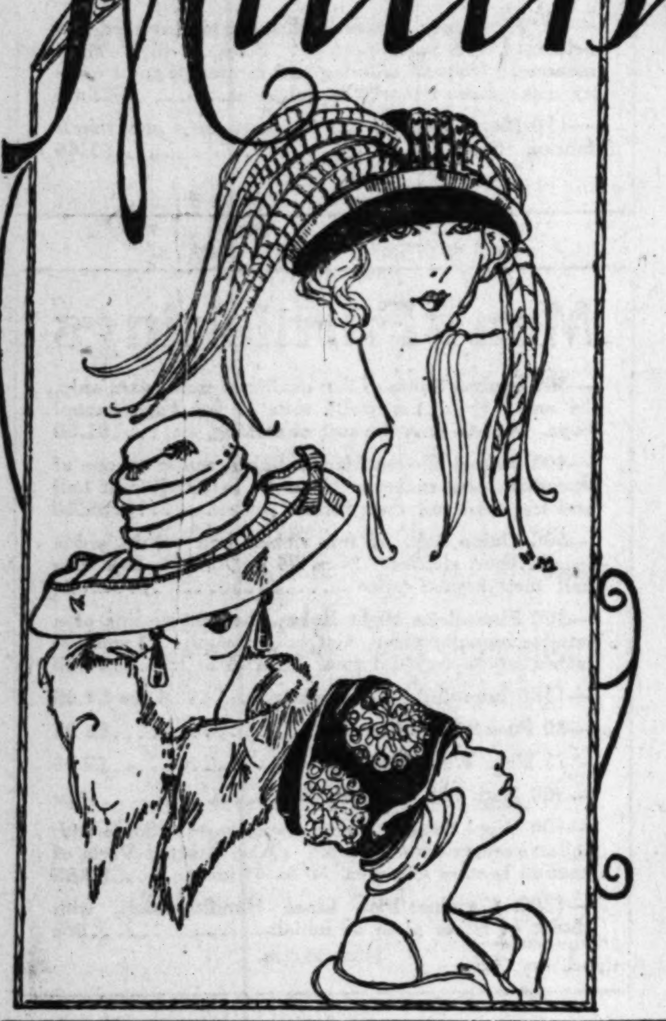
Millinery 7.50 A Super Sale



Over 1000 Beautiful Hand-Made Hats

The Foremost Hamburger Presentation of This or Any Other Season!

That is saying a great deal—but at the same time stating very conservatively the superlative status of this Sale. When you see the hats you will realize there is every excuse for the most enthusiastic exploitation that a sale might enjoy!

But It Means Much to Say, "Hamburger's Best Sale."

—and so for value, we will stop there, except to add that not one hat in the 1000 was ever expected to sell for so little. The story "why" is interesting—but space is limited—and the styles are more to the point!

Graciously dignified Matrons' Hats divide style honors with those more dashing and youthful —and here one is embarrased by the futility of description—it all sounds so inadequate when the very hats are right before one's eyes! Come see them—we know you will be pleased!

Hats for all occasions—soft velvet, karakulam, panne velvet, felts with pheasant feathers, felts with tailored trimmings, flower turbans, velvet and brocade, velvet and lace, velvet and feathers, velvet and fur, sports hats of various types and banded sailors, each and every one from first to last, exquisitely fine—distinctly the latest mode as fashion centers favor them. Every hat rushed here from New York, where that city's best makers contributed to the event.

Black, brown, navy, royal, henna, pheasant, red, gray—in a word, all the season's desirable colors. See windows.

Individualized Corseting

The Foremost Requisite to the Successful Gown

Hamburger's has long taken pride in what we are pleased to term "Individualized Corseting"—meaning by that the expert fitting and adjusting of the corset to meet the individual figure requirements.

A service conducted by a corps of expert corsetieres, ever ready to give advice, never over zealous in pressing their views on the question.

A service whereby you are invited to ALWAYS have your corset properly fitted—to discuss just what would be best from every point of health and comfort as well as style.

A service backed by the most representative makes of corsets in America.

Royal Regent, Nemo, Gossard, American Lady, Sveltline, Stylish Stout Sveltline, Mme. Lyra, P. N., Stylish Slender, Bien Jolie, Binner—and Full Line of Elastic Girdles.

The Vogue for Spanish Combs

Finds Adequate Expression in These at 3.95

As impressively stately or as saucily piquant as ever a handsomely carved comb could be—depending entirely on the wearer and the wearer's personality.

Demi, amber and jet colors—a surprise even to Hamburger's at 3.95—but here's the secret—they are part of an impressive special purchase.

Three Charming Comb Fashions, 4.95

More wonder at the value—lovely carvings in demi, amber and jet.

Delicate Are the Patterns, 6.95

More charming than one dreamed a comb could be. Demi and jet colors.

Others at 5.50, 6.50 and 17.50

Guimpes to "Set Off" the New

Or Rejuvenate the Older Frock, 1.95

"Almost-blouses" are these bits of georgette, net and lace—some with sleeves and some without—that add to all their charm of daintiness a price so very low. Perhaps your "jumper" frock needs just this touch to make it new again, or your sweater, sports coat or suit bring need for one of the lovely sleeveless styles. All reduced to 1.95.

(Hamburger's—Main Floor—Monday)

Full Fashioned Silk Hosiery

1.45

—a long story of value told in a few short words—and a low, low price. Very firm and lustrous silk, all first quaity of course—reinforced with lisle top, heel and toe, for longer wear. Both black and African in all sizes are presented in this Monday offering.

(Hamburger's—Main Floor—Monday)

"Jupon" Blouses

12.95

An adaptation of the original French models—long and graceful of line—serving as frock for those who add but a plain silk slip.

An altogether dignified costume that succumbs unwillingly to a price reduction that brings them as low as 12.95. Trimmed with beads—a bit of web-like lace or gay silk facing they offer diversity of choice in practical navy, black, Mohawk and brown. All sizes.

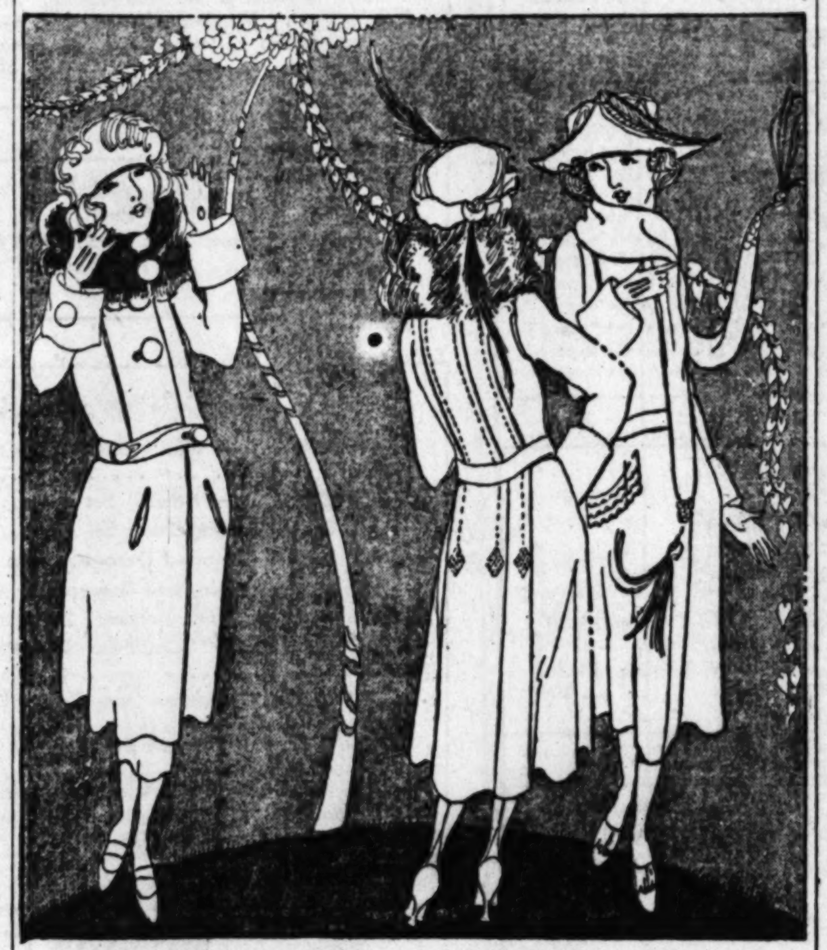
Coats, 45.00

Fur Trimmed—For Women and Misses



A Presentation That More Firmly Than Ever Establishes Hamburger's Precedence in the Matter of Quality With Moderate Price —and serves to convince every woman of the wisdom of choosing at the opening of the season when stocks are gloriously complete and the favored fashions find expression.

Where could economy be more pronounced than in a group of models such as these—that look to large soft collars of opossum, mole, beaverette or nutria or elaborate embroideries and rich colors for effectiveness? Perfect tailoring, handsome lining, distinctive fashions—these are the points that make them super values at 45.00.

Many Prefer the Plainer Coats—And for Those There is a Goodly Selection at 39.75

An equally impressive announcement from the Fashion Salons, for there are the stunning throw tie collars, novel sleeve fashions—the gorgeous materials and linings that need no trimming to accentuate their beauty.

Models for every type of woman and miss, 39.75

EFFICIENT SERVICE

Whatever You Do Don't Neglect Your Eyes, Says Dr. Lewis, Who

Tells How to Strengthen Eyesight 50% in One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Philadelphia, Pa. — Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. He says neglect causes more eye troubles and poor sight than any other one thing. Many whose eyes were failing say they had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two or four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Anther prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them." The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family. It is sold by all leading druggists.—[Advertisement.

PASADENA.

More than 700 members of the Shakespeare Club, the largest women's club in Pasadena, are actively at work these fall days on various details for the club's county fair, which will be held at the Hotel Maryland, November 17, 18 and 19, for the benefit of the new Shakespeare clubhouse fund. Mrs. A. R. Klark is chairman of the general committee. The fair will be one of the big social affairs of the fall season. It is hoped to raise part of a fund of $100,000 for a beautiful new clubhouse for the Shakespeare Club. It is aimed to have the clubhouse a quasi-public community building.

Mrs. Lloyd L. Krebs of Oak Lawn entertained at a smart luncheon Friday in compliment to Mrs. Donald Dickey, a June bride. Mrs. Dickey was before her marriage Miss Florence Murphy of Oak Knoll. She and Mr. Dickey were married at the Virginia estate of her father, Col. Simon A. Murphy, and recently arrived in Pasadena after a wedding trip through the Canadian woods.

The fall social season was formally opened with a dinner-dance and ball at the Hotel Vista del Arroyo last night, with many members of the winter colony and local society folk present. There was an entertainment program by the Celeste dancers.

Mrs. C. R. Ramsey entertained fourteen guests at a luncheon, followed by bridge, at the Flintridge Country Club Thursday. Another affair at the Flintridge Club Thursday was the luncheon at which Mrs. W. B. Corbin entertained eight guests.

The Pasadena Elks gave one of their series of dancing parties at their clubhouse on West Colorado street Thursday night.

Miss Nouvart Kostikyan entertained at a tea at her home, 692 South Grand avenue, in honor of Pierre V. Key, noted New York musical critic, whose articles appear in The Times on Sunday.

A wedding of the week was that of Miss Isabelle Daniels, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Daniels, 916 Herkimer street, and Robert Loren Griffis. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, and Rev. Carl F. Henry of the Universalist Church, was the officiating minister. Miss Lillian

SOCIETY.

Bennett was maid of honor, and Miss Virginia Fishbeck was bridesmaid. Foster W. Daniels, brother of the bride, was Mr. Griffis's best man. Mr. and Mrs. Griffis will make their home in San Francisco.

Mrs. Charles A. Nason, 43 North Euclid avenue, entertained at tea Tuesday in compliment to Mrs. Philip Windsor of Havana, Cuba.

Miss Anita Hindry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hindry, 781 Prospect Boulevard, and Kenneth N. Clement of Burlington, Vt., were married Saturday evening at the bride's home. Miss Hindry recently returned from the East, where she was graduated from one of the eastern schools.

Prof. George A. Mortimer addressed the music department of the Shakespeare Club Tuesday, discussing oratorios. Mrs. E. N. McAdam, chairman of the section, presided. Mrs. Mary Coman, a former president of the club, addressed the current events section. Mrs. Clara Bryant Hayward, chairman, presided.

The Elks' Ladies' Card Club held a card party Thursday afternoon at the clubhouse.

SOUTH PASADENA.

Miss Emily Huntington Miller entertained the members of the junior class of her school of music on Saturday morning, at her home, 1215 Spruce street. The class has been studying the life and compositions of John Sebastian Bach, and several numbers by this great composer were very ably rendered on the piano by Marcus Godfrey, Jr., and little Miss Madeline Speik. Enjoyable musical games and drills were provided for the entertainment of the guests. The young musicians who were present were: Marjel Brown, Marsha Cass, Janet Crump, Edward Fogg, Fred Fogg, Joseph Fenton, Marcus Godfrey, Jr., Barbara Halsey, Madeline Speik and Susan Tufts.

At a very handsomely appointed tea given recently by Miss Helen Herlocker at her home, 1419 Lyndon street, in honor of Miss Edith Jessup of Whittier, who has returned home after a year spent in the East, the engagement was told of the charming young hostess to Mr. Dewey Callahan of Los Angeles. When the guests were seated at the attractive tea tables, they found marking each plate, dainty cards tied with flowers, announcing this bit of news, which is of interest to a wide circle of friends from the Angel City.

Mrs. William Weeks was hostess on Saturday afternoon at a Halloween tea, given at her home, 2043 Alpha street. Assisting Mrs. Weeks was Mrs. A. B. Crosby. Both house and table decorations were in yellow and black, and attractive suggestions of Halloween were placed throughout the house. Those who enjoyed the hospitality of the hostess on this delightful occasion were: Mmes. N. Bland of Los Angeles; R. Rockhold of Glendale; E. Weeks, C. Hollis, L. G. Major, J. Crozier, William Greer, J. Hynes of Whittier; A. Tredway, G. Coffin, W. B. Wood, and Miss P. Weeks.

Mrs. Floyd James very delightfully entertained the women of the Beata Hora Society at a recent luncheon given at the Hotel Vista del Arroyo in Pasadena. Covers were arranged for fourteen.

Mrs. Dale Tussing entertained the members of the Monday Evening Musical Club on Monday evening at her home, 840 Mission street. It was the first meeting of the club since the summer months, and there was a large representation of the membership present to enjoy the most excellent program which had been arranged, and also to partake of the delightful social hour which followed. This organization claims in its membership some of the best musical talent in Southern California.

Mrs. N. C. Hove of Park avenue entertained on Friday with a dinner party in honor of Mrs. A. W. Armstrong. The affair was a complete surprise to the guest of honor, and was enjoyed by some fourteen friends. The house and table decorations were of chrysanthemums, with Halloween suggestions here and there. Mrs. Armstrong was the recipient of many very beautiful gifts, as it was known to her friends that the occasion marked another milestone in her life's journey.

One of the largest and most elaborate social affairs of the season was the card party given on Wednesday afternoon by the Woman's Improvement Association at their attractive clubhouse on Fremont avenue. Arrangements were in charge of the ways and means committee, with Mrs. George D. Werden as chairman. Everything about the rooms was suggestive of Halloween, while handsome chrysanthemums in all the beautiful fall shades were artistically arranged in great profusion. Prizes were given the most successful contestants at cards. Refreshments were served, and a most delightful afternoon was had by all present. The sum realized from the party will go toward the improvements on the building.

Mrs. William E. Burke was hostess on Thursday at a very attractive luncheon given at her home on Oak street for the members of A. A. chapter, P.E.O. The luncheon is a regular monthly affair for the members of this organization. The afternoon hours were devoted to sewing for the needy.

ALHAMBRA.

A charming courtesy arranged in honor of Mrs. H. C. Richardson, because it was the anniversary of her birth, was the luncheon at which Mrs. A. A. Watson entertained on Friday at her home in Ramona Park. The rooms were bright with golden dahlias and chrysanthemums, the table being especially attractive with flowers, place cards and dainty favors suggestive of Halloween.

On Friday Mrs. Leland Muller and Miss Marie Muller sponsored an attractive affair at the home of Mrs. Muller. The afternoon was devoted to Five Hundred and tea was served from a pretty table lighted with yellow candles and centered with yellow flowers.

Tuesday evening in the music room at the high school, the Parent-Teacher Association sponsored a reception for members of the faculty. Mrs. Bessie Fuhrer Erb, violinist, charmed the large audience with movements from Grieg's sonata in G minor, and Mrs. Merten Hart delighted with readings from Joyce Kilmer, Robert Service and other poets. Punch and wafers were served. Mrs. Harkness, president, was assisted in receiving by Mrs. L. D. White and Mrs. John Cave.

Miss Cosby Gilstrap was hostess on Friday night when she entertained with a jelly and jam shower for Miss Adarel Elmer, whose marriage to William Rowland Hudson will be an early event. Sixteen guests responded to Miss Gilstrap's invitation.

The Underprice Basement Features

A Sale of DRESSES for JACOBY DAY at $15.00

—In the regular way you'd see the lowest priced frock in the lot marked fully $19.98 and the others at prices ranging upward to $29.98!—

—Nearly all are samples—and that means one of a kind and mostly in sizes 16 and 18—

—They are of Poiret twill combined with duvetyne—of tricotine, velvet, crepe de chine, satin and Poiret twill—

—The majority in navy, black and brown, but other colors are well represented—

—Beads, embroidery, braids and monkey fur are used in a host of clever ways to trim them—

—If we could just give you an advance peep at the frocks—if we had some way to give you a REAL idea of the values you'd be here when the doors open Jacoby Day!

All Wool American Bolivia Coats $15.00

—You'll find your coat problem settled when you see these smart well-tailored coats—

—And you'll be delighted to think how much saved for they'd sell for $19.98 to $29.98 if they were marked at their real values!—

—They are over cuttings and samples from a foremost manufacturer. And we bought them 'way, 'WAY underworth—

—Most of them brown—a few in navy or tan. All silk lined.

Jacoby's Underprice Basement

50 Jersey Smocks On Sale Jacoby Day—$2.98

—The manufacturer expected to get fully double the Jacoby Day price when he made these good-looking smocks.

—They are of exceptionally good wool Jersey, cleverly hand embroidered in wool.

48 Silk and Velvet Blouses, Jacoby Day—$4.98

—Samples, most of them, and the greater number made of superior crepe de chine—others of velvet.

—The Jacoby Day price is far less than they'd be wholesale in a regular way.

Odds and Ends Blouses, 49c

—Cotton blouses of many kinds and styles—just 64 of them in all, and the Jacoby Day price will sell the last one very quickly.

Jacoby's Underprice Basement

What a man thinks about Femininities —"Will you let me be an Indian just this once?" the ad-man asked me.

—"I know I promised you this column for every Sunday," he continued, "but, my dear fellow, I've so much sale news for Jacoby Day, I've simply got to have every inch of space The Times will let me have on Sunday—I'll give you some extra space some other day."

* * *

—And when I saw the stacks of copy that had been written I knew he was speaking the truth—but—I'd been doing a little snooping among the Jacoby Day purchases—and I felt I had something worth while to tell you about them—so his request had to be denied—

* * *

—You know—I've been one of those men who could never understand woman's love of a Bargain.

* * *

—But I'm slipping—

* * *

—I know now just how it feels to want to buy and buy and buy! If I had been allowed to make advance selections I'd have made a good sized dent in next month's salary—

* * *

—Never again will I laugh at the woman who can't resist a bargain—I am one of the tribe from now on—

* * *

—Perhaps you'd like to know what has aroused so much enthusiasm on my part—

* * *

—And I'd like to tell you about the Jacoby Day items I've seen—but there is only room for one here and one there—

—Children's dresses of gingham in sizes 2 to 6 years are to go at 89c—and, honestly, I don't see how they can be made for so little! I can't imagine any woman wasting her time sewing when such dresses can be bought at such a price!—I found gingham dresses in sizes 7 to 12 years at $1.29 that are fully as remarkable as the others!

* * *

—I'll hardly blame you if you doubt me when I tell you that some of the prettiest Hats I've seen are to go in this sale at $4.50.

* * *

—You know, I always had an idea—and I guess most men had, too—that women's hats had to be in the $20 class before they became attractive—

* * *

—And really, I'd like to be able to get news of this sale to every husband of a wife in all Los Angeles—

* * *

—A lot of the fellows would figure that I had some very substantial thanks coming to me—

* * *

—But enough of the hats—I must rush on or someone will accuse me of being a woman—

—Right alongside of my column I happen to see the "ad" on the sale of Dresses at $18.00 and I have remarked to the ad-man that it doesn't do the dresses justice—

* * *

—Try your own hand at it, he tells me—and all at once I realize how almost impossible it is to make black and white words on cold paper talk for such wonderful things as these dresses—

—Around — and around and around in my head go the words — "beautiful" — "extraordinary" — "wonderful" — "sensational" etcetera, but they're all threadbare from use on other dresses that have been sold anywhere from $5.00 to $100.00—so I am just going to tell you that you're going to have a whole lot more respect for $18.00 after you've seen these dresses.

* * *

—Now I can readily understand why women who know the caliber of Jacoby Day, need only to know when it comes to be here.

—To be honest—I'd like to be a woman just for Jacoby Day!

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Hawley left for parts unknown, and on their return will reside on West Second street. Mrs. Hawley will continue to teach in the Westminster School. Mr. Hawley is connected with his father in the Hawley spooring goods house. Guests at the wedding were Mrs. Anna Nelson, mother of the bride; Miss Maude Nelson, Miss Jean Olsen, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hawley, Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. Terrel Jasper and family.

At a beautifully appointed dinner at James's on a recent evening, the engagement of Miss Marie May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. May of Costa Mesa, and Lory Roehm, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Roehm of this city, was announced to the guests who gathered around the tables, by means of dainty cards in each nut basket. Great, golden chrysanthemums centered the tables, and yellow posies adorned the place cards. The wedding will take place on November 19, and the bride-to-be was showered with the good wishes of Mrs. Marion E. Jones, Mrs. Marshall Stricker, Mrs. Wayne McCollum, Mrs. Myrtle Copeland and the Misses Thelma Nordstrom, Nita May, Loretta Shaller, Evelyn Bauman, the hostess, Pearle May, and the honoree, Marie May.

Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Paul had the pleasure of a visit recently from their friends, Gov. and Mrs. Hart of Washington, who went from the Paul home to visit Mrs. Hart's sister in San Diego for a few days. While here, Gov. Hart was present at the Shriners' ceremonial at Orange County Park.

Members of the Santa Ana Junior College Y.W.C.A., held sway in a cozy cabin just above the Mme. Mojeska home over the week-end, Miss Edith Plavin, chairman of the social committee, being in charge. A live baseball game, hiking and other appetite-getting pleasures were indulged in, and a chicken dinner topped the tempting menus of the occasion. Faculty members who accompanied the girls were Mr. and Mrs. Theodore B. Kelley and the Misses Lulu B. Finley, Mable Whiting, Jennie Lasby, Lena Shepard Amy Livingston and Isabel Anderson.

East Newport was the scene of a house party combining pleasure with work when the Orange County Christian Endeavor Union held a successful conference and executive meeting. A hearty dinner Saturday evening started the affair in jolly style, with places laid for more than twenty guests.

MONTEBELLO.

A pretty wedding was staged at the E. A. Williams home, when Miss Edythe Housinger, a sister of Mrs. Williams, became the bride of Mr. Harry R. Woodington of Torrance, the ceremony being preformed by Dr. Engle of Corona. Miss Esther Frost of Pasadena was bridesmaid and Mr. Archie W. Woodington, a brother of the groom, was best man. Those present, all relatives, were Mrs. N. Housinger and son Charles of Winton, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Shuttleworth of Petaluma, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Wright of Santa Rosa, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Woodington and son Robert of Torrance, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Woodington of Long Beach, Miss Esther Frost of Pasadena, Mr. and Mrs. Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. William Miller of Washington avenue were given a genuine and very pleasant surprise Friday evening by a jolly little party of relatives and friends, who planned it as a celebration of the first wedding anniversary of their involuntary hosts. The mirthful invaders included Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Keeler and son Alfred of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Cole and son Warren of East Whittier, Mr. and Mrs. D. Koons of Los Angeles, Mrs. Lillie Martin, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Robinson, Miss Beatrice Bay, Mrs. Belle Hinkson and daughter Hope.

Mrs. L. T. Williams entertained recently at a delightful bridge luncheon at her home on Spruce street, her guests being Mrs. E. M. Ruggles, Mrs. C. J. Hinman, Mrs. S. C. Hichborn and Miss Lillian Billings of Los Angeles; Mrs. C. W. Schaack, Mrs. F. H. Allen, Mrs. G. E. Wilfert and Mrs. C. Y. James of Montebello.

Dr. and Mrs. M. R. Parmelee were hosts Sunday at a charmingly appointed dinner, at which places were marked for Mr. and Mrs. Earl S. Haines and son Jack of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer M. Nichols and daughter Marguerite of Pasadena, Miss May Nichols of Virgina, Minn., Mrs. Charles Godden of Burt, Iowa, Dr. and Mrs. Parmelee.

Mr. D. C. Johnson of Fourth street and Dr. C. E. St. John of the Solar Observatory, Mt. Wilson, spent the weed-end on a trip to Yucaipa Valley, where they enjoyed a view of the famed apple orchards of that section.

Mrs. G. Hants and daughter Evelyn returned Saturday from a visit of three months in Indiana, where they were guests of relatives in Indianapolis and Dupont. They returned by the southern route, stopping a few days in New Orleans.

MONROVIA.

F. W. Pelsue, brother-in-law of Rev. Charles Coke Woods, with his wife, two daughters and a son, arrived a few days ago from St. Louis, Mo., after a very pleasant motor trip of several weeks. They called on the Rev. Woods, then went on to Los Angeles to visit Mr. Pelsue's parents. Mr. Pelsue and family expect to make Southern California their future home and will spend some time looking around for a location.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Snyder and small dauhter Betty of Huntington Beach are spending some time with Mrs. Snyder's mother, Mrs. C. E. Slosson of West Lime avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Lambert Cole of West Orange avenue entertained at their home on Tuesday evening with a surprise party in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Scott, it being their wedding anniversary and also their birthday anniversaries as well. Mrs. George Campbell, Mr. Cole's sister, was also a guest of honor, as it was her birthday anniversary also. Large vases of zinnias were used as decorations. Cards and dancing furnished entertainment for the evening. Invited guests included Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Scott, Mrs. George Campbell, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick, Mr. and Mrs. Rucker, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Cochran, Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Hanna, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Gillogly, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Holcombe, Mrs. M. Cochran, and the Misses Thora Frederick, Martha Cochran, Florence Cochran, Doris Cochran and Messrs. Stanley and Robert Scott.

The Misses Ora and Martha Reed of East Lemon avenue, who have been visiting in Tucson, Ariz., for the past two months, have returned to their home in this city.

Clay R. Gossell returned to his home in Sedalia, Mo., on Wednesday after spending a month with his daughter, Mrs. Keiley of South Canyon Drive. Mrs. Gossell, who accompanied her husband on the trip here, will spend the winter with her daughter.

Mrs. C. E. Slosson, after a three-months' visit at Battle Creek, Mich., arrived home the latter part of the week and is again comfortably settled at her home on West Lime avenue. Mrs. Slosson left Michigan during a period of cold weather and welcomed the belated summer she found at home.

Raymond Barton of Worthington, Ind., is visiting his brother, John Barton, of West Olive avenue, and while here called upon another old Worthington friend, Albert H. Love. Mr. Barton is a civil engineer by profession and is looking for a location in Southern California.

After a pleasant two weeks' visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Quigley, Mrs. May Bond Nunn has left for her home in Portland, Or. Mrs. Nunn is a sister of Mrs. Quigley.

Dr. and Mrs. E. P. Brownfield arrived in this city on Monday from the East, and expect to spend the winter here. Dr. Brumfield is the father of Dr. H. G. Brumfield of Pasadena, formerly of this city.

Mrs. Charles Taylor Renaker entertained on Saturday with a beautifully appointed bridge luncheon at her home on East Hillcrest avenue. The affair was the first of a series of social courtesies Mrs. Renaker plans to give during the coming weeks, the second one being scheduled for Monday. Decorations were an effective feature, masses of gay autumn flowers and greenery attractively arranged were used throughout the house. Luncheon was served at small tables. During luncheon McVey's colored orchestra furnished music. Bridge was the diversion of the afternoon, Mrs. W. G. Barks being awarded first prize for high score, and the consolation prize going to Mrs. O. W. Bryant. Invited guests numbered about fifty-five.

One of the pleasant affairs of the week took place on Wednesday evening at the home of Rev. and Mrs. George Swan, where a reunion of St. Luke's parish was held. About fifty guests enjoyed the delightful gathering, a number of people motoring over from Pasadena and Los Angeles for the evening. A pleasing program of musical numbers was given, among those who so graciously contributed their talent being Miss Mary McCune, Mrs. Edwards of Los Angeles, Mrs. Albert Branch and Mrs. Des Chaines of Los Angeles. A number of other features were arranged for the enjoyment of the guests. At the conclusion of the enjoyable affair members of the Woman's Guild served dainty refreshments.

SANTA MONICA.

The local Pythian Sisters and Santa Monica Lodge, No. 203, will give a "hard-time" party at the lodge room Halloween. Two score of visiting knights and ladies are to attend. W. C. Bull, H. The Santa Monica Society, headed by Mayor and Mrs. S. L. Berkley, attended the opening opera at the Municipal Auditorium in force Tuesday evening. "The Mikado" was presented and met with the approval of music lovers.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Colodny were hosts to the members of the Tuesday Dance Club at the Venice ballroom Wednesday evening. Among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. Byron Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Skilling, Mr. and Mrs. W. Y. Thornbury, Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Kirkelie, Mr. and Mrs. J. Edgar Brown.

Miss Mae Armstrong is the charming hostess Monday presiding at a Halloween tea in honor of a number of friends whose birthdays fall in the month of October. The affair will be given at the Santa Monica Bay Woman's clubhouse.

Mrs. C. B. Carlson, residing on Venezia avenue, was hostess Wednesday at an elaborate luncheon event, covers being laid for ten close friends. The Halloween motif was introduced throughout the entire affair.

Mrs. D. G. Stephens, Mrs. Mary L. Phelps and Mrs. S. J. Egleston have returned from a delightful fortnight outing at Saboba Springs in the San Bernardino mountains.

Mrs. Florence Duncan and Mrs. Melville Rapp entertained the junior social group at the home of Mrs. Rapp on San Vicente Boulevard Saturday evening last. This was one of the smart early winter functions.

GLENDALE.

Miss Veda Knapp entertained the Junior Auxiliary of the Glendale Music Club, last Saturday evening with a Halloween party at her home, 314 West Chestnut street. All decorations were of the season, and the games and refreshments were appropriate, even the music furnished by the auxiliary orchestra being ghostly. Fifty members were present.

Mrs. Ella W. Richardson, 315 North Brand Boulevard, has had as her house guest, her daughter, Mrs. Shives Mitchell, and two children of King City, Cal.

Mrs. Sallie Braden, 526 North Kenwood street, gave a most charming bridge luncheon last Friday. A large pumpkin centered the luncheon table, and tiny autumn leaves marked places for the guests.

Mrs. Blake Franklin, 398 West Wilson avenue, assisted by her mother, Mrs. J. H. Franklin, entertained Tuesday, at the San Gabriel Country Club, in honor of Mrs. Blanche Grieves of Lacon, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Morrow, who were married October 19, at Berkeley, are now at home to their friends at 1309 North Brand Boulevard.

Friday evening, the senior class of the high school gave the first high school dance of the year known as their annual inaugural skid. The affair was given in the girls' gymnasium. The school colors of black and red and class colors of orange and black, with corn shocks and pumpkins, gave the spacious room a festive air appropriate to All Hallow's Eve.

BURBANK.

The Altar Society of the Holy Trinity Catholic Church gave a silver tea, Thursday afternoon, in the Woman's Club rooms, for the benefit of the building fund.

Mrs. Faith Story and Mrs. H. W. Lewis returned Tuesday from Santa Cruz, where they attended the Eastern Star convention.

Chapter U of the P.E.O. entertained with a banquet Monday evening, in honor of the B.I.L. of the chapter. Dinner was served in the dining-room of the Methodist Church. Halloween decorations were used on the tables, where covers were placed for sixty. After dinner the guests were further entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Allen. Halloween stunts and the initiation of nine B.I.L.'s made the evening a most enjoyable one.

Miss Allyse Garanche, who has been the house guests of her aunt, Mrs. G. E. Strout, left Wednesday for her home in St. Louis.

Mrs. J. D. Ratcliff was hostess Wednesday to the Burbank Five Hundred Club. It was a birthday anniversary of the club, and a huge birthday cake centered the luncheon table. The Halloween motif was used in the decorations.

RIVERSIDE.

The Halloween motif was uppermost in the spirit and the decorative concomitants of social events the past week. Orange and black paper streamers and grinning jack-o'-lanterns were used effectively with bowls of vivid zinnias and bundles of yellow cornstalks tied with yellow ribbons for the decorations of the War Camp Community Service headquarters on Orange street, Tuesday afternoon. The occasion was the reception held annually by the Woman's Club for the ushering in of a new year of club activity. Mrs. H. F. De Nyse, president, was at the head of the receiving line. A program of unusual attractiveness was presented and was enjoyed by nearly 100 club members. Refreshments were served by the hostesses of the afternoon, Mrs. Oscar Crowell and Dr. Hildegard King, who were assisted by a committee consisting of Mrs. Paul Lewis, Mrs. Leonard Difani, Mrs. Hayden Hewes, Mrs. Edward Flood, Mrs. Frank Herkelrath, Mrs. Chester Riley and Mrs. Dena Lester.

More than 200 members of the faculties of the city schools enjoyed a Halloween party at the Polytechnic High School building Wednesday evening. The decorations were in keeping with the season. The evening's entertainment culminated in a program of "stunts," which had been arranged by the hosts, the members of the Parent-Teachers' Association. Light refreshments were served by the committee, which comprised Mrs. J. E. O'Brien, chairman; Mrs. Gross, Miss Bootes, Miss Bartz, Mrs. F. Wayne Coons, Mrs. A. G. Paul and Miss C. Anderson.

Thirty white-robed figures visited the home of Miss Lillian Dickson, 370 Main street, Wednesday evening. Dismantled, they were revealed as staff members and students of the Riverside Public Library, desirous of paying their respects to the acting librarian. Halloween pranks occupied the guests until a late hour. Cider, apples and doughnuts composed the refreshments. Miss Dickson was assisted in serving by the Misses Alice Butterfield, Mary Anderson, Marian Shaver, Louise Satchell, Bernice Swezey and Ruth Ellis.

Miss Avis Wright became the bride of Morrison Halstead at a prettily appointed wedding at the home of J. J. Jones of 757 Miller street, Wednesday evening. The service was read by Rev. E. M. Borden, pastor of the Church of Christ. The couple were attended by Miss Rosa Wisdon as bridesmaid and J. H. Jones as best man.

A delightful affair of the fall season was the tea presided over by Mrs. B. F. Rockhold and Miss Bonnie Rockhold at their home, 1220 Lemon street, Tuesday afternoon. They were assisted by Mrs. Morma Rockhold Robbins. Tea was served by the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Arthur Bostick, Mrs. H. A. MacClyment and Mrs. W. H. Holmes.

EAST WHITTIER.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Bumann of Dennison, Iowa, recently arrived in East Whittier and are house guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Rath. The visitors and their hosts motored to Riverside during the fair and enjoyed the unusually fine exhibits of California's fruits and flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Thom M. Frampton and daughter, Miss Juanita Frampton for East Whittier, and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Coulthurst of Whittier, motored to Santa Cruz to attend the State Grand Chapter meeting of the Order of the Eastern Star. Both Mrs. Frampton and Mrs. Coulthurst are Past Worthy Matrons of Lyra Chapter, No. 144, of Whittier.

Miss Wilma A. Ware, president of the East Whittier Christian Endeavor Society, was hostess to the members at a business meeting at her home Tuesday evening. There were short talks regarding the Four Square campaign, given by Clifford Haworth, manager, and Wilfred Haworth, press representative. Some thirty active and associate members attended.

The song of the surf and the delights of deep-sea fishing lured a party of well-known local people to Long Beach Wednesday. The fishermen were successful and the day was an ideal one to spend on the water. Those in the party were Rev. George A. Deshler, Thomas Page and son Dewey Page, Clarence Mitchell and Joe Stup, the latter from Yorba Linda.

Friends of little Virginia Henry will be interested to learn that she is convalescent after a trying illness.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Holling of Boulder, Colo., were recent guests at the home of Rev. and Mrs. George A. Deshler. The Hollings and the Deshlers were formerly friends in Colorado, before the Deshlers came to the Coast.

Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Sutherland have returned from a pleasant outing spent at Big Bear Lake.

PASO ROBLES.

Mrs. J. Hamilton entertained Thursday afternoon in honor of the ninth anniversary of her son, Edwin. Nine little guests were invited. Games were enjoyed out of doors, and dainty refreshments served. Those enjoying the happy affair were Russell Gates, Earnest and Betty Sutton, Clifford Frank, Barbara and Phyllis Ward, Donald and Herbert Comfort and Edwin Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Forington have returned from a week's visit to San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Nels Anderson and daughter, Ebba of Kerman, Fresno county, are the guests of their cousins in this city, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Karling. Other guests at the Karling home are Mr. and Mrs. John Karlson of Templeton.

At a quiet wedding Wednesday Miss Zetta Jacobson and Charles H. Washabaugh were married by the Rev. Edwin B. Singer in the study of the Baptist church. The immediate relatives of the couple were the only witnesses to the ceremony.

El Pomar Woman's Club will give a picture show Wednesday evening, the proceeds to go toward paying for the clubhouse.

SANTA PAULA.

Goldenrod, zinnias and dahlias, with grinning jack o' lanterns and weird black cats, sounded a note of Halloween at the Woman's clubhouse on Monday evening, and pumpkin pie and coffee formed the refreshments for the Dancing Club of Santa Paula on the occasion of the regular October dancing party.

Mrs. Zulame Jordan, daughter of Mrs. Ada Hoge of Santa Paula street, and Vincent House, also of Santa Paula, were married in Ventura on Friday afternoon by the Rev. Patterson at the Congregational parsonage. They will make their home in Santa Ana, following a wedding trip to Avalon.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pardee entertained on Saturday evening with an elaborate Halloween dancing party at their ranch home, having as their guests members of the younger set. Seasonable decorations were used to adorn the house and emphasize the Halloween motif.

In compliment to Miss Elizabeth Underwood, whose wedding to J. N. Thilie will take place this fall, Mrs. Ray C. Joy was hostess at a nicely appointed luncheon on Thursday at her country home.

Mrs. T. D. Clayton entertained at dinner on Thursday evening amid appropriate decorations of orange and black, carrying out the idea of the Halloween season, marking the birthday anniversary of her daughter, Mrs. Perry DeuPree of the Olivelands. In addition to Mr. and Mrs. DeuPree, the guests were family friends who have known the honoree from girlhood.

House guests at El Rancho Bueno, the F. E. Good home, this week are Mr. and Mrs. David A. Miller of Los Angeles, Mrs. Millard, who was formerly Mrs. F. M. Edgar, at one time made her home in Santa Paula and was entertained while here by oldtime friends.

Mr. and Mrs. George Harvey have removed from their Santa Paula-street home to the San Fernando ranch home of Thad Harvey, where they will remain for a time.

After a two weeks' motor trip through Northern California, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collins Teague and son Charles have returned to Southern California.

PLACENTIA.

Mrs. Dan New, Mrs. J. P. Monroe, Mrs. Victor Gorenflo, Mrs. Roy Charlton and Mrs. H. P. Bender were new members received in the Round Table Club of this city on Wednesday afternoon at the regular meeting of the club. Mrs. C. H. Smith and Mrs. A. T. Pendelton were the hostesses for the afternoon, and served delicious refreshments to the visitors and members present. The guest of honor was Mrs. Florence Dodson Schoneman. Mrs. Schoneman gave a most delightful interpretation of the early Spanish history of this district, in an old heirloom costume, of wonderful Spanish embroidery and lace. Mrs. Schoneman is a native daughter, and her talk on the home life of the days of the Don was most interesting. A social hour was enjoyed to honor the club's guest.

Mr. James Foley of Pasadena was the dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Bradford on Wednesday evening. The beautiful table appointments were enhanced with a centerpiece of Cecile Brunner roses, and dahlias were in profusion through the rooms. Covers were laid for the following guests: Mr. James Foley, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. McFadden, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Scott and Mr. and Mrs. A. Pierotti.

E. D. Unger of Eagle Rock made a pleasant visit with the J. S. Dueys of the North Bench this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Knabb of the South Mesa entertained at dinner Sunday. Dinner was served out under a shaded arbor, on rustic tables built for such occasions. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. John Frackelton of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cate and son Robert of Hollywood and Mr. and Mrs. Knabb.

Dr. and Mrs. C. B. Walsworth of Orange were guests of the Fred Fishers of Second avenue. Mrs. Fisher returned with them for a ten days visit.

On Sunday the M. L. Gastrens entertained friends from Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Holmquist and son Robert, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Maidenberg, Mr. and Mrs. L. Leader and son Arnold, Miss Harriett and Mary Grunnell.

UPLAND.

In compliment to Mrs. Henry G. Eckstein, who recently arrived from Chicago for a stay of several months at her winter home on Euclid avenue, and in honor of Mrs. Frank S. McKenna of San Antonio Heights, Mrs. Leavenworth Wheeler entertained with a bridge tea of smart appointments at her home, Euclid avenue and Twenty-second street. Autumn blossoms were used with artistic effect in decoration, chrysanthemums and zinnias predominating. Seven tables were used in the auction tournament and prizes for the afternoon's play were captured by Mrs. John Herbert Tracy and Mrs. Tyler Reed Woodbridge. The Misses Mary Harwood and Mary McKenna served punch and Mrs. Woodbridge presided at the tea table.

Miss Mabel Turner, whose engagement and approaching marriage to I. A. MacPherson of London, Can., was recently announced, was the guest of honor at a luncheon and kitchen shower with which Mrs. David Smith and Mrs. Verne Ward Lee entertained Monday afternoon at the ranch home of the latter in Mountain avenue, Ontario. Autumn tints were used in the effective decorations. Little Miss Joyce Lee and Master Jack Lee, attired as bride and bridegroom, presented Miss Turner with an attractive basketful of gifts. Covers at the luncheon table were marked for sixteen.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Decker in Campus avenue was the scene of a simple, but pretty wedding Wednesday afternoon when their daughter, Miss Donna Louise Decker, became the bride of Harold Eugene Merchant, son of Mrs. James Merchant of East Ninth street. The bride was attired in a gown of white Georgette and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Chester Decker as matron of honor and Miss Lyle Merchant as bridesmaid wore pink organdie and carried Cecile Brunner rosebuds. The little Misses Naomi Decker and Gwendolyn Merchant, dressed in white organdie, were flower girls. The bridegroom was attended by Chester Decker as best man and the Rev. D. S. Corlett, pastor of the First Nazarene Church, was the officiant. A wedding collation followed the ceremony, which was witnessed by fifty guests. Upon their return from their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Merchant will make their home in Colton.

VISALIA.

Miss Pearl Wilson, formerly of Lindsay, more recently of this city, became the bride of J. Albert Weishar, also of Visalia, Saturday evening, Rev. J. J. Dalton officiating. Immediately following the ceremony the young couple left for San Francisco, on their honeymoon. On their return they will take up their residence in a new home which the groom is building for his bride in the suburbs.

Presley Irvin Simpson of Porterville and Miss Vera Hicks of this city were united in marriage at the Presbyterian manse at 6 o'clock Saturday evening by Rev. J. J. Dalton. The ring ceremony was used. Mr. and Mrs. Hicks are taking a short wedding journey and will return to Porterville to make their future home.

Mrs. E. M. Horine of Atlanta, Ga., house guest of her daughter, Mrs. J. J. Phillippe, was honor guest at a delightful bridge party Friday afternoon at the Hotel Johnson, given by Mrs. Charles W. Berry. Mrs. Phillippe won first prize and Mrs. H. B. McClure, second. A guest package was presented Mrs. Horine.

N. B. Ebersole of Visalia has received word from his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ebersole of Paonie, Colo., that they are motoring to this city, where they will make their future home. Mr. and Mrs. Ebersole will visit many points of interest en route.

The W. H. Walston home on North Court street was the scene of a happy gathering Tuesday afternoon, celebrating the twelfth birthday anniversary of Wanda Walston. Some two-score playmates of Miss Walston spent the afternoon in playing games, the climax being reached with the serving of refreshments, most important of which was a birthday cake.

TULARE.

Proving one of the social events of the season, the opening dance given by the Girls' Auxiliary in the Woman's Club House Friday evening was a decided success. People from Porterville, Hanford and Visalia were present. The Halloween motif was used attractively with autumn flowers in the decorations. The prize waltz was won by a couple from Visalia. Kegs of apple cider proved a popular beverage. Refreshments were in keeping with harvest time.

Mrs. George Buck of Auduburn, Iowa, is house guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Phillips on West Tulare street. After a week's visit she will go to Fresno to visit friends there before returning to her home.

Following their marriage in the Episcopal Church Sunday morning, Theodore Theauleaus and his bride, formerly Miss Elberda Cutright of Tulare, left for Tia Juana, Mexico, on an extended wedding trip of six weeks or two months. After their return they will reside in this city.

Mrs. A. R. Price, accompanied by Mrs. Kathe of Visalia, left the first of the week for San Jose to attend a meeting of the Eastern Star. Mrs. Price is Worthy Matron for Tulare lodge. They will return from the north in a few days.

WEEK'S HOSTS, GUESTS.

for decoration of the table where a delightful dinner was served. Mrs. Ayling then donned an attractive brown traveling suit, with hat and accessories to match, and the young couple departed on the evening train for a honeymoon trip to San Francisco, Catalina and Los Angeles. They will make their home in the southern city.

Mrs. Ayling is the younger daughter of Mrs. Cora Baker, prominent club woman of Porterville, and is known for her charming personality and sweet voice. Mr. Ayling, a native of Chicago, has been actively engaged in the real astute business in Los Angeles for several years. He is a members of the Gamut and Orpheus clubs in that city.

Miss Erin Elizabeth Eastwood was honor guest at a delightfully informal indoor picnic Sunday evening at the home of her sister, Mrs. Robert A. Mack, on Harrison street. Halloween was featured in the decorations and table appointments. Covers were laid for fourteen, the surprise of the evening being individual miniature birthday cakes for each guest, the candles and decorations being in keeping with the season. Telegrams of congratulations to the guest of honor on the anniversary of her birth created much amusement. Music furnished diversion for the remainder of the evening.

YORBA LINDA.

Mrs. R. Madsen assisted by her daughter, Miss Eva Madsen, entertained thirty of the ladies of the Eastern Star at their home on Saturday afternoon. Decorations of black and yellow, in the Halloween motif interspersed with huge yellow chrysanthemums and ferns made a charming effect. Five hundred was played during the afternoon. Mrs. W. Berkenstock was the unlucky winner of the dunce cap, and Mrs. Spencer captured the first prize. A dainty collation was served by the hostess and Miss Eva.

The Women's Club members of Yorba Linda are busy women these days. They are preparing for a bazaar on a large scale for the Christmas trade; still they have time to do ther interesting work. Tuesday twenty-six members motored to Anaheim and Del Monte to visit the home industries located at those places, stopping on their way home at the County Hospital to leave a message of cheer to the inmates in the form of several cases of home-made jellies and jams, and reading matter.

A delightful picnic lunch was enjoyed by the club in the Santa Ana Park.

Mr. E. E. Knight is the proud possessor of a handsome silver cup awarded for the best field display of avacados at the Riverside fair. He also has a number of first prizes for exhibits, and has a large display at the Los Angeles flower show.

Sixty members of the Santa Ana chapter of the Eastern Star were guests of the local lodge on Saturday evening, when the visiting members put on the work of the order. After the meeting a light luncheon was served and a social hour enjoyed.

LINDSAY.

At the meeting of the Tuesday Club the program given proved most interesting. Miss Carnegie-Prior was in charge. Miss Elizabeth Noyes spoke on "International Relationships," Mrs. Elmer Fish on "Christian Unity" and Mrs. R. W. Webb on "Better Moving Pictures."

Mrs. Pearl Gleave, district chairman of the civics department of the San Joaquin Valley Federated Clubs, made an address on "Women and Civics," while Miss Stepha Dodson spoke upon "China as I Know It."

Mrs. W. W. Newlee was hostess to the Cardette Club at a 1 o'clock luncheon Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Stephens were hosts at an entertainment given in honor of Lenn Allen Friday evening. Games and music furnished diversion for the guests, and refreshments were served.

Mrs. William Woodruff was hostess to a number of her friends at a rag-bee Friday at the C. O. Cowles residence. Covers were placed for thirty at a large table upon the porch, while there was a kindergarten table for the younger guests.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Eaton are receiving congratulations of their friends upon the arrival of a daughter.

Monday evening Mrs. E. B. Young was hostess at a basket supper at her ranch home, having as guests the faculty of the Lindsay schools and the executive board of the Parent-Teachers' Association. Following the bountiful repast, the guests enjoyed a hike over the hills in the moonlight.

STRATHMORE.

At a pretty home wedding Wednesday Miss Hazel Rowley and Glenn I. Bunton were married, the Rev. N. C. McCay of the Presbyterian Church, officiating. The ceremony was performed under a trellised arch of pink and white roses and smilax. Following the ceremony refreshments were served by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church, after which the bridal couple left for their honeymoon. Mr. and Mrs. Bunton will make their home in Strathmore.

Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Pearl Cone was hostess to the Tri'K's. Refreshments were served after the business meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Moore have returned to their home in Tulare, after having been guests at the Carrol Pursell home.

Mrs. C. Pickering of Los Angeles is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Jack Oddous.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Bennett are spending the week in their Giant Forest summer home.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Keiffer of Santa Paula made a recent visit to their cousin, Mr. R. W. Craven.

Mrs. William Hilger entertained the Strathmore Community Music Club Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mennell are visiting friends in Santa Rosa.

RIALTO.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Juhlin soon leaving to make their home in Los Angeles have furnished the motif for a number of quite informal but none the less delightful affairs of the week, friends in this happy manner expressing their regret at loosing Mr. and Mrs. Juhlin from the community life. Within a few days they have been entertained by Prof. and Mrs. C. H. Gurney of North Olive street, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Drollinger of South Riverside avenue, Mr. and Mrs. George Post of North Orange street, Mrs. L. E. Williamson and Mrs. T. H. Van Frank of North Riverside avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Tibbot, daughter Maud Elizabeth and Miss Justine Conrey came up from Los Angeles for a week-end visit with Mr. Tibbot's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Tibbot and on Sunday, other unexpected guests arriving at the hospitable home were Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Gemmill and daughter, Margaret of Ontario, Earnest Tibbot and Miss Lucille Conrey of San Bernardino. A sumptuous dinner was served at the noon hour in spite of the surprise feature.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Scott, son Marion and their house guest Mrs. H. H. Moore spent the week-end at the Scott cabin in Cedar Glen, San Bernardino Mountains.

REDONDO BEACH.

The marriage of Miss Althea Cakebread and Alexander Russell Anderson was solemnized Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Anderson, 2637 Rameo street, Los Angeles. The marriage service was read by Rev. H. H. Hocker, pastor of the Redondo Beach Methodist Church. The bride was gowned in white satin and Chantilly lace. Her tulle veil was caught with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Ruby Lincoln, who wore a charming frock of pink organdy, and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. The two little flower girls, Naomi and Ruth Cakebread, were dressed in white ogandy, and carried baskets of pink rose petals. A wedding dinner and reception followed the ceremony, after which the bride and groom left for a honeymoon at Catalina. They will be at home here after November 1.

St. James's Catholic Church was the scene of a pretty wedding Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Miss Pauline O'Callahan and Adolph Lenz were united in marriage. Father James Deenihan pronounced the impressive ceremony in the presence of the immediate relatives and a few friends. From the church the bridal party and guests went to the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. Harold Haff, where the wedding dinner was served. The newly-wedded couple will spend their honeymoon in San Diego and San Bernardino, after which they will return here to make their home.

A marriage of much interest to friends here was solemnized in Riverside Tuesday. It united Miss Mabel Toler and George Johnson, both of this city. The marriage service was read at the Presbyterian parsonage in Riverside. After a short motor trip Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will be at home here at the Elja Arms Hotel. Both the bride and groom have been residents here for only about a year, but have made many friends, and are prominent in the social life of the city.

Mrs. P. S. Venable was in Santa Cruz last week, in attendance at the grand chapter of the Order of Eastern Star as a representative of the Redondo chapter. In company with Mrs. E. E. Webster and niece, Mrs. R. Baker of Hermosa Beach, Mrs. Venable made the trip to Santa Cruz by motor.

MANHATTAN BEACH.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Humfreyville of Los Angeles spent the week-end at their beach cottage here.

Mrs. W. G. Leburn entertained her friend Mrs. H. C. Huffman of Baldwin Park over Sunday.

Miss Elizabeth Barton will be hostess at the luncheon and meeting of the Lend A Hand Society, Tuesday, at the church.

The attic of the C. B. Cardinell home was the scene of a jolly Halloween party, Thursday night. The guests were the member of the Christian Endeavor Society of the community church, and their friends. Halloween games and contests were the diversion of the evening. Light refreshments were served.

Mrs. R. Williams, who has been making an extended stay here for the benefit of her health, returned, last week, to her home in Highland Park, Los Angeles.

Mrs. L. McCarnacke, who has spent the summer here with her daughter, Mrs. George Delavan, returned this week to her home in Iowa.

Mrs. E. E. Crandall very delightfully entertained her Sunday-school class with a 6 o'clock dinner at her home on Manhattan avenue, Friday evening.

VAN NUYS.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Steere entertained Tuesday evening at a very attractive dinner party, the occasion being in honor of Mrs. G. G. Steere's birthday. The table was beautifully decorated with Halloween favors—black cats, witches and jack 'o lanterns being much in evidence. The appointments were carried out in yellow. Covers were laid for nine.

Miss Katherine Yunker was a guest of the Beta Chi Nu Sorority of the Southern Branch of the University of California at a luncheon given at the Cinderella Roof on Saturday.

Mrs. H. H. A. Hastings of Seattle is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. A. Hastings, Jr., of Encino Acres.

Miss Josephine Cornwell and Miss Mary Jane Keffer accompanied the hiking party from the Southern Branch University of California to Switzer's camp over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Angier of East Sherman Way have moved into Hollywood for the winter, where their daughter, Miss Charlotte Angier, is attending school.

Rev. and Mrs. Howard Alf of Chatsworth and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Peterson of Long Beach were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Nickle on El Nido street.

ONTARIO.

The attractive home of Mrs. Lester Ray Kennedy, 109 Bonita Court, was the scene of a smart affair Saturday afternoon when she entertained a group of friends at a bridge tea of charming appointments. A yellow motif was employed in the artistic decorations, huge chrysanthemums being the predominating blossoms. Five tables were used in the auction tournament and prizes for the afternoon's play were captured by Miss Lucile Walker, Mrs. Samuel Moch and Miss Ruth Carpenter. A collation followed the games.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward Walker entertained informally at dinner Friday evening at their home, 135 Bonita Court. Old-fashioned bouquets were used in decoration and dinner, announced at 7:30, was served in courses. The guests were chiefly members of the Evening Dinner Club, and covers were indicated for Dr. and Mrs. Frank Monroe Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Welles Thompson Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Wyland Heinecke, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Baugh Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart Ingalls, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Harris Frankish, Mr. and Mrs. Earl M. Hill, Miss Lucile Walker, Leonard J. Frankish and Mr. and Mrs. Ward Walker. Cards and dancing followed the menu.

In compliment to the Rev. E. H. Hess, retired minister, and Mrs. Hess, on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary, friends gave them a delightful reception Friday afternoon in the social rooms of the First Evangelical Church. Choice blossoms in profusion converted the rooms into veritable flower gardens, and scores of warm friends attended

Each an outstanding value—each truly portraying its much higher value.

The coat values are as high as $69.50—the suits average as high as $89.50. But the last day of Emporium's 4th Birthday Sale is offering values that women will realize at a glance are exceptional in every sense of the word.

The Frocks are fashioned of heavy, lustrous satins, soft, clinging Canton crepes, and superior quality Tricotines.

The Suits are of new and choice fabrics—Yalama Cloth, Suede, Poiret Twill and Tricotine; many are richly trimmed with furs and beautiful hand embroidery; others more conservative.

The Coats are of Velour, Normandie, Bolivia, Elvira Cloth, Veldyne and other popular and rich fabrics, many trimmed with rare furs, others plain tailored. Some are elaborately embroidered.

SPECIAL GROUP OF FROCKS

It would be impossible to describe them with mere words—only can one conceive of their beauty, styles, trimmings and lovely materials by seeing the frocks themselves.

Twice this price and more would be nearer the actual worth of these frocks, but the last day of this wonderful event offers them far, far below the sums they should rightfully command.

INGROWN TOE NAIL
TURNS OUT ITSELF

A noted authority says that a few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail that it cannot penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.—[Advertisement.

SOCIETY.

of their daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Keith Rhodes, who goes soon to join her husband, who is station in the Philippines. The home on South Orange street was filled with neighbors and friends to wish Mrs. Rhodes Godspeed. The evening sped pleasantly with games and music, Miss Edith Spicer, Mrs. J. H. Scott, Mrs. J. M. Burquist, J. H. Gnagy and Clifford Jansen contributing to the pleasure of the evening by song and instrumental music. Mrs. M. Fiscus and Mrs. H. B. Bruce, in charge of the luncheon, provided a bounteous fare. Those to be present were Mmes. Taylor, Schwitzer, Powers, Howe, Mitchel, Olmstead, Fanning, Sutliff, Bruce, Lester, Brown, Nickleb, Spicer, Meriditb, Fiscus, and the Messrs. Kieth, Mensen, Powers, Fiscus, Spicer, Fanning, Scott, Howe and Kieth. The honoree was the recipient of many handsome gifts.

Mrs. J. E. Munger of Los Angeles has been the guest of her son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Munger of North Pomona avenue, for several days. Mrs. Munger will remain in Brea for an indefinite visit with her children.

The Christian Endeavor of the Congregational Church gave a Halloween spook party on Friday evening. Weird jack-o'-lanterns and spooky figures fitted through the church parlors, but proved themselves wholly human when delicious refreshments were served by the young ladies of the Endeavor. There were fifty present.

SIERRA MADRE.

Returning Tuesday from several months' visit in Atlantic Coast cities, Mrs. F. P. Sperry and daughter Harriet have again opened their ranch home on Live Oaks avenue to their many friends here.

Thirty-two guests enjoyed a dinner party last Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Hart in Altadena, the event being in celebration of Mr. Hart's birthday and his third wedding anniversary.

To enjoy this ideal all-year climate, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Harley and two sons of Springfield, Mass., reached here Saturday and will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Carpenter of East Algeria street.

—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Hartman on South Lima street is being occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pegler, who arrived recently from Palmdale to visit the horticultural exhibition in Los Angeles.

Among the guests at the anniversary dinner of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Madsi of Covina were Mr. and Mrs. Woodson Jones, Mrs. Genevieve Neutzel and Mrs. Shannon of Sierra Madre.

Valley View ranch on East Grand View Boulevard was the scene of a jolly surprise party last Saturday, held in honor of the fourteenth birthday of Miss Josie Gerson. Mrs. Gerson, her daughter Dorothy and Mrs. H. Lannon from the Crow's Nest ranch were hostesses. Among the participants from this place were: Misses Esther Lomax, Margaret Lannon, Hazel Kincaid, Margaret Mayer, Angelea Scheeberger, Ella Reves, Ruth Bloodworth, Lois Woodruff, Messrs. Lester Bodine, Alfred Bolohavek, Robert Woodruff, Perley Cox, Dudley Shaw, Billy Summers and Otto Kittleson.

After a visit to his friends and relatives in the Eastern and Middle Western States, Mr. A. J. Barker of East Highland Roadway arrived home last Thursday.

Partaking of the good old English luncheon, muffins, marmalade and tea, the Dickens Fellowship enjoyed a meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. S. Andrews.

The concert given on Thursday afternoon at the Ambassador Hotel for the benefit of the Council of Community Service of California was attended by Mmes. Milton Steinberger, W. R. Lees, W. R. Morgan, W. E. Walker, E. Rhodes, W. H. Ingraham and E. C. Newton, all prominent club women of this city.

OLINDA.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Annin have been entertaining quite extensively this last week. Mrs. Annin gave a very charming luncheon to a number of out-of-town guests in Thursday noon; these were: Mrs. Frank Canfield of Maricopa, Mrs. M. Waterton of Santa Ana and Mrs. James Truse and Mrs. W. Christian of Anaheim. Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Annin were hosts at dinner to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lovering, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Skinner and Mr. and Mrs. George Tremor, all of Anaheim. On Saturday evening the latter party enjoyed a theater party to the New California Theater.

Thursday afternoon the Olinda Parent-Teacher Association held a very interesting meeting at the schoolhouse. The eighth-grade pupils had charge of the entertainment. Several readings and songs were given by the scholars, then the assembly was addressed by Dr. M. Mangerson of the history department of the Fullerton Union High School. ments of tea and cookies.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Dearman were hosts to a delightful dinner and motor trip to Los Angeles friends Sunday. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Cornelius and children. After the delicious dinner the hosts and their guests visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Cox of La Crescenta.

New members of the Boy Scouts are Edward Coryll, Albert Junker, Clayton Lyle and Raymond Peralto. These with the balance of the members with their scout master, H. Van Patton, took a delightful hike up Carbon Canyon, having lunch over a camp fire at La Vida Springs and a hill climb before returning to their homes. There were twenty in the party.

WHITTIER.

Characterized by a friendly informality was the family dinner which Mr. and Mrs. M. Orban, Jr., gave at their hospitable home, 904 West Philadelphia street, early in the week, in celebration of the birthday anniversary of the host and also in recognition of the proximity of the birthdays of several of the guests. Mrs. Orban was assisted by her two talented daughters, namely Mrs. H. D. Chapple and Mrs. D. R. Lamon, who are well known in art circles in Los Angeles and at the University of Southern California. A delectable dinner, with chicken the piece de resistance, with accompanying courses, was served. The place cards were from the clever brushes of the daughters. Those whose birthdays were celebrated, aside from the host, were W. H. Palmer, an old-time friend from Los Angeles; Charles Chapple and Paul Mooney, the latter a nephew of the hostess and the house guest of the Orbans while a student at U.S.C.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chapple and daughter and her husband, Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Hook, W. H. Palmer and daughter Miss Greta of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Chapple and Mrs. D. R. Lamon, M. Orban, Sr., and Paul Mooney.

To announce the betrothal of Miss Jennie Roper who is to wed Mr. Charles Dixon November 2, his brother Mr. Edward Dixon and wife entertained with an aluminum shower at their home, 623 North Greenleaf avenue, Tuesday evening. Halloween emblems were used in the decorations and an attractive collation was served to the thirty-five guests. The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Roper of 432 South Greenleaf avenue and is well known, having been a student at the local high school. Mr. Dixon has been a resident of Whittier for about four years. After the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Dixon will live in Long Beach. Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Long, Glendale; Mr. and Mrs. Gene Petticord, Fullerton and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wolfe, Long Beach.

Miss Esther Bewley and Mrs. Merle Allen entertained at the home of the latter on North Painter avenue Saturday evening with an attractive Halloween dancing party in compliment to Miss Bewley's sister Miss Helen Bewley and in celebration of her birthday. Jolly Jack 'o Lanterns were used for the illmination and pumpkin pie, coffee and other Halloween refreshments were served.

RIVERA.

One of the loveliest weddings of the autumn season was that of Miss Jane Timis and Mr. James Phillips, which was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Timis, on Passons Boulevard, Thursday afternoon, the Rev. Ernest E. Day, pastor of Plymouth Congregational Church, Whittier, performing the religious rites and using the double-ring ceremony. The home had been transformed into a floral bower of great beauty; ropes of asparagus plumosis ferns and smilax were utilized to form a canopy, and an altar effect was created by the artistic use of potted palms and ferns. While plighting their marriage vows, the bridal pair stood beneath a huge wedding bell made of natural orange blossoms and held in place by a mammoth bow of white tulle. The nuptial music was particularly pleasing. Miss Evelyn Sutphen of Whittier was at the piano and Miss Beatrice Louck of Hollywood played the violin obbligatos. While the guests were assembling they played "I Love You Truly" and "Because" and as the bridal party appeared they played the wedding march from Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus. As for color effects, the wedding might be called a pastel wedding, soft grays, lavendar and pink being the predominating colors. The bride wore a gown of silver sheen satin, richly embellished with embroidery and rose point lace; her bridal bouquet was of lavendar and pink blossoms and maiden-hair ferns. The collation was served by the Rivera Woman's Club, of which Mrs. Timis is a prominent member. Portions of the beautiful bride's cake were served by Mrs. Robert Carvey, and the gift boxes were distributed by little Betty Wells, a cousin of the bride. Miss Lenora McArthur presided at the coffee urn and Miss Ruth Ephriam served punch. Mrs. Timis was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Harry Bedwell, Miss Lenore Timis, a sister of the bride; Mrs. Jennie Wells, Mrs. Emma Wells, Mrs. Edgar Crouch, Mrs. Frank Wells and Mrs. Will Boothe. Elaborate gifts of silver, handsome laces, linens and cut glass were received by the happy pair. The father's gift to his daughter was a check for $1000. The bride is an accomplished musician, specializing on the harp and piano; she was formerly a student at the Erie Conservatory of Music. Mr. Phillips is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Windson Phillips of Westfield, N. Y. He served during the European war with the marines. Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Phillips left for a short honeymoon auto trip, and upon their return will reside at the Silverado Apartments in Los Angeles.

SAN LUIS OBISPO.

At a meeting of Obispo Circle, Neighbors of Woodcraft, Tuesday evening, the following officers were elected for the coming year: Past Guardian Neighbor, Mrs. Josephine Burch; Guardian Neighbor, Mrs. Amelia Tudor; Adviser, Mrs. Violet Naylor; Magician, Mrs. Avis Dana; Clerk, Mrs. Anna Schlicht; Banker, Mrs. Louise Gingg; Attendant, Mrs. Minta Long; Captain of the Guard, Mrs. Elizabeth Chaffee; Inner Sentinel, Mrs. Edith Aumaier; Outer Sentinel, Mrs. Nellie Mallagh; Musician, Mrs. Martha Archuletta; Press Correspondent, Mrs. Josephine Burch; Installing Officer, Mrs. Anna Schlicht.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church were entertained Thursday afternoon by Mrs. H. A. Truesdale at her home in Mill street. The house was gaily decorated with witches, cats and other symbols of Halloween. A delightful afternoon was spent and old-fashioned refreshments were served.

Mrs. Kenneth Swearingen has returned to her home in Salinas after passing several days here as the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. Garrett.

Mrs. R. D. Williams has returned

BEAUTY CULTURE HINTS

There is real common sense in just noticing whether the hair is well kept to judge of a woman's neatness, or good taste. If you are one of the few who try to make the most of your hair, remember that it is not advisable to wash the hair with any cleanser made for all purposes, but always use some good shampoo. You can enjoy the very best by getting some canthrox from your druggist, dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—[Advertisement.

ANNA M. BERGERON, Beauty Specialist.

Wh, Grow Old

—when the art and science of knowing how to retain a youthful, healthy complexion and a perfect contour of face, neck and throat is yours and is one of the necessities of this age.

—Up-to-the-minute women are too sensible to be satisfied with the beauty of the powder puff and rouge or to believe that one application of the contents from a highly priced jar will tighten sagged muscles over night.

—One of the most successful beauty scientists in this part of the country is Madam Anna Bergeron, who has for more than twenty years made a scientific study of the skin and muscular beauty of the face. She has recently returned from New York, where she worked and studied with the leading beauty specialists of the world, and is now giving a facial treatment very different from anything given in ths part of the country. The benefit is permanent for the nerves and circulation is stimulated and the improvement most marked.

But Madam Bergeron's real enthusiasm is in her facial exercises.

—We all know what physical culture exercises will do in strengthening and hardening the muscles of the body. The same results can be had for the face, neck and throat by knowing how to rhythmically taut and relax the right muscles. Madam Bergeron is now giving these facial exercises in the form of class lessons, condensing them and making them so simple that any woman can practice them herself after thorough instructions. The nature of the lessons makes it necessary to limit the number in each class and an interview is essential, as Madam Bergeron only accepts those whom she knows she can help and classifies each one's needs. Her office is 1221 Haas Bldg.

—Many may not know the toilet preparations known under the name of "Key to Beauty" are made by Madame Bergeron from her own formulas. These consist of creams, tissue builder, powders and rouge, and are for sale at Bullock's, Robinson's, Ville de Paris, Coulter's, Young's Market, or at her office, top flor Haas Bldg., corner Seventh and Broadway. Mail orders filled.

Peg o' Los Angeles goes buying

Capes are to be worn a great deal this year.

Many folks who have never thought of it before, are planning to send Christmas cards with merely their names engraved thereon and perhaps an original greeting. I saw many new designs—some were their own exclusive ones—at Cunningham, Curtis & Welch—and many of these and wonderfully colored linings and not a few were embossed exquisitely in metal. You will find it expedient to shop early for these greeting cards. 723 S. Hill and 252 S. Spring.

Who can deny the mystic lure of the Far East with its quaint and fascinating beauty? Its floors softly carpeted with rugs of wondrous harmony, its spacious rooms filled with the ancient art of China, great teakwood chairs and tables inlaid with ivory, swaying incense burners filling the air with oriental perfumes—F. Suie One's new Chinese, store opens its doors to you tomorrow at 969 W. Seventh St. Within those dreamy walls you may wander at your leisure—up the spacious staircase into the very heart of China—where you will find exquisitely wrought ivories, gorgeously hued embroideries, wondrous bronzes and a never ending line of treasures which will delight your soul as they did the soft voiced, velvet-eyed artists who conceived them!

Any wide-awake lad, whether he be 7 or 17, would look topping in a Sunday-go-to-meeting suit of imported West of England serge such as I saw at Robinson's! And mothers would be pleased to find that two pairs of fully lined knickers go with each suit, which sells for only $30—which is awfully surprising when you note the fine quality of serge and splendid workmanship!

Would you like a collar of caracul put on your old fur coat so that it will look right up to the minute? Or a cape made into a smart new wrap—or a choker made from an old muff? Run in to see Evelyn Myers at the Bogue Fur Shop—she was formerly with Colburn's, and if anyone can make a new fur out of an old one—she can! Fifty per cent discount is offered now at 746 S. Hill.

Any old fur wrap can be made over into something clever—if given to the right person—and Nora Hutchins would be only too glad to try her hand at it—she is unusually successful with furs—is recently from Carson, Pirie, Scott, Chicago. She also relines furs and wraps and makes attractive cloth coats at 569 S. Fremont. 19553.

The Spencer Rejuveno Corset and abdominal supports correct faulty posture and improve the health. Alice E. Cross, 818 Haas Bldg.

If your rugs are taken care of at the new fire-proof storage plant of the Birch-Smith Furniture Company—they will be cleaned properly, rolled and placed in cedar-lined rooms—your furniture will be refinished and repaired in their own repair rooms—and any thing you wish to store will be carefully looked after. Estimates will be gladly given at 737-741 S. Hill. Phone Broadway 138.

Reduce without mental or physical effort by the Sanitas-Bergonie system which is a joy to all who have tried it. You feel buoyant, revivified and all aglow—and can rest assured that the result will be unusually lasting. 807 Brack-Shops.

Eight curls for $5 is offered for permanently waving your hair by Emma Atkin, certified Nestle operator. 822 W. 7th. Phone Pico 1948.

A permanent marcel is indeed a thing of beauty when done expertly by Mrs. Lux of the Nestle Shop, eighth floor, Brack-Shops. She makes a specialty of waving white hair without discoloring it and curls the finest hair without kinks. The Nestle process does not remove the natural oil, but leaves the hair soft and glossy. Phone 63232.

They always serve some kind of hot bread at the New Paris Tea Room, 609 South Broadway, which fact serves to make it a most popular place for business men as well as women to lunch. For what man is proof against hot biscuits? Women shoppers find it convenient also for a "cup o' tea" in the afternoon.

A beautiful permanent Marcel wave that leaves the hair soft and glossy is given by Edith Naftel, 202 Haas Building. Phone 66140.

You will get so much pleasure out of selecting your Christmas cards early, so why not take a look at that new line at The Korin, 408 West Sixth street? They are showing many lovely pictures which would make suitable gifts, daintily illustrated gift books, art novelties, and are already framing many pictures for the holidays.

Too fat? Too thin? Not exactly well? You can be brought to normal weight and measurements and be vastly improved in health by the Reiss system — without drugs or starvation. It's intensely interesting, too. 802 Title Guarantee Buildin, 220 West Fifth. Phone 67815.

Dresses and suits are smart if banded with fur.

"Well, now I feel as if I had had something to eat," exclaimed a man at the Orange Tea Shop the other evening—which I would say was the highest compliment he could pay to the makers of a dinner! It is generally conceded that any one of the three dinners at 649 S. Hope is entirely satisfying as to both quantity and quality.

Sport togs bid fair to be worn later this year than ever before.

They feature "winter hats for winter wear" at Randall & Brown Hat Shop—and you will admit just the most alluring chapeaux you could find in a day's journey! They also do clever "make over" at 804 W. Eighth at Flower.

Gay red dresses are seen on every side—and these are often trimmed with gray squirrel.

'Most everybody likes roast chicken—and when it is served at such a charming place as the Dixon Inn, the pleasure is twofold! Stop there Sunday evening on your way to or from the beach—you will never cease thanking me! Near Hollywood Boulevard and Western at 1717 Garfield Place, Phone Hollywood 2638.

In a hurry to have your fur remodeled? That artist-designer, Chestnut, is making up some very handsome wraps out of old ones and is getting them out in ten days' time at 50 per cent discount. He has some very smart fur garments in both shops which it would behoove you to see before buying elsewhere! 808 West Seventh and 725 South Hill.

The most adorable little party dress all net, and ruffles and ribbons—just like mother's, is shown at the Vanity Fair, 631 W. Seventh—also many of the cutest little frocks for dress-up and play. A 25 per cent reduction on lovely lingerie is offered this week.

Many dance frocks have fitted bodices and bouffant skirts.

"Facial contour, dropped jaws and scrawny neck are unnecessary, as is every blemish that mars beauty, including superfluous hair and moles," says Anna M. Bergeron, who has just returned from New York, where she worked and studied with the leading beauty specialists of the world. Mme. Bergeron's famous "Key to Beauty" aids are for sale at the leading stores and at her office, top floor, Haas, Building, Seventh at Broadway.

Madam's "gown intime" may be a perfect rainbow of color blending and is sometimes trimmed with ostrich. Indeed, her negligees are the gayest of all her costumes—if she likes!

BITS OF VERSE.

The Reaper.

When silvery the new moon gleams,
  A sickle in the azure deep,
It seems to come to me in dreams,
  And reap for me the fields of sleep.
Then I have pansies purple eyed,
  And radiant roses round me strewn,
And popies rich and daisies pied,
  Cut by the sickle of the moon.
And I have grain in golden sheaves,
  While clover rubies near me lie;
What wonder that my spirit grieves
  When the moon puts its sickle by!
—[Clinton Scollard, in New York Herald.

Let Me Still Believe.

O let me still believe that love will win
The last redoubts of evil! Passions rise
Like mists to shut away the tranquil skies;
Fear walks the verdant earth and strewns therein
With every step the dragon teeth of sin;
The righteous perish; honor in dungeons lies;
Greed spreads her net of subtle treacheries
Wherein the wars that rend the world begin.
Still will my heart believe, in spite of these Corruptions and calamities, that man
Moves on to truth and ever-widening good,
Winning by scarce perceptible degrees
His soul's purgation, till the heavens span
A universe of peace and brotherhood.
—[Leslie Pinckney Hill, in Philadelphia Ledger.

Absence.

I never dreamed the lark would hush its note
  As day succeeded ever-drearier day,
Nor knew the song that swelled the robin's throat
  Would fade to silence, when you went away.
I never thought the slim moon, mournfully,
  Would shroud her pallid self in murky night.
Dear heart, I never thought these things would be—
  I never thought they would, and I was right.
  —[Dorothy Parker in Life.

Nature in August.

The butterflies are in the air,
  The bees are in the clover,
The flies are swarming everywhere,
  The fleas they swarm on Rover.
The skeeters on each pondlet's brink
  Uplifts a song malevolent—
The cockroach in the kitchen sink
  Is prevalent.
The grasshopper uplifts a song
  From every bunch and thicket,
The locust hollers all day long,
And all night long the cricket.
(Cricket, wife says, not only sing,
  But eats—well, I should hesitate
To write the list of household things
  She says it ate!)
Dog-days are here. But as I squirm
  And scratch, I wonder whether
Bug-days were not a better term
  For August's crawly weather.
Though dogs delight to bark and bite
  O bugs, more deeply shock you us—
We'd loathe you, even were you quite Innocuous!
—[Ted Robinson in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

They put it in the tariff bill,

USEFUL INVENTIONS.

French war experts have developed a sky rocket which is sent into the air with a time fuse calculated to bring it as close to the invading air squadron as possible before it explodes. The rocket then releases liquid fire and poisonous gases.

The real designer of the parachute was Leonardo da Vinci, in 1500, although at the coronation of the Emperor of Fo Kien, as early as 1306, Chinese acrobats were seen to jump from a high scaffolding with huge parachute umbrellas.

There has been invented in Europe a music typewriter called the kromarographe. With the aid of this instrument, it is said, the composer may produce a typewritten scroll without the trouble of making the letters by hand. All that he has to do is to place himself at the piano and give free play to his creative fancies. Every stroke upon the keys is registered in regular musical character upon a paper scroll wound upon a drum. The machine operates through a system of electric contacts with the piano keys. The registering apparatus, which resembles an ordinary typewriter in size, may, in order to remove discordant sounds, be placed at a distance from the piano, even in an adjoining

ORIGIN OF CORN.

It is the Product of Plant Evolution Developed from Grass.

Indian corn is the largest and most valuable crop of America.

The first discoverers and settlers from Europe found the red aborigines cultivating this crop.

Corn was not found growing wild; it never has been found growing wild.

Naturally, the question arose long ago — and has persisted: Whence came Indian corn?

From what source did the Indians derive it?

It was not known elsewhere in the world until after the discovery of it in America.

For long, plant naturalists have held that corn is the product of plant evolution; that its parent is a grass known as teosinte, which grows wild only in Southern Florida. But this has been but a theory with scientific agriculturists; they have never come forward with any proof of their theory—until now.

Now Luther Burbank steps out into the limelight with the positive proof.

He has actually evolved Indian corn from teosinte.

And how long did it take the plant wizard to work this seeming bit of magic?

Eighteen years.

And how did he do it?

By careful selective breeding.

He did not resort to cross-breeding at all. A head of teosinte has no rachis or cob to which the grains are attached, as has wheat. The grains of teosinte are simply piled one upon another. Each grain is enveloped in a chaffy husk.

Mr. Burbank planted some teosinte seed. When the crop was ripe he observed that some grains had thinner husks than had others. These grains he chose for another planting. Soon grains without husks began to appear; also, a cob began to develop. Most of the grains still had husks, of course. But the stalk began to grow sturdier; the cob came more and more into evidence; the head or ear increased greatly in size.

Mr. Burbank patiently and painstakingly proceeded with his experiment. Slowly, little by little, the grain husks began to leave the separate grains and merge into a common husk for the entire ear. Pod corn had disappeared and real corn was at hand—evolved from teosinte, a tropical grass.

The question arises: How long did it take the Indians, with their haphazard methods of agriculture, to evolve corn from teosinte?

However, selective culture works well with plants and animals. Why wouldn't it work well with man?—[Chicago Journal of Commerce.

Among those serving on committees for November for Ebell are the presidents of other organizations includes: Mrs. Sidney Woman's Club; Mrs. Lillian hart Goldsmith, Philanthropy Civics Club; Mrs. P. H. Greer, Club; Mrs. W. B. Hunnewell, Club; Mrs. W. E. Mabee, Wan Club; Mrs. Jay B. Millard, Hills Woman's Club; Mrs. W. H. Millspaugh, Los Angeles Chapter U.D.C.; Mrs. Florence Collins Porter, Republican Study Club; Mrs. Matthew S. Robertson, president of the Woman's Athletic Club; Mrs. J. Bert Stearns, Woman's City Club; Mrs. J. Henry Stewart, Democratic Woman's League; Mrs. W. H. R. Strong, Hamilton Club; Miss M. Louise Wharton, Woman's Lyric Club, and Mrs. Henry Thomas Wright, Women's Club of Hollywood.

Federation of Music Clubs.

An important board meeting of the California Federation of Music Clubs will be held Wednesday at 9:30 a.m., at the City Club. The president's council, which follows at 12:30 a.m., will be held in the Rose Room, where lunch will be served.

Mountain View Shakespeare Club.

Members of the Mountain View Shakespeare Club enjoyed an interesting program in the clubrooms at El Monte Tuesday afternoon when Miss Mary Wells of Long Beach told of her visit to Oberammergau in the Bavarian mountains, where she saw the "Passion Play." D. W. Pollard and Leon Rice, tenor, gave short talks in the interest of "Better Films." Mr. Rice also sang.

Woman's Press Club.

A California program distinguished the open meeting of the Southern California Woman's Press Club on Tuesday, when Kathleen Norris and Charles G. Norris, the California novelists, spoke and Sarah Coleman Bragdon, local composer, presented a group of delightful original piano numbers, including two preludes and two descriptive numbers, "The Humming Bird" and "San Gabriel," the latter rich in the color and poetry of golden California tradition.

Mrs. Norris discussed with charming frankness the discouragements which beset her early literary pathway. Mr. Norris, who said it had been his fortune always to be living "in the shadow of a great soul," gave a few glimpses into the personal life of his brother, the famous author of "The Octopus," and by special request discussed his own purposes in the writing of "Brass," his recent analysis of the modern causes conspiring toward unhappiness in marriage, a novel which Zona Gale has pronounced magnificent in its directness and honesty.

Margaret F. Grant, the English lecturer, who came from Porterville to address the club, gave three illuminating pictures of as many types of English women as revealed in the crisis of war: The "Lady Doctor," "The Girl of the London Slums" and "The Wife of the Titled Landowner." Other guests who spoke were Dr. Charles F. Hubbard of Peking, China, and Will Monroe, musician and writer, formerly of Pasadena.

The speakers were presented by Neeta Marquis, chairman of achieved results programs. Mrs. Emelie Timerhoff presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. Georgina S. Townsend, who is at the World Press Convention in Honolulu.

California Badger Club.

What promises to be an interesting program has been arranged for the California Badger Club's reciprocity day meeting, to be held next Wednesday at 2:15 p.m., in the Ebell clubhouse. Mrs. John C. Urquhart, president of the district federation, will give a few minutes' talk; Rev. Bromley Oxman will speak on "The Supreme Task Before American Womanhood," and an unusual feature will be the whistling of Miss Georgia Williams, star whistler and bird imitator.

Philanthropy and Civics Club.

Problems of the Sheriff's office will be the subject of William I. Traeger next Tuesday before the Philanthropy and Civics Club at luncheon. Miss Irene Eldred of the Near-East Relief will talk on "Alice in Hungerland."

Santa Monica Bay Club.

With "Stevenson as a Literary Artist" the basis of his lecture, Dr. Frederick T. Blanchard will present the program tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. at the Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club. Emphasizing the guest table with Halloween decorations and a huge white cake covered with orange tapers, Miss Mae Armstrong, art chairman, is planning an exceptionally attractive birthday tea following the lecture.

Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. Miss Susan Judd, an educator of note, will read a paper on Einstein and his theory of relativity before the book and drama section, of which Mrs. A. X. Wilmot is chairman.

A rare treat is scheduled for Friday at 2:30 p.m., when Mrs. Nellie Peck Saunders, popular eastern actress, will talk informally at public affairs section on "How to Secure Better Motion Pictures." Mrs. Arthur A. Weber, chairman, invites public attendance. There is no charge.

A new financial and social record was established by the annual fall festival, which closed Friday night with a humorous reading, "Southern Folk Tales," given by Anthony Faulkner Blanks, and the auctioning of some dolls left unsold in the doll booth.

Applied Christian Psychology.

A busy organization is the new School of Applied Christian Psychology, whose headquarters in the Grosse Building is the meeting place of a club of about 200 philosophically inclined men and women, who are interested in the practical application of the science of psychology. Under the leadership of Dr. William Rosecranse Price, who has spent more than thirty years lecturing and teaching in this field of science, the club is studying the laws of psychology as related to daily life.

At a recent meeting, Mrs. Mary Clough Watson, past president of the Southern California Woman's Press Club, was elected president of the organization. The object of the club is to establish the spirit of love and brotherly helpfulness among all classes, to attain a high plane of moral and physical fitness, and to demonstrate the teachings of the great Master in the daily life of this busy world.

The regular meetings are on the first and third Tuesday evenings of the month, with a special lecture by Dr. Price every Thursday evening.

One of the purposes which the association has in view is the establishment of an institution for the special training of women in maternity.

The Questing Spirit of Womanhood.

The pageant film, "The Questing Spirit of Womanhood," which is the motion picture of the pageant given in Yosemite Valley at the time of the last convention by the State Federation of Women's Clubs, will be shown in Los Angeles at Walker's Auditorium beginning November 14. Clubs desiring to raise special funds for any purpose may co-operate with the State and district organizations in the showing of this film. For full information call Mrs. John T. Coleman, chairman for the district, in charge of the film, telephone number 29820.

The Women's University Club.

The "Disarmament Conference" will be the subject of the luncheon address by Mrs. Seward A. Simons at the Women's University Club next Saturday, at Ebell clubhouse. The afternoon program includes the following: "Impressions of the American Association of University Women Biennial," Gertrude Brainerd, delegate to the National A.A.U.W. conference held in Washington last April; "The Ethel Moore Memorial Fund," Mrs. O. Shepard Barnum, director of South Pacific Section A.A.U.W., Dr. Alice H. Luce, Professor of English at Mills College, and a group of songs by Bunola and Lois Kucker.

The Ethel Moore Memorial Fund sponsored by the A.A.U.W. will build a dormitory at Mills College. This meeting of the Women's University Club marks the beginning of its work for the fund, which will culminate in a benefit bridge and tea to be given on Tuesday afternoon November 29 at the Ebell clubhouse.

The drama section will meet on next Thursday at 10:30 a.m. in the clubroom, 805 Brack Shops. Miss Josephine Dillon of the Metro Studios will speak on "The College Woman in the Spoken and Silent Drama."

Boyle Heights Woman's Club.

At Wednesday's meeting Mrs. F. J. Spring, chairman of social service, from the South Side Ebell Club, will speak of the work she has done for the past two years in that club. Mrs. Mary Coman of Covina will talk on "Our Charities." The current events section, in charge of Mrs. J. A. Smith, promises an interesting session, and each member present is expected to mention some recent important event.

Averill Study Club.

Mrs. W. L. Peck, chairman of the committee on international relations for the California Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke before the Averill Study Club on "Disarmament" Tuesday, in Roosevelt Hall, Walker Auditorium Building. Other speakers on the program were: Mrs. Alice Reeves Dutton, Mrs. V. M. Davis, Mrs. Torry T. Omdalen and Mrs. Isabel J. Beebe. Community singing was led by Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Nance. The next meeting of the club will be under the direction of the vice-president, Mrs. Alice Bueser, on "World Happings in Review."

Highland Park Ebell Club.

Strikingly beautiful was the reading given by Miss Anita Doyle on Tuesday morning at the Highland Park Ebell Club. Miss Doyle is a pupil of Elizabeth Yoder of the school of oratory, University of Southern California. Her voice was especially well adapted to the soft tones of the Italian opera singer of Edward Sheldon's drama "Romance" and the contrast of the male characters made this more marked. The entire play was exquisitely given.

Unusual interest is being shown in the various sections of the club this year. Edgar Webster of Sierra Madre, leader of the travel section, who spent fifteen years in travel over all parts of the world, establishing a residence in each country visited, gave his first talk on "How to Travel." He gave several original ideas on the subject not found in Baedecker.

Prince Raphael Immanuel, a Chaldean, will give the program next Tuesday morning. He will sing his native songs in costume, following which the regular monthly luncheon will be served. Miss Francis Foote will have charge of the book review section.

Eschschol'zia Chapter D.A.R.

"The American Indian" is the subject of the next meeting of Eschscholtzia Chapter, D.A.R., which will be held Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. in the Ebell clubhouse. "American Indian Citizenship" will be presented by Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes.

The noted writer and archeologist, Marah Ellis Ryan, will speak on "Indian Religious Symbolism."

Mrs. William Mabee will sing a group of Indian songs, accompanied by Mrs. Frederick W. Taylor at the piano.

A benefit card party for Eschscholtzia's charitable objects will be held Tuesday, November 15, at 2 p.m. in the ballroom of the Rampart Apartments. Reservations may be made with Mrs. M. M. Maybury, telephone 72157.

District Federation.

Mrs. John C. Urquhart, president of the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs, at the presidents' council said of "coming of age clubs," which are the last word in women's clubs: "This is the new idea with the human appeal in it; the possibility of seeing some of our dreams come true."

Speaking of this movement and the training for leadership she outlined the work in a most attractive way. John Collier will conduct and supervise the course in leadership training through the extension department of the University of California.

The course will begin Tuesday and continue two weeks, in charge of Mr. Collier, Miss Ethel Richardson and E. B. DeGroot.

This local movement is in line with similar ones throughout the country where civic courses have been begun in a large percentage of the State universities.

In co-operation with the Connecticut League of Women Voters, Yale University opened last week a citizenship school for women. The lecturers were Yale professors, Former President Taft is one of those who appeared before the school, which continued for a week and has just closed with the last lecture given Friday. The "new voters" in other States are the women newly enfranchised, but here in Southern California those young men and women who have recently come of age are included in these citizenship classes, where they are taught politics.

The Cosmos Club.

A program that was a real treat was given at the Cosmos Club last Tuesday afternoon. Kenyon J. Scudder, manager of the Veterans' Bureau, headed the program, and gave an instructive talk on the work the veterans are doing.

The musical numbers, given by the trainees of the Veterans' Bureau, were exceptionally enjoyable. The piano solo by Private Fitzhugh L. Caldwell, who played Grossmayer's "Prelude," was a revelation in harmony. Corp. Orron L. Padel sang "The Dawn," by Curran. The violin solo by Private George P. Muse, deserved the enthusiastic reception it received. Mr. Muse's technique and expression were splendid.

An opportunity will be given to see and purchase the work of the veterans at the Cosmos Club on November 8.

West Ebell.

"China is the oldest nation that any one knows of. When Babylon was in her glory China was old. Four hundred millions of people are enough to make anyone think," said Dr. John Hedley before West Ebell Club on Tuesday afternoon. Dr. Hedley was for many years a missionary in China. America should know that China trusts her, believes in her and needs her friendship, he said. The big strong republic can help the big weak one. Preceding the address Mrs. Grace G. Schroeter sang two Chinese songs with Mrs. Abbott at the piano.

The October-December members will entertain on Friday night at the home of Mrs. E. H. Haserot, 4123 South Normandie avenue. Mmes. G. H. Conklin, M. C. Hardwig and F. H. Haserot, receiving. Cards, music, dancing and games will be enjoyed. It being the thirteenth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Mathews, the latter the club president, the club plans to crown them king and queen of Halloween.

At the meeting Tuesday, the chairmen of the months will report amounts earned for the clubhouse fund. Amusing stories of the ways in which the money was earned will be told. Miss Esther Rhoades, harpist, will furnish the musical program.

Business Woman's Civic Club.

Dr. Josephine A. Jackson of Pasadena will be the speaker at the Business Woman's Civic Club meeting, tomorrow evening. "Thresholds" will be the subject presented by Dr. Jackson, who is the author of book entitled "Outwitting Our Nerves." Guest cards may be obtained from the members. The dinner preceding the meeting will be served at 6 p.m. in the clubrooms, third floor, Realty Board Building. For reservations call Dr. Wilde, 14862, or Miss MacLachlan, 26491.

The Glendale Music Club.

Catherine Shank and the Philharmonic Trio will give the program for the regular monthly concert of the Glendale Music Club, which will occur in the auditorium of the Glendale Union High School, Friday at 8 p.m. The artists in the trio are: Earl Mansfield Bright, 'cello; Mr. Calmon, violin, and May McDonald Hope, piano.

Lincoln Study Club.

"The Middle Ages" will be the theme next Tuesday of the Lincoln Study Club, in a meeting at the home of the vice-president, Mrs. Ira Purl Fleming, 2708 Moss avenue. The roll call will be on "Historical Events of the Middle Ages." Dr. Curtis M. Beebe will read a paper on "Literature of the Middle Ages in France and England," and Mrs. Lucretia Cage will discuss the same peroid of literature in Germany, Italy and Spain.

A review of Chaucer's Cantebury Tales will be presented by Mrs. Walter B. Clausen, and Mrs. Fred B. Cutshall will review Dante's Divine Comedy. The usual round table English lesson and discussion of interior decorating will round out the weekly program.

Echo Park Woman's Club.

Mrs. J. A. Smith of the Boyle Heights Woman's Club will review the book entitled "Queen Victoria" at the open meeting of the Echo Park Woman's Club next Friday at 11 a.m. Mrs. Charles E. Pinegar will be the chairman of the program hour. G. W. Ward, principal of the Rosemont school, will speak on the relation of the home to the school, and Miss Hortense L. Williams will direct the gymnasium work before the program.

Miss Williams has arranged to devote the fourth Saturday of each month to a free entertainment in the clubhouse for the benefit of the community. A week ago the first venture in this line was a distinct success. "Rosalie," a one-act play, was presented with the following in the cast: Laurence Otis, Miss Dorothy Lavoy and Miss Florence Watwood as Rosalie.

Others who appeared upon the program are: Misses Janice and Carmine Lillywhite, Miss Toinette Kalvio, Mrs. H. E. Gorden, Miss Clara Tatley, Miss Vivian Monier and Miss Dorothy Wilkenson.

EAUTY SPECIALIST TELLS SECRET

Beauty Specialist Gives Home-made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."—[Advertisement.]

Mrs. Raymond Robins;

Mrs. J. B. Stearns

Women Rally for World Peace.

Mrs. Bryant and Mrs. Exley were central figures in the club women's pageant presented in the Yosemite Valley. Mrs. Stearns is chairman of arrangements for the women's peace rally. Mrs. Robins, whose challenge for women to crusade for universal peace, uttered in an address in Geneva, Switzerland, a week ago Tuesday before an international gathering of women, has been echoed in Los Angeles until the women have begun the crusade. Mrs. McClintock of the executive board of the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs, also is a member of the Armistice Day rally committee. Little Miss Lillian Guenther, a mother of the future, for whom world peace is desired, appeared on the program for the child-welfare benefit at the Ambassador Thursday.

Butterick Design 3173

Yours! Frocks of Parisian Charm and a New Saving of 50c to $10 on every one!

FIRST of the holidays—Thanksgiving, with its festivities! This year your Thanksgiving dinner frock and evening gown may reveal the smartness that one associates with France's favorite Deauville. And these charming clothes will just be the beginning of the smartest—and most economical—wardrobe you have ever owned!

For a marvelous new invention—the Deltor—brings to your needle Paris' own treasured gift of chic; it enables you to make these smarter clothes for less money than any clothes you made ever cost; it gives you miraculous skill and ease of sewing and adds a wonderful economy of time to an actual saving of money!

The DELTOR

Saves you 50c to $10 on materials alone

YOU will find the Deltor enclosed in the envelope with your Butterick pattern. It is not a part of the pattern itself, but a separate service individually planned for the garment you are about to make.

First, the Deltor gives you an individual layout chart (yes, individual, not just a general chart, but one for your exact size and for each suitable width of material). You buy ¼ to 1¼ yards less material on every garment, a saving that amounts to 50c to $10 on every gown you make!

Then, you follow picture-and-word illustrations which show you just how to interpret your fashion as would the originator himself. You sew more surely than ever before, saving hours of time. And your flying needle deftly embodies in your frock not only perfect set, fit and drape but lines that bespeak Paris itself.

Finally, suggestions of finish particularly designed for your very own frock are revealed to you—little details that are great in importance—tiny touches that control the whole mouvement of your gown. Your finished frock—behold! it is a creation of Paris!

Butterick Design 3353

Go to the Butterick pattern counter. Select from the newest Parisian fashions, remembering that the Deltor suggests the correct materials and simplifies the making of the most intricate gown. It saves you 50c to $10 because it specifies less material than would be possible without the Deltor.

For Paris Clothes that you can make yourself, with the Deltor—for every winter need.

Mrs. Anita Diaz Now in America

Former Mexican Praises Simple American Intestinal Antiseptic

"I have used Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) and find it wonderful for the stomach. It once stopped me from undergoing an operation for appendicitis—I was out West at the time. I do not want to be without Adlerika." (Signed) Mrs. Anita Diaz.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacili in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gasses, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere. Sold in Los Angeles by Dickinson Drug Co., southeast corner Third and Main Sts. —[Advertisement.

Three Wonder Groups That Should Prove to Be Our Most Extraordinary Purchase and Sale

Silk Petticoats for Evening Wear

—Now that it's open season for parties and evening gowns, light silk petticoats of festive nature are naturally in great demand.

—We are showing some very charming ones at The Broadway, in white and flesh shades. There are models of wash satin in tailored or lace-trimmed styles, and still more elaborate creations of Georgette, beautifully trimmed with lace and ribbons.

Prices $3.95 to $12.95

Satin Camisoles, $1.95 to $2.45

—We have a very extensive line of camisoles in extra as well as regular sizes. Made of good wash satin in pink or white, they are beautifully trimmed with lace in various effects, there being a choice of built-up shoulders or strap-tops.

Silk Chemises, $2.95 to $8.95

—The crepe de chine used is of good quality, and the garments are effectively trimmed with laces, ribbons and bands of embroidered georgette.

Silk Gowns, $4.95 to $11.95

—Many dainty models, variously developed of good crepe de chine in colorings of flesh, orchid and blue. Trimmings of fine laces and ribbons add to their attractiveness. Many different types of neck-lines and sleeve effects are to be noted.

Boudoir Caps and Slippers, $1.00 to $8.75

—Beautiful lace and ribbon-trimmed caps and the jaunty little hats and voguish slippers of quilted satin with rosettes on the toes, satin mules, and soft-soled ribbon trimmed slippers in pink, blue, orchid and other shades as well as black.

—The Broadway—Second Floor,

Group 1—Gloves at $1.50

12 and 16-Button As Well As Two-Clasp Real French Kid

In this grouping there are 25 dozen pairs of the longer gloves that would regularly bring from four to five times the price, to say nothing of the 3000 or more pairs of real French kid in two-clasp style.

—In the longer gloves you will find black, white, brown and gray. There may not be all sizes in all colors but there are all sizes in the assortment.

—Gloves that would cost more to import, alone.

Real Black Head Mocha Gloves

—Of the finer quality of Mocha in gray and beaver, P. K. sewn. Smart gloves for street wear. 45 dozen pairs of these included.

Group 2—Gloves at $1.00

1200 Pairs Imported French Lambskin

—Beautiful gloves in beaver, tan and gray. 1200 pairs, overseam sewn with embroidered back.

—Finished with two clasps at wrist. Gloves designed for wear and service and priced so low in this event that one is reminded of the days before the war.

Group 3—Gloves at 50c

Washable-Suedette

—Impossible, you say! What kind of gloves can they be for 50c? We do not blame you for being surprised—we were surprised ourselves and let us tell you that you cannot in any way judge the quality of the gloves by the price.

—Every pair is perfect, every pair worth so much more that comparison would sound ridiculous.

—There are nearly all colors in styles to satisfy the most exacting.

—Short gloves, those with straps over wrist, those with deep cuffs.

—Even elbow-length washable suedettes. You must see these gloves, for without seeing them you would not believe that such qualities could be offered for so little.

—We miss our guess if the entire 2000 pairs are not disposed of before the close of the day, Monday, at 50c pair. Aisle 2.

Imported Gloves—Far Less Than Half On the Average

At $1.50, $1.00 and 50c

Long Gloves, Short Gloves, Medium Length, Real Imported French Kid, Imported French Lambskin and Washable Suedette Gloves

—We held our breath with astonishment when the gloves were brought to the Advertising Office. The glove buyer's enthusaism was amazing.

—"If we don't have twice the glove business that the department has ever known, then I will be very much disappointed," he said. And we could not help but agree with him when we saw the gloves.

—The merchandising story of how they came to us is one of remarkable interest. Prominent importers, anticipating the new tariff, had purchased very heavily from French and foreign manufacturers, when suddenly the tariff measure was postponed until next season. The importers found themselves with an over-abundance of fine gloves, but, alas, too little of ready cash to meet the current operating expense of growing business.

—This accounts for the fact that we were able to secure the tremendous quantity mentioned in the heading and for the ridiculously low prices that we are able to quote.

There are white gloves, black gloves, tan gloves, brown gloves, white gloves, galore.

—There are 16-button, 12-button, fancy gauntlet gloves.

—There are fine French kid gloves that bring two, three and even four times the price asked.

—All in all it is truly the most amazing glove transaction that we have ever entered into.

—Consequently we have made every arrangement for tremendous selling.

—Several of the main aisle booths, all of the glove counters, ever so many of the aisle tables will be heaped with these gloves that have been priced so low that even though we have allotted three days as the selling time, we would not be a bit surprised if the entire quantity would be purchased on the first day.

—Women who have seen these gloves have wanted two, three, four, five and even six and a dozen pairs.

—The majority of the kid gloves come from a noted French maker whose name we are asked to withhold.

—See them in the window, read the further details here—come Monday with the hundreds of other women who are sure to want to share in this opportunity of opportunities.

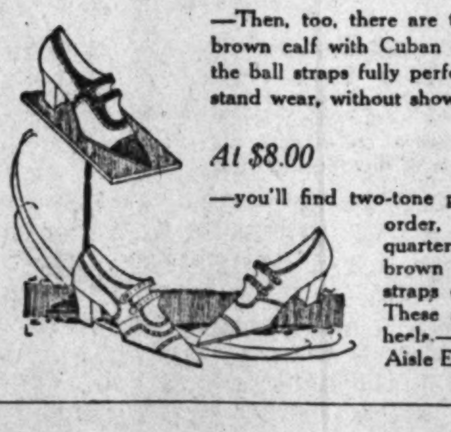
We've Just Received a Shipment of Smart, New Two-Strap

Street Pumps at $7.50 and $8.00

—There's double-barreled interest in this announcement; first of all, the just-in-ness of this footwear proclaims it as of recent designing; secondly, its pricing—$7.50 and $8.00—is moderate enough to give it place under the category of "returned-to-normalcy merchandise."

At $7.50

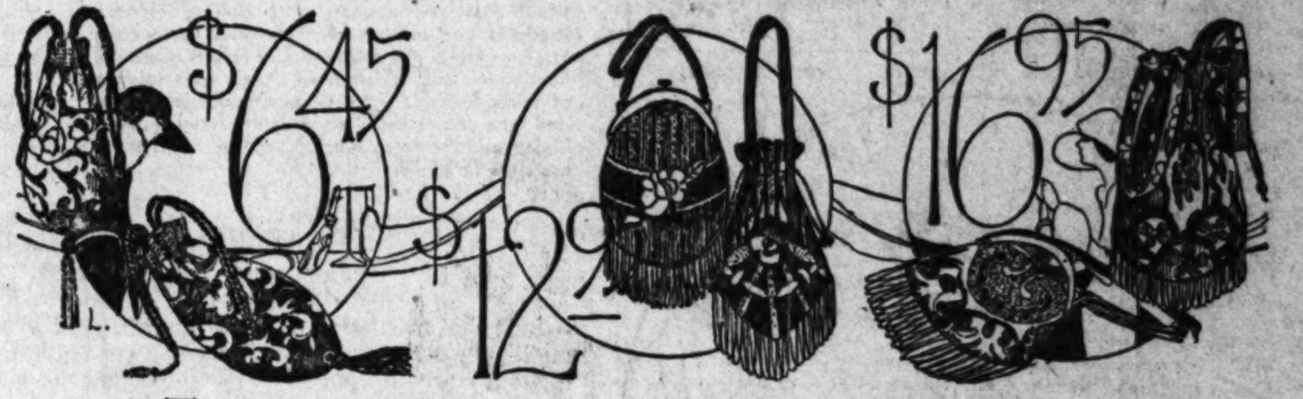
—you'll find such pumps in soft brown or black kid; they have Cuban heels and flexible soles and are effectively perforated at toe and on straps.



—Then, too, there are two-strap pumps of nut brown calf with Cuban heels and welted soles, the ball straps fully perforated. These shoes will stand wear, without showing much trace thereof.

At $8.00

—you'll find two-tone pumps of the two-strap order, the vamps and heel quarters being in nut brown calf, the tips and straps of mahogany calf. These shoes have Cuban heels.—The Broadway—Aisle Eight.



A Timely Purchase of Imported Beaded Bags To be Offered Monday at $6.45, $12.95 and $16.95

—Here again, Fortune smiled upon us, making it possible for us to secure these beautiful beaded bags at away less than their usual prices. As a result, you may purchase them at decidedly less than usual; is it not fortunate that this offering comes along just at the time when holiday thoughts are uppermost with many of us?

Beautiful in Their Varied Designs and Colorings, These

French Beaded Bags at $12.95 and $16.95

—should find delighted owners who might well feel proud to carry them to the theatre, to teas and on countless other "dress up" occasions.

—They're in capacious sizes, and richly beaded in many effective designs and color combinations. You may choose from draw-string types, with beaded handles, or from styles with tortoise shell colored frames.

—All are prettily lined with taffeta or messaline.

—Two groups of these imported bags will be offered on Monday at $12.95 and $16.95.

Aisle 2.

Draw-String Bead Bags At $6.45

—These bags are especially durable, as the beads are crocheted into them. They're of good size, and finished with silk-crochet tops and bead tassels. You'll find many pretty light and dark color effects from which to choose; the designs, too, are decidedly attractive.

There are two very good reasons why house-wives should be interested in this offering of

Blankets and Comforts

—but they are both so obvious that we feel as though any emphasis of ours is superfluous to say the least. One glance at the prices we mention will do more towards convincing you of their moderation than anything we can say and as to your coming needs for warmer bedding, surely you yourself have realized them by now.

It's always best to be prepared—say we, in all sincerity—that's why there will be real economy for you if you take advantage now of these prices.

PATTERN & DELTOR is provided for this BUTTERICK DESIGN

The Simplicity of This

Butterick Pattern

Will Recommend It to the Home Dress Maker

—for not only is the pattern itself simple, but with it comes the Butterick Deltor which shows the dress maker exactly how to place the various pieces of the pattern on the material so that the dress may be correctly and economically cut.

The model pictured may be worked out in contrasting colors of the same material or in blending shades of wool and silk combined.

Miladi, Who Comes Suit-or-Coat Seeking at The Broadway, Monday, Will Profit By Making Choice From Our Last-Day-of-the-Month Grouping of Suits and Coats at Lowered Prices

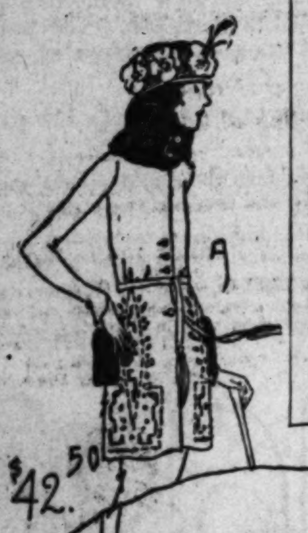
Suits Will be $22.50 to $52.50

—Having studied the shopping public for some years, we think we are not mistaken in our conclusion that the exceptional last-day-of-the-month features outlined in the heading will meet with unqualified approval.

Coats Will be $35.00 and $55.00

—October has been decidedly warm; the average woman does not buy new attire before and there's no gainsaying the fact that up to this time the need of Fall and Winter apparel forced itself upon us with any great insistency.



Descriptions of Suits Sketched

A. Yalama Suit in Sorrento Blue. Collars and Cuffs of Australian Opossum. Richly embroidered. Priced $42.50.

B. Moussyne Suit in twilight Blue. The Collars, Cuffs and Deep Bands are of Slynx. Priced $52.50.

C. Sorrento Blue Velours Suit. Embroidered in front and back. Tuxedo Collar of Fur. Priced $32.50.

D. Brown Velours Suit. Fur Trimmed and Elaborately Embroidered. Priced $22.50.

—But now November is in sight—colder days are upon us—delay in choosing good-looking, warmth-giving suits and coats is not advisable, more particularly when you may do so to such good advantage as will be the case Monday, the last day of October.

Many of the Garments to be Featured Were Bought at Remarkable Price Concessions —others were taken from stock and were re-priced to bring them in line with the special purchases, the entire collection being one of such exceptional attraction that we cannot urge too strongly the importance of sharing in the price-lowerings. Just read the following descriptive paragraphs, note the accompanying sketches, then you'll have some idea of the character of the various garments to be featured.

Coats at $35.00

—well made garments, all, the materials from which you may choose being Bolivia, velours, suedetex and normandie. Many of these coats are beautifully embroidered and collars of nutria, beaverette and opossum add their own touches of luxuriousness. The styles are pleasantly varied; the choice of colors includes navy, brown, Malay and Sorrento blue; black, too, and there are sizes 16 to 44.

Coats at $55.00

—really beautiful models of erminine, panvelaine, moussyne, maryella, normandie and Bolivia in black, navy, brown, marabout, Sorrento and Malay. These coats are trimmed with wolf, squirrel, opossum, beaver and mole, or have snug collars of the material. Their making shows various modish features—bell sleeves, full skirts, lovely embroidery and so on. You'll find sizes 16 to 44.

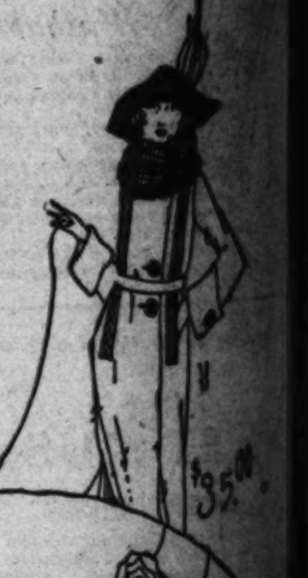
Descriptions of Coats Sketched

E. Brown Bolivia Coat, Tailored in the Popular Blouse Effect. Priced $35.00.

F. Black Bolivia Coat with a large Collar of Fur. Richly Embroidered. Priced $55.00.

G. Light Brown Coat of Bolivia. Tastefully Embroidered, and finished with a Collar of Beaver. Priced $55.00.

H. Bolivia Coat in Blue, with a large Collar of Gray Fur. Priced at $35.00.



Fur Trimmed Suits at $22.50 $32.50, $42.50 and $52.50

—Isn't that an attractive price range? And when we tell you, furthermore, that the models in each of these four groups are regularly very, very much more than the prices quoted, you will appreciate the importance of being "among those present" in the Suit Section, Monday.

Of Veldyne, Moussyne, Superba, Erminine, Mochatex, Duvet-de-Laine, Tricotine and Velours

—are these suits made; they are effectively trimmed with beaver, mole, caracul, slynx, squirrel, nutria and Australian opossum; the colors from which you may choose are navy, brown, Malay, marabout, twilight blue, Sorrento blue and Byzantine; black too. Long tailored lines are represented, as are ripple, flare and box coat effects; lovely embroidery and braiding are introduced, with charming results; so are bell sleeves and Directoire revers. All in all, they are suits of the distinctive type that you'll find in Monday's $22.50, $32.50, $42.50 and $52.50 groups—that we are able to offer them at such prices is, indeed, a triumph of good buying. Come and see if you don't agree with us!

This young man, who is filled with strange enthusiasms, is a descendant of Nebuchadnezzar, the great king of Babylon, as well as a descendant of a Chaldean prophet. He never went to school in his life, yet he speaks five languages.

Wednesday, November 16, W. G. Thorpe, a noted criminologist, will give a short talk on criminology as an introduction to his address on "Unemployment."

There will be a Christmas sale for the benefit of the clubhouse fund after the program of the day, December 7, the club convening promptly at 2 p.m. The bazaar will continue into the evening when club husbands, brothers and sweethearts are specially invited.

The annual Requiem Mass for deceased members of the club will take place at the Cathedral Chapel Tuesday, November 22, at 9 a.m.

Wednesday Morning Club.

Dr. John Hedley of the University of Southern California addressed the Wednesday Morning Club Wednesday on the subject "China, Old and New." Dr. Hedley was a missionary in China and lived six years in sight of the Great Wall. He referred to China as being "gloriously old, strong and vigorous and filled with men of ideals for service and good government."

Mrs. Edward H. Chester, a fine pianist, played MacDowell's "Witches Dance" and Liszt's "Romance," responding to an encore with Wrangell's "Arabesque."

The drama section began the year's study of "Mary Stuart" by John Drinkwater with Mrs. Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith as instructor.

At the next meeting Mrs. Goldsmith will speak on "The New York Theaters." Mrs. C. L. Kilgore will sing and Mrs. Paul Zahn will be the luncheon hostess.

Club Briefs.

Mrs. Shelley Tolhurst and G. Bromley Oxnam will be the speakers at the luncheon of the League of Women Voters at the Friday Morning Club, November 8. This will be a disarmament rally of women.

Mrs. Clayton R. Taylor, chairman of federation secretaries, announces the next district meeting on November 10 at 2 p.m. in the Broadway Department Store. Laura P. Joyce will be secretary of the conference.

Los Angeles Audubon field day will be held in Eagle Rock Park, Thursday. Take Buena Vista Terrace car to city limits where Miss Helen S. Pratt, guide for the day, will meet members and those interested in California wild birds, at 9:30 a.m. Field identification marks of birds observed during the morning will be given at the noon hour.

Mrs. Grantland S. Long entertained the members of the Los Angeles Chapter, D. A. R., at her home on South Vermont avenue Wednesday when a program of music was given by Miss Ruth Ellen Miller.

Mrs. Frank Albion Marcher was hostess Thursday at one of the series of card parties which are given throughout the season by members of the Matinee Musical Club for the purpose of enabling the club to pay all musical artists who appear upon their programs.

Mrs. A. Fisk, a visiting clubwoman from New York, led a brief session in current events under the caption "Questions for Women" at the meeting of the Twentieth Century Club of Eagle Rock Thursday.

The resignation of Mrs. Louis Schirm of the Catholic Woman's Club as chairman of the pageant film committee came last week and Mrs. John T. Coleman of the Woman's City Club has been appointed to take her place. The film "California, Land of Dreams" will have its initial showing November 14 at the Walker Auditorium Theater.

Miss Mina Hollekson, pianist, will appear next month before the Glendora Woman's Club, at the Alhambra High School with the Stearns-Hollekson trio and at the Catholic Woman's Club.

"Blood Pressure" will be the subject of an address by Dr. L W Bowling before the Women's Osteopathic Club meeting Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the new home of the Osteopathic Hospital, Lincoln avenue and Mission Road.

For the increase of their philanthropy fund the Inglewood Woman's Club has gone back to the old fashion of having birthdays. Each member who will admit to birthdays at all is asked to bring as many dollars or cents as she is years old in a plain envelope (so that her age may not be disclosed to the curious) and donate the sum to the fund.

EBELL TO HOLD CHARTER DAY

Tomorrow is charter day for the Ebell Club and the planning of the program has made current again the past activities of this large organization of women.

On a Saturday morning, Oct. 27, 1894, in the front parlor of the home of Miss Parsons on Olive street, Ebell Club was born. Forty specially invited guests assembled and elected officers and a committee was chosen to decide upon a name and these met behind closed doors in that now obsolete but always attractive room "the back parlor" and decided upon "Ebell."

Mrs. W. J. Chichester, the club bride and its youngest member, was appointed to announce the name to the waiting group in the front parlor.

During the first year twelve regular meetings were held and thirty-eight papers were read and discussed timidly. The following officers served: Mrs. H. R. Strong president; Miss Alice Parsons, Mrs. W. S. Bartlett, Mrs. W. G. Cochran, Mrs. F. W. King, Mrs. J. C. Merrill, Mrs. W. Putnam, Mrs. Kate Slauson Vosburg, Mrs. Hugh Vail, Miss Gwendolyn Overton, Mrs. L. W. Blinn and Miss Emmie Parsons.

The club soon rented rooms in the old home of Gov. Downing at Third and Main streets. In 1902, Mrs. Robert J. Burdette built a bungalow at Eighth and Broadway which was considered "way out." Later the club outgrew the place and rented the Cumnock school. Here the club stayed until it moved to the present location fifteen years ago.

Twenty-four of the original forty are left and with few exceptions are serving in women's organizations in Los Angeles.

These charter members who will be honored tomorrow are: Miss Abbie C. Adair, Mrs. W. S. Bartlett, Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, Mrs. Alexander Campbell, Mrs. William Chichester, Mrs. John E. Coffin, Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, Miss Elizabeth Gibson, Mrs. Charles C. Gilbert, Mrs. Cummins B. Jones, Mrs. Frank W. King, Miss Agnes Knight, Mrs. T. T. Knight, Mrs. Dean Mason, Miss A. K. Parsons, Mrs. E. H. Parsons, Mrs. William Read, Miss Florence Riley, Mrs H. W. R. Strong, Mrs. P. T. Swaine, Mrs. Kate Slauson Vosburg, Mrs. Shirely Ward, Mrs. Sherman Wiggins and Miss Mattie H. Wilson.

The club now numbers more than 2000 members.

HONOR BRIDES, BRIDE-ELECT.

Three brides and a bride-elect were inspiration for a beautifully appointed tea at which Miss Ellen Andrews of Lafayette Park Place was hostess on Wednesday when she entertained several hundred guests. Her mother, Mrs. Louis W. Andrews also received. The honor guests were Mmes. Raymond Taylor (Edna Schneider,) Paul B. Hammond (Harvie Wallis,) Marshall McComb (Agnes Taylor) and Miss Elizabeth Barroll, who is soon to marry Donald Cochrane Armour.

American Beauty roses and blue delphinium were arranged in a big basket on the tea table and gorgeous dahlias and chrysanthemums in all the autumn shades were about the other rooms.

Miss Andrews was assisted by Mmes. Edwin Stanton, Sennet Gilfillan, Henry E. Rivers, Ned Dulin, Paul Hoffman, Marshall Andrews, Bryan K. Social Service Workers of City Gather Funds to Carry on the Winter's Campaign.

Social service workers are again busy preparing for the needs of the coming winter. At the Ambassador last Thursday a large card party and musical was given to raise funds for general welfare work by the Council of Community Service of California.

Miss Carolyn Le Fevre, violinist, Miss Lysbeth Le Fevre, 'cellist, and Mrs. Hennion Robinson, pianist, gave one number and were followed by a group of dancers from the Ted Shawn studio. The dancers were Wanda Grager, laughing dance; Lenore Shepard, Spanish; Olive Montgomery, Nautch; Ruth Kadamatsu, Egyptian; Lillian Gunther, Nubian slave dance. Jerome Uhl, who leaves this week to sing with Mary Garden in the Chicago Grand Opera, gave a group of songs.

The interest in this worthy benefit is general and groups of women came from suburban towns. The Downey Community Center, instead of attending here, at the same time gave a card party at its own clubhouse and the proceeds were added to the general fund.

Among the patronesses were Mmes. George A. Ralphs, Isidore Dockweiler, John P. Coleman, William De Mille, Bond, George D. Chambers, L. B. Coats, J. W. Hodge, Loretta Havermale, Gloria Mayne, S. W. WEST VIRGINIA PLANS ROADS.

Better Schools Also Slogan of Southwest Counties.

New Educational Head Busy With Program.

Highway Construction Needed to Help Education.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

CHARLESTON (W. Va.) Oct. 22. Good roads, better schools and a higher culture for the entire community has become the slogan of the extreme southwestern part of West Virginia—the coal counties of Logan, McDowell, Boone, Wyoming and Mingo. Here it was in bygone years that moonshiners flourished in the fastnesses of the mountains, feudists fought their battles without serious interference from the law, and the wayfarer knew no better highway than the rough timber trail. But times are changing and education is exerting its uplifting influence.

Capt. George M. Ford, born a mountaineer and educated in one of the foremost universities of the country, has recently become State Superintendent of Free Schools, and in that capacity has been giving much of his time to the needs of the southwest.

PAY OF TEACHERS LOW.

"Schools in the mountain counties," said Capt. Ford, "may not have made the progress shown in some of the other States, because of our many natural barriers, but they rank high and the teaching staff is good. Most of the teachers have had normal school training, while 30 per cent of the white teachers and 70 per cent of the negro teachers this year attended some summer school. The pay of teachers is still low, but the need of education has made it apparent to all our people that more money must be set aside for that purpose. The State now gives aid to certain counties which lack sufficient funds for the maintenance of their schools at the required level.

"Wyoming county is one of the most remote sections of the State. It is largely agricultural and poorly served by railroads. School officials have had much difficulty in locating schools and providing the necessary teaching staff because the compulsory education law does not require pupils to walk more than two miles to school and the funds available have made it impossible to sprinkle the territory with enough school buildings.

POOR ROADS BARRIER.

"The poor roads in Wyoming also have had their influence on education. But when one has mentioned Wyoming, one has disposed of the worst. Conditions are much better in the four other counties, although Mingo's roads are still poor and there is room for improvement in Logan. Each, however, has under way an ambitious road improvement program. As for schools, both Mingo and Logan are well equipped.

"Most of the school buildings in these counties are of the one-room type, but they are rapidly giving way to the modern consolidated school. There are now such schools in every county and they are increasing as the road program is being completed and bus lines are being established to transport pupils to and from their homes.

"To get away from the stereotyped form of buildings, we have employed an architect to design modern, light and commodious structures."

McDOWELL IS PIONEER.

McDowell county is among the best-developed counties in the State. It was a pioneer in the movement for better highways and its free schools have attracted wide attention. In the county seat, Welch, school buildings are of the most modern design, while there is a hospital for miners which is classed by physicians as one of the best hospitals in the State. The McDowell county post of the American Legion recently completed a fine home, the only Legion post in West Virginia to own its own quarters.

The movement for law and order in the county was shown when two companies of the new West Virginia National Guard were accepted for Federal service. During the recent labor disturbances, 1229 men, many of them leaders in the public and industrial life of the county, volunteered for service in Logan county.

The coal deposits of McDowell are particularly valuable and a large number of new coal-mining companies have recently commenced operations. This, according to Houston G. Young, Secretary of State, "indicates complete development of the territory within the next few years."

NEW RAILROADS PLANNED.

Two new railroads have also been projected into Logan, one to connect with the Norfolk and Western Railroad in Mingo county and the other to connect with the Virginian railroad. A branch line of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad now enters the county from Huntington.

Another item which is attracting general attention is the erection in the near future of a hospital at Logan. The project is headed by Dr. Henry D. Hatfield, former Governor.

Walter S. Hallanan, State Tax Commissioner, has just completed a tabulation showing the assessed valuation of all property in the State. One of its outstanding features is the increase recorded by every one of the counties in the southwest.

Boone county leads the State with an increase in property value of $,180,110, notwithstanding that it is one of the smallest. The total valuation of Boone was fixed as $25,- ,122.

"These increases reflect the remarkable strides in development and growth industrially and in every other way of this southwestern part of West Virginia," said Commissioner Hallanan.

MORE CHILDREN VISIT EUROPE.

More boys and girls have been among the American visitors to Europe this summer than in any previous season.

One of the oldest of the Cunard company's officials, speaking of the recent sailing of the Aquitania from England with twenty-two hundred passengers, could not remember a previous westbound liner voyage in which there were so many school and college children aboard.

In the war-time, when Europe was out of bounds to the tourist, tens of thousands of American families went touring in the family motor car—father, mother and all the children. These parents took their boys and girls over to Europe this year. The American parent, far more than the British, regards foreign travel as education rather than recreation.—[New York World.

Barker Bros.' Better Mattresses Make Better Beds—and Better Sleep

The fact that life itself depends upon sleep and could not continue but for the reconstruction that sleep brings shows that this important process is deserving of the best bed we are capable of buying.

The "best bed" is the bed which perfectly fits the contour of the body. The springs must be of the proper tension, the mattress must be firm and resilient—completely responsive to the pressure of the body. The bed-stead must be firm, substantial and noiseless, so that no unpleasant creaking noises annoy the sleeper.

A glimpse at the contents of the mattress you expect to buy will convince you of the superiority of Barker Bros.' Own-Make Mattresses.

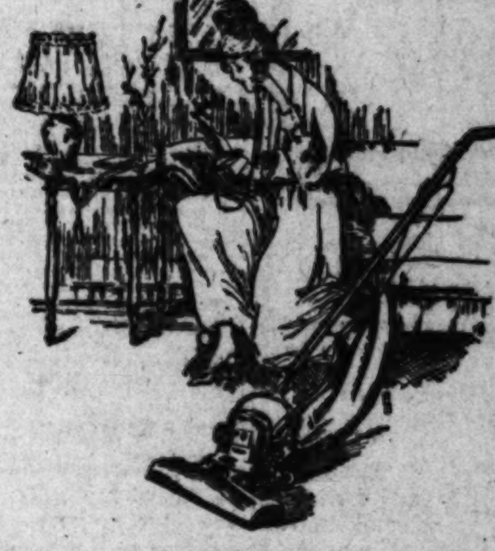
"But the 'OHIO' Will Clean Your Rugs Without Taking Off the Nap



"Why, my dear Mrs. Brown, I have used the Ohio Vacuum Cleaner on my rugs for years and instead of injuring them it has helped to keep them bright and new.

"I beg pardon? Oh! You say you rented a vacuum cleaner once to use in your house-cleaning—and it took the nap off your rugs?

"Why, it's easy enough to see that the Ohio wouldn't do that, because you can put your hand on the brush when it is revolving and see for yourself how gently the brush sweeps, picking up the lint, threads and hair as it goes.

"The dirt itself is taken up entirely by the wonderful suction power that even sucks up the dust on the floor underneath right through the carpet.

"Why, my dear, if you ever used the Ohio you would never let yourself try to keep house without it. It is so easy to run, and it makes cleaning the simplest thing in the whole business of housework.

"I'll tell you! Why don't you call Barker Bros., Pico 1840, and ask them to give you a trial demonstration? They would be only too glad to."

"They carry other standard makes, too, and you can see and compare them there or they will send them out to your house."

START WORK ON LARGE BRIDGE

Philadelphia to Have Longe Suspension in World.

To Span Delaware River fro Camden to Quaker City.

Estimated Cost Amounts $29,000,000.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—According to statements issued by civi authorities of the Quaker City, wor has been begun on the longe suspension bridge in the world.

This is the new bridge planne to span the Delaware River fro Philadelphia to Camden. The plan show the span length near th Philadelphia terminus to be a distance of 1750 feet between towers. The main span of the Brooklyn Bridge is only 1596 feet, and that of the Williamsburg Bridge, 1600 feet in length. The height proposed for the east main river tower is 330 feet above the river. The bridge in its entirety will exceed any other suspension bridge in the world for length by 150 feet, if the present plans are adhered to.

BRIDGE A RELIEF.

This bridge, the cost of which has been estimated at nearly $29,000,000, is both a relief and the fulfillment of a long-cherished desire to business men of the city. It is, according to authorities at the City Hall, one of those things the necessity and practicability of which has long been acknowledged by citizens on both sides of the Delaware River, but which has been delayed by circumstances.

Now that definite action has been taken and arrangements for the progress of the work made, Camdenites and Philadelphians are sighing with relief and asking each other, "Why didn't we do it long ago?"

The State of Pennsylvania and the city of Philadelphia will each pay $[illegible] toward the expenses of building the bridge and the State of New Jersey has appropriated $[illegible].

There was much discussion over the location of the Philadelphia terminus of the bridge. Finally, after an unusually hectic meeting of Pennsylvania Commissioners on July 20, a vote was taken resulting in the selection of the Franklin Square-Pearl street site. The New Jersey Commissioners voted solidly in favor of the site which was at length selected.

SAVED THE CHURCH.

The Franklin Square Plaza is ideally situated in the center of the arteries of Philadelphia traffic, so that direct routes from that end of the bridge will lead into all parts of the city. The fate of one structure with a well-known historical or sentimental value was involved in the original plans. This was St. George's Methodist Episcopal Church. The venerable edifice, called by many the Shrine of Methodism, is located on the site of one of the roadways planned to be cut parallel to the new bridge. The early suggestions were in favor of moving the church to a location more artistically fitted to display its quaint charm. Later, however, other plans were drawn up changing the approach to the bridge and thus eliminating the necessity for removing the old church.

In Camden, fortunately, there was no property in the path of the proposed bridge, and its auxiliary roadways, which was of historical value and interest. The site chosen for the Camden terminus of the bridge seems to have proved an unusually happy choice. The renovations necessary to divert the great tide of human beings and vehicles which will cross the new bridge into the city of Camden will involve neither the forcing of traffic through that city's busiest streets nor long, awkward detours.

The deep enthusiasm which the State of New Jersey feels toward this project is expressed in a most practical manner by the fact that the $5,000,000 bond issue was heavily over subscribed at Trenton when the bids were first opened there on June 28 by the New Jersey State House Commission.

Ralph Modjeska, internationally known for his great list of successes in civil engineering, was unanimously appointed to the position of chief bridge engineer. George S. Webster and Lawrence A. Ball are other members appointed to the Board of Engineers for the construction of the Delaware Bridge.

TO CARRY GREAT TRAFFIC.

Among the most important things planned for the Delaware Bridge by the engineers of the Bridge Commission are six roadways, four trolley lines (two for high speed service) and two ten-foot walks for pedestrians. In this way, all kinds of traffic can be readily served. The grimy, pokey old ferry-boat between these two cities seems to be doomed.

What would George Washington think could he but know what is planned as the twentieth century method of "crossing the Delaware." The cakes of ice which may form in the river in the winter time will not have the power to affect traffic from shore to shore of the Delaware in the future as is so graphically depicted in the thousands of copies of that famous old steel engraving that used to hang on every best parlor wall.

FOR CELEBRATION

While no definite date has been set for the completion of this great suspension bridge, it is generally hoped that it may be completed and in good working order in time for the celebration of the Sesqui-Centennial planned for Philadelphia in 1926. Thousands of tourists to this exposition in honor of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence will find this bridge a boon indeed. Work on the test borings for the bridge were begun on August 18, but the actual construction of the bridge was commenced on Labor Day, when a large celebration was held.

Considerable interest in the construction of this bridge has been expressed by foreign nations. Engineering societies and other organizations in Mexico, Portugal, France, England, New South Wales, Hawaii, Argentina, Holland, Colombia and Peru are among those which have shown marked interest in the report announcing the arrangements for building the Delaware Bridge. It is apparently in imminent danger of becoming the ninth wonder of the modern world. At any rate, it will undoubtedly prove a great convenience to two of our busiest cities.

The Right Instinct.

"Come, Dorothy," said her father impatiently, "throw your doll on the bed and hurry or we shall be late."

"Daddy, how can you?" reproved the child. "I isn't that kind of a muvver."—[Boston Transcript.

IF WINTER COMES. By A. S. M. Hutchinson. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

Mark Sabre was a mute memnon awaiting the articulate promptings of the morn. At school they called him "Puzzlehead." He married wrong—Puzzleheads usually do. He was generally misunderstood, an honest, direct man, who had a constitutional inability to formulate his thoughts and visions affirmatively. These men usually blunder their way through life to the infinity of nothingness as lonely souls. Mark Sabre attains to happiness by the route of unusual climaxes.

Mr. Hutchinson won recognition as a literary craftsman with his "Once Aboard the Lugger—". He has added to his mental stature since then, and in this book gives us characters that are as flexible as those in real life. There are pathos and humor in "If Winter Comes," the title being found in Shelley's "Ode to the West Wind," as follows: "O, Wind, if Winter Comes, Can Spring Be Far Behind?" The winter of Mark Sabre's discontent turns summer in this book and thereby supplies the plot, though there are storms enough and the usual Eskimos of gloom looking forth from the igloos in the turning.

As for the style, though Mr. Hutchinson would probably deny that he is a stylist, it is significant that his word arrangements seem to vary with the subject. In other words, he recognizes that there is the right word and the wrong; he works with words much as a painter does with the colors on his palette, effectively.

The passage in which the author develops the train of thought that suggested the title of "If Winter Comes" reveals him in his most characteristic mood: "Nature was to him in October, and not in spring, poignantly suggestive, deeply mysterious, in her intense and visible occupation. She was enormously busy; but she was serenely busy. She was stripping her house of its deckings, dismantling her habitation to the last and uttermost leaf; but she stripped, dismantled, extinguished, broke away, not in despair, defeat, but in ordered preparation and with exquisite certitude of glory anew. That, in October, was her voice to him, stirring tremendously that faculty of his of seeing more clearly visioning life more poignantly, with his mind than with his eye. She spoke to him of preparation for winter, and beyond winter with ineffable assurance for spring, bringe winter what it might. He saw her dismantling all her house solely to build her house again. She packed down. She did not pack up, which is confusion, flight, abandonment. She packed down, which is resolve, resistance, husbandry of power to build and burst again; and burst again—in stout affairs of outposts in sheltered banks and secret nooks; in swift, amazing sallies of violet and daffodil and primrose; in multitudinous clamor of all her buds in May; and last in her resistless tide and flood and avalanche of beauty to triumph and possession."

An arresting novel, significant of the rising tide of introspective questioning of the what and why.

EDITORS SEEK TIMELY STORIES.

High Literary Qualities Secondary in Current Short Fiction.

BY WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT.

The great short stories of today are not those that have been successful magazine stories. A critical notice of "Without Benefit of Clergy," recently stated that Kipling needed to do no other story to insure his fame. This is not only questionable; but I believe another point is true: If an unknown writer landed in New York with a trunkful of stories of the quality of "Without Benefit of Clergy," I doubt if he could sell a single manuscript at a good price today. The same is true with most of the Kipling stories. "Plain Tales From the Hills" came through and made good for him as a series of Indian newspaper sketches. His local vogue spread swiftly and prepared the way for the public to receive his broad and daring strokes. He forced the magazines to adapt to him, and he brought them the clamorous answer of the whole public in certain cases.

Kipling is one of the two great fiction workmen of the last century, and a story teller of all ages.

Stevenson is the other big workman. His "Olalla" and "Treasure of Franchard" and "Markheim" are great short stories, and are held so in the estimate of editors who determine what the public should read today, and yet, not one of these stories would be salable by an unknown author, as they stand, among the better class of American magazines at this time. They would move from office to office to final dog-eared withdrawal.

Will Levington Comfort,
Whose new novel, "This Man's World," is just off the press.

The big stories of the moment have a timeliness, an adaptation to current styles, that renders them immediately available, though often absurd and diminished in the matter of a few months. O. Henry wrote three or four great stories, but the mass of his work today is as out of fashion of the Gibson portrait with big sleeves. If you open the books of American short-story classics of twenty years ago, the best collections of the McClure and Scribner stories of that bright day, for instance, most of the pieces would prove laughably out of the question, as products of present-day life and art and humor. But you do not need to go back twenty years. Seven or eight years ago "Tillie's Punctured Romance" was put upon the screen and the answer was a laugh around the world. It was as compact and gripping a piece of slapstick fun as had even been been. It has recently been rejuvenated, and thousands of people who laughed the laugh of their lives in the first season of the piece, returned to it to sit in amazed silence. As a laugh-evoker it could not compare now with any of the momentary little comedies being shown any night in the thousands of show houses across the land.

The earth takes all refuse to herself and makes it clean again; thus time breaks down the corking works of the hour, even "ancient and holy things fade like a dream." The short-story classics being studied in the schools today are studies also of how to do it, from the standpoint of a writer coping with the same in this rushing hour. And yet this very writer will push aside the current greats to rest his nestled soul with the art of a big workman of the past, one who has grimly forced his way into the heart of things where styles do not so swiftly change.

A great short story can be done in the terms of today, and still stand up as a great tale a decade from now. Put the genius to write such a thing must be firm and sustained to transcend the pressures of the present hour and taste. It must work in so deep toward truth and outward so firmly in human nature that the product is literally force of spirit and matter. The magazine editors are looking for such stories today, and yet when a tale is submitted that has its single great dramatic point, not once in a thousand is it done in the terms of today. It lacks the splendid rush and abandonment of the mad hour we live in. It moves in the slow terms of the old ideals, if indeed its greatness is not concealed in the wobbling hand and the unco-ordinated mind.

The moving picture, in spite of all its faults, has outdone the imaginations of the most adventurous spirits of the time. At its best, backed by an artist and the right grouping of players, it is a brilliant medium. If Stevenson had lived to see Barrymore do his Jekyll and Hyde, he would have been a thrilled and happy man, for that was an engrossing and almost flawless production. Barry has lived to see his book, "What Every Woman Knows," screened with an integrity and grace and fascination almost incredible. Upon these two pictures the future of the film rests with entire safety, as I see it. They are done; they are dreams come true in matter.

Twenty years ago a man could spend two years in making the circle of the globe and not see as much to astonish him as he may find any night now, in the news pictures at any show. The world is brought to the eyes of the child of today, as it was never brought to the men of a generation ago. For a large proportion of these children, the screen doubtless puts imagination to sleep, but here and there it challenges the heart of a young one to conquer worlds we do not dream of. The war, too, has stepped on the big machine of life we ride in. Youth rides in the front seat and the entity of the age whispers continually, "Open her up!"

INTERESTING BIOGRAPHY.

FATHER TABB. By Jennie McTabb The Stratford Company, Boston.

Father Tabb should be better known. A man who could write:

"O, little bird, I'd be
A poet like to thee;
Singing my native song,
Short to the ear, but long
To love and memory."

Or the following:

"One dream the bird and blossoms dreamed
Of love, the whole night long;
Yet twain its revelation seemed,
In fragrance and in song."

was touched with the divine afflatus. He was the epigrammatist made poet.

Miss Tabb's life is a labor of love and is laborious and lacking in critical acumen. However, Dr. Smith has made up for all shortcomings in the body of the book by writing an introduction that is a gem of prose and understanding. It is to be hoped that some time he will see fit to turn his hand to an extended study of Father Tabb.

The Catholic poet-priest, as is well known, deprecated the usual in biographies. He was a fine scholar, and it is a pity that this book, or rather the material that Miss Tabb has collected, was not placed in competent hands. Not, however, that we do not appreciate the intimate glimpse that Miss Tabb has given us of a fine life, rather that we regard that a seasoned understanding of the art of biography was not drafted into service to round out the whole for those who know or some time will come to know one of the finest poetic geniuses to which America has given birth.

THE CHEKHOV LABORATORY.

Writing of Chekhov in the current Freeman, the Russian novelist, Kuprin, says: "It is true, on the whole, that we know nearly nothing, not only of Chekhov's creative activity, but even of the external methods of his work. . . . His mother used to say: 'When he was still an undergraduate, he would sit at the table in the morning, having his tea, and suddenly fall to thinking . . . , then he would get his notebook out of his pocket and write quickly, quickly; and then again he would fall to thinking.'" These note books, into which Chekhov crammed his observations and thoughts during his most creative periods, are announced for early publication by B. W. Huebsch, Inc., as well as a volume of reminiscences of Chekhov by Maxim Gorky, Alexander Kuprin and I. Bunin.

OLD-FASHIONED GOOD MANNERS.

THE POCKET CHESTERFIELD. A Certain Way to Honor-Wealth-Distinctions, with a foreword by Dr. John Trusler, a backword by My Lord Burghley and an apology by Gordon Dorrance. Dorrance & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

There is a good deal more preaching nowadays than there was a century ago, not alone on religion but on a legion of subjects as everybody very well knows. But strangely nobody is preaching good manners, except a few old-fashioned parents, and these will be rejected at the thrusting into the muddled book mart of "The Pocket Chesterfield."

Lord Chesterfield, who these ages agone has appeared only in somber, classic bindings, appears at last in a gala garb with pink ink on the title page, large type, illustrations by Stuart Hay and footnotes that show where and where not our ancestral social problems differed from ours. It has a foreword by Dr. John Trusler, an apology by Gordon Dorrance, wherein is set forth something of the bibliography of manners, and "a backword" of the ten precepts which William Cecil, Lord of Burghley, gave to his second son, Robert Cecil, afterward Earl of Salisbury.

Fathers who have read and forgotten may care to reread and to urge their sons to read (albeit futilely) the excellent maxims of Lord Chesterfield. For example, it is recommended to please one's guest by selecting the wine he likes best. ("O tempora! O mores!" sighs the editor) and there is a warning against eating with the knife, which has been sounded these three centuries and doubtless will be sounded three more. There has been, however, some progress, for we find Lord Chesterfield complains that "spitting on the carpet is a nasty practice and shocking to a man of liberal education."

It is important to know that a gentlemen will not be "seen at cribbage, all-fours or putt or, in sport of exercise, at skittles." The modern reformer doubtless will agree that there is entirely too much indulgence in putt and skittles for the welfare of our young manhood. "If you love music, hear it," admonished the author, "pay fiddlers to play to you but never fiddle yourself." It is probable that if a certain Hawaiian instrument had been known in Chesterfield's day he would have exceeded the bounds of good breeding in denouncing it.

TALES OF THE SEA.

GREAT SEA STORIES, edited by Joseph Lewis French. Brentano's, New York.

When Noah made his ark of gopherwood and set forth on the first personally conducted excursion of which we have record, he qualified as the father of the sea story, though the chronicle of what happened to Noah is about the most uninteresting of the lot.

Mr. French has not missed any of the old standard sea stories in compiling his list. We have bits from "Westward Ho!" "Peter Simple," "Tom Cringle's Log"—Michael Scott was no seaman, but he has written one of the best tales of the salt seas in English—"Moby Dick" and "Ninety-Three" as well as the expected contributions by Jack London, Morgan Robertson, Cooper, W. Clark Russell and John Masefield.

Of course, we all have our preferences in sea stories. I for one prefer Clark Russell and Kipling to all others, for somehow there is the feel of the sea in all they wrote, and so far I have been unable to interest myself in "Moby Dick," though there must be something in this book of Melville's, judging by the way his first editions are soaring in price.

It may be because of copyright reasons that Kipling and Joseph Conrad are not contributors to this selection. It is a pity, for the epic tales of the latter haven't their peer in any literature. My allegiance to Kipling has already been made apparent.

A SHIPMASTER'S STORY.

A SALEM SHIPMASTER AND MERCHANT: THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF GEORGE NICHOLS. Edited with introduction and notes and concluding chapters by his granddaughter, Martha Nichols. The Four Seas Company, Boston.

Out of an ampler age come these memories of a day when Salem shipmasters sailed the seven seas and Samuel McIntire, that master carpenter, wrought in tracery and line mightily. George Nichols's life was that of thousands of shipmasters who sailed from the now moldering wharves of Salem, but he is one of the few who have left records of the days when the merchant ships of New England were known in every harbor of the globe and the riches of distant climes were used to adorn those wondrous old houses fronting the elm-shaded streets of the town that Hawthorne made famous. The book is admirably illustrated.

JUNGLE SAFER THAN ST. LOUIS.

Africa, even in the interior, where white settlements are few and far between, is safer than America, and a woman is less afraid to go into the jungles with native guides than walk along the streets of St. Louis, Mrs J. W. Dunn, formerly of St. Louis, who has just returned after two years in the "Dark Continent" with her husband, Dr. Dunn, said the other day.

"Because of the work of missionaries, Africa has become safer for the white man," Mrs. Dunn said. "I was much less afraid there than I would be here, with the present crime wave going on. The natives have learned to be respectful and offer a woman no harm.

"I have often gone alone into the paths of the African jungles for periods of six hours at a stretch with several native guides as companions. I wouldn't attempt a trip of that duration in this country without proper protection."—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

BEST BOOKS SINCE DICKENS.

Frank Shay, the book seller and editor, has prepared a list of the twelve best books since the days of Thackeray and Dickens. Doubleday, Page & Co, are gratified to see that three out of the dozen are their publications, "Lord Jim," by Joseph Conrad, and "Casuals of the Sea," by William McFee which head the list, and Frank Norris's "McTeague."

LITERARY GOSSIP.

Book collecting has become one of the principal diversions of a number of Americans, but few of them have been able to let the public in on the pleasures that this fascinating hobby affords. A. Edward Newton, whose book, "The Amenities of Book Collecting," has gone into a second edition, has just given us another book entitled, "A Magnificent Farce and Other Diversions of a Book Collector." The book is now ready for distribution by the Atlantic Monthly Press.

"The Council of Seven" is J. C. Snaith's new novel, published by the Appletons. Judging from what the publisher's announcement says of the book it must be an exciting melodrama. Here is their outline of the plot:

"A power-grabbing newspaper magnate comes to grips with a sinister international group of seven men, whose aim it is by any means, fair or foulest, to defeat his machinations toward war. Crushed between these forces is a memorably depicted young politician, at whose side fights a brilliant woman, whom he loves. The novel is written with every bit of Snaith's skill, and the characters, including old Josiah Munt (well remembered from "The Undefeated") are true creations."

Let us hope the book has some redeeming features.

The good old stories about Walter Raleigh and his pipe, John Smith and Pocahontas, and the like, which have traditionally enlivened elementary histories, are all very well, but teachers and children alike will be glad to hear of an author who has provided a store of new stories about old heroes. L. Lamprey, with a genuine love of historical research, has gone back into many original sources and found dramatic material, which she has woven into delightful narratives in "Days of the Discoverers" (Stokes.) Her book will lend new life to classroom study of the period of discovery and settlement of America.

Lytton Strachey's "Queen Victoria" is now listed among the books most in demand at public libraries. It is one of those "eventually, why not now?" books, so far as those interested in keeping up with the best literature is concerned.

An unusual book, in two profusely illustrated volumes, is entitled "Towns of New England and Old England." It is by Allan Forbes, published by the Putnams.

A scientist who has marked literary style is J. Henri Fabre, whose latest book to be translated is "More Hunting Wasps."

A stirring romance in the style of long ago is "Scaramouche" by Rafael Sabatini. It is a tale of the French Revolution.

The story of "British Heraldry" is told by Cyril Davenport, an English authority on the subject, in a neat volume just published by E. P. Dutton & Co. Starting with the beginnings of armory, the author follows his subject through its various ramifications — heraldic manuscripts, tournaments, shields, badges and crests, genealogical trees, and other allied matters, illustrating each theme with bits of historical allusion or description.

MILITARISM VS. DEMOCRACY.

A Passionate Protest Revealing the Reaction of American Youth to the Rigid System of Military Discipline.

THREE SOLDIERS. By John Dos Passos. George H. Doran Company, New York.

That democracy and militarism do not mix, and from the very nature of their structure, cannot mix, is the thesis of this book, "Three Soldiers," by John Dos Passos. It is a first novel, written in the white hot flame of passionate protest against military discipline as it obtained in the A.E.F.

Its principal defect as a tract against military discipline is that it draws general conclusions from a series of isolated and specific instances. The three men singled out, through the medium of whom the author presents his case, can hardly be said to be in any sense typical doughboys.

What the author attempts to show is that the average American youth, plucked suddenly from the free and easy routine of civil life, is incapable of sinking his individuality into a rigid system of military discipline.

That this was true in many instances, no one who had opportunities for observing the conditions that existed in the great military camps that were established throughout the country after we entered the war, will care to deny. But that these comparatively few men who chafed under the restraint put upon them by the rigid discipline of military life were typical of the entire army, is ridiculous, for had this been true America's influence in bringing the war to a speedy close would have been nil.

Neither is it true that all "loots" were drunk with their suddenly acquired authority, nor that all "Y" men were slackers, any more than that all chaplains were unctious, well-fed hypocrites. That there was a sprinkling of all these types in the overseas forces cannot be denied, but here again the author shows his extreme and unbalanced attitude, for in all this tale of the woes of the private, he shows us but one officer, a major, who seems to have a single drop of the milk of human kindness in his make-up, or even a spark of kindly humor.

The book purports to give the experience of three young men, from the time they entered the training camps in America up to and after the signing of the armistice.

Andrews, for whom there was the least excuse for his attitude, because he was in a sense educated, having spent some time at a university, is made the hero of the tale. A sorry hero, he is, who comes to grief through his own carelessness in leaving Paris, where he was attending lectures at the Sorbonne, without his pass. He is picked up by an M. P., and is held until the "loot" in charge of the M. P. operating in the district arrives. Boiling with indignation, outraged in every fiber of his being, he rushes up to the lieutenant and in his rage forgets to salute. The lieutenant curtly rebukes him for not saluting and then orders the M. P. to teach this private a lesson. The M. P., who is a husky roughneck, strikes Andrews to the ground and hustles him off to camp, where he is put to work with a lot of other men who have been guilty of infractions of military discipline.

Books for Children at The Broadway

"Old Granny Fox"
By Thornton W. Burgess

"Granny" Fox of The Green Meadows taught "Reddy" Fox all the things that clever little foxes should know—and many, many things that little children should know, too (only they are apt not to listen when parents tell them) "Granny Fox" taught "Reddy" all about what happens to little foxes and ducks (and children too) who call each other names and get angry or who forget things or who are careless or saucy or curious or too sure of their own judgment ("smarties," you know.)

Little folks can learn a great deal about the wild animals and their habits, too, and perhaps by getting their point of view, just a little, they will remember in the future to be kinder.

The story is told simply and fascinatingly. The book is printed in large type and has many beautifully colored illustrations. Priced $1.75.

The Burgess Bird Book for Children

A book "chuck full" of stories about all the different kinds of birds, told in story form (just like Peter Rabbit.) Each story teems with interesting facts so deftly inserted in the story that the lesson taught is "painlessly" absorbed by the young reader. There is no formal descriptive matter, simply a series of stories told by the birds themselves. Dr. William Hornaday, director of the New York Zoological Society, says that it is the best bird book for children that he knows. There are 58 colored illustrations of birds. Priced $3.00.

"Lightfoot the Deer"
By Thornton W. Burgess

Almost all the books you read are about little boys and girls and things you already know, aren't they? But these books aren't—they are about the beautiful animals of the Green Forest and things they say and do and think that you don't know at all—and never even guessed. You can learn, though, if you read this interesting book. Priced [illegible]

The Times Literary Page Books and Their Makers

By Thomas F. and Lillian C. Ford

TRAGEDY OF A LONELY SOUL.

In Which We Meet a Man Who, Though Honest and Direct, Was Generally Misunderstood and Unable to Formulate His Thoughts Affirmatively.

IF WINTER COMES. By A. S. M. Hutchinson. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

Mark Sabre was a mute memnon awaiting the articulate promptings of the morn. At school they called him "Puzzlehead." He married wrong—Puzzleheads usually do. He was generally misunderstood, an honest, direct man, who had a constitutional inability to formulate his thoughts and visions affirmatively. These men usually blunder their way through life to the infinity of nothingness as lonely souls. Mark Sabre attains to happiness by the route of unusual climaxes.

Mr. Hutchinson won recognition as a literary craftsman with his "Once Aboard the Lugger—". He has added to his mental stature since then, and in this book gives us characters that are as flexible as those in real life. There are pathos and humor in "If Winter Comes," the title being found in Shelley's "Ode to the West Wind," as follows: "O, Wind, if Winter Comes, Can Spring Be Far Behind?" The winter of Mark Sabre's discontent turns summer in this book and thereby supplies the plot, though there are storms enough and the usual Eskimos of gloom looking forth from the igloos in the turning.

As for the style, though Mr. Hutchinson would probably deny that he is a stylist, it is significant that his word arrangements seem to vary with the subject. In other words, he recognizes that there is the right word and the wrong; he works with words much as a painter does with the colors on his palette, effectively.

The passage in which the author develops the train of thought that suggested the title of "If Winter Comes" reveals him in his most characteristic mood: "Nature was to him in October, and not in spring, poignantly suggestive, deeply mysterious, in her intense and visible occupation. She was enormously busy; but she was serenely busy. She was stripping her house of its deckings, dismantling her habitation to the last and uttermost leaf; but she stripped, dismantled, extinguished, broke away, not in despair, defeat, but in ordered preparation and with exquisite certitude of glory anew. That, in October, was her voice to him, stirring tremendously that faculty of his of seeing more clearly visioning life more poignantly, with his mind than with his eye. She spoke to him of preparation for winter, and beyond winter with ineffable assurance for spring, bring winter what it might. He saw her dismantling all her house solely to build her house again. She packed down. She did not pack up, which is confusion, flight, abandonment. She packed down, which is resolve, resistance, husbandry of power to build and burst again; and burst again—in stout affairs of outposts in sheltered banks and secret nooks; in swift, amazing sallies of violet and daffodil and primrose; in multitudinous clamor of all her buds in May; and last in her resistless tide and flood and avalanche of beauty to triumph and possession."

An arresting novel, significant of the rising tide of introspective questioning of the what and why.

New Books for the Holidays

"NEXT to acquiring good friends, the best acquisition is that of good books."—Colton.

And a very pleasant way in which to acquire them is by way of the Christmas tree.

Weeks of preparation have put the Book Shop in complete readiness to serve the early Christmas shopper. Never before have so many books by famous authors graced its shelves and tables. Never have they been so varied in their subjects. Be the author learned or be he entertaining, if worth reading, he awaits the early shopper in the Book Shop.

Two book events of note will be forthcoming within the next week or two. One is a sale of Christmas gift books at an unbelievably low price. The other, a display of new books for Children's Book Week which begins the 13th of November.

Both these Book Events will be announced later.

EDITORS SEEK TIMELY STORIES.

High Literary Qualities Secondary in Current Short Fiction.

BY WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT.

The great short stories of today are not those that have been successful magazine stories. A critical notice of "Without Benefit of Clergy," recently stated that Kipling needed to do no other story to insure his fame. This is not only questionable; but I believe another point is true: If an unknown writer landed in New York with a trunkful of stories of the quality of "Without Benefit of Clergy." I doubt if he could sell a single manuscript at a good price today. The same is true with most of the Kipling stories. "Plain Tales From the Hills" came through and made good for him as a series of Indian newspaper sketches. His local vogue spread swiftly and prepared the way for the public to receive his broad and daring strokes. He forced the magazines to adapt to him, and he brought them the clamorous answer of the whole public in certain cases.

Kipling is one of the two great fiction workmen of the last century, and a story teller of all ages.

Stevenson is the other big workman. His "Ollala" and "Treasure of Franchard" and "Markheim" are great short stories, and are held so in the estimate of editors who determine what the public should read today, and yet, not one of these stories would be salable by an unknown author, as they stand, among the better class of American magazines at this time. They would move from office to office to final dog-eared withdrawal.

Will Levington Comfort,

Whose new novel, "This Man's World," is just off the press.

The big stories of the moment have a timeliness, an adaptation to current styles, that renders them immediately available, though often absurd and diminished in the matter of a few months. O. Henry wrote three or four great stories, but the mass of his work today is as out of fashion of the Gibson portrait with big sleeves. If you open the books of American short-story classics of twenty years ago, the best collections of the McClure and Scribner stories of that bright day, for instance, most of the pieces would prove laughably out of the question, as products of present-day life and art and humor. But you do not need to go back twenty years. Seven or eight years ago "Tillie's Punctured Romance" was put upon the screen and the answer was a laugh around the world. It was as compact and gripping a piece of slapstick fun as had even been been. It has recently been rejuvenated, and thousands of people who laughed the laugh of their lives in the first season of the piece, returned to it to sit in amazed silence. As a laugh-evoker it could not compare now with any of the momentary little comedies being shown any night in the thousands of show houses across the land.

The earth takes all refuse to herself and makes it clean again; thus time breaks down the corking works of the hour, even "ancient and holy things fade like a dream." The short-story classics being studied in the schools today are studies also of how to do it, from the standpoint of a writer coping with the same in this rushing hour. And yet this very writer will push aside the current greats to rest his nestled soul with the art of a big workman of the past, one who has grimly forged his way into the heart of things where styles do not so swiftly change.

A great short story can be done in the terms of today, and still stand up as a great tale a decade from now. Put the genius to write such a thing must be firm and sustained to transcend the pressures of the present hour and taste. It must work in so deep toward truth and outward so firmly in human nature that the product is literally forged of spirit and matter. The magazine editors are looking for such stories today, and yet when a tale is submitted that has its single great dramatic point, not once in a thousand is it done in the terms of today. It lacks the splendid rush and abandonment of the mad hour we live in. It moves in the slow terms of the old ideals, if indeed its greatness is not concealed in the wobbling hand and the unco-ordinated mind.

The moving picture, in spite of all its faults, has outdone the imaginations of the most adventurous spirits of the time. At its best, backed by an artist and the right grouping of players, it is a brilliant medium. If Stevenson had lived to see Barrymore do his Jekyll and Hyde, he would have been a thrilled and happy man, for that was an engrossing and almost flawless production. Barry has lived to see his book, "What Every Woman Knows," screened with an integrity and grasp and fascination almost incredible. Upon these two pictures the future of the film rests with entire safety, as I see it. They are done; they are dreams come true in matter.

Twenty years ago a man could spend two years in making the circle of the globe and not see as much to astonish him as he may find any night now, in the news pictures at any show. The world is brought to the eyes of the child of today, as it was never brought to the men of a generation ago. For a large proportion of these children, the screen doubtless puts imagination to sleep, but here and there it challenges the heart of a young one to conquer worlds we do not dream of. The war, too, has stepped on the big machine of life we ride in. Youth rides in the front seat and the entity of the age whispers continually, "Open her up!"

OLD-FASHIONED GOOD MANNERS.

THE POCKET CHESTERFIELD. A Certain Way to Honor-Wealth-Distinctions, with a foreword by Dr. John Trusler, a backword by My Lord Burghley and an apology by Gordon Dorrance. Dorrance & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

There is a good deal more preaching nowadays than there was a century ago, not alone on religion but on a legion of subjects as everybody very well knows. But strangely nobody is preaching good manners, except a few old-fashioned parents, and these will be rejected at the thrusting into the muddled book mart of "The Pocket Chesterfield."

Lord Chesterfield, who these ages agone has appeared only in somber, classic bindings, appears at last in a gala garb with pink ink on the title page, large type, illustrations by Stuart Hay and footnotes that show where and where not our ancestral social problems differed from ours. It has a foreword by Dr. John Trusler, an apology by Gordon Dorrance, wherein is set forth something of the bibliography of manners, and "a backword" of the ten precepts which William Cecil, Lord of Burghley, gave to his second son, Robert Cecil, afterward Earl of Salisbury.

Fathers who have read and forgotten may care to reread and to urge their sons to read (albeit futilely) the excellent maxims of Lord Chesterfield. For example, it is recommended to please one's guest by selecting the wine he likes best. ("O tempora! O mores!" sighs the editor) and there is a warning against eating with the knife, which has been sounded these three centuries and doubtless will be sounded three more. There has been, however, some progress, for we find Lord Chesterfield complains that "spitting on the carpet is a nasty practice and shocking to a man of liberal education."

It is important to know that a gentlemen will not be "seen at cribbage, all-fours or putt or, in sport of exercise, at skittles." The modern reformer doubtless will agree that there is entirely too much indulgence in putt and skittles for the welfare of our young manhood. "If you love music, hear it," admonished the author, "pay fiddlers to play to you but never fiddle yourself." It is probable that if a certain Hawaiian instrument had been known in Chesterfield's day he would have exceeded the bounds of good breeding in denouncing it.

INTERESTING BIOGRAPHY.

FATHER TABB. By Jennie McTabb The Stratford Company, Boston.

Father Tabb should be better known. A man who could write:

"O, little bird, I'd be
A poet like to thee;
Singing my native song,
Short to the ear, but long
To love and memory."

Or the following:

"One dream the bird and blossoms dreamed
Of love, the whole night long;
Yet twain its revelation seemed,
In fragrance and in song."

was touched with the divine afflatus. He was the epigrammatist made poet.

Miss Tabb's life is a labor of love and is laborious and lacking in critical acumen. However, Dr. Smith has made up for all shortcomings in the body of the book by writing an introduction that is a gem of prose and understanding. It is to be hoped that some time he will see fit to turn his hand to an extended study of Father Tabb.

The Catholic poet-priest, as is well known, deprecated the usual in biographies. He was a fine scholar, and it is a pity that this book, or rather the material that Miss Tabb has collected, was not placed in competent hands. Not, however, that we do not appreciate the intimate glimpse that Miss Tabb has given us of a fine life, rather that we regard that a seasoned understanding of the art of biography was not drafted into service to round out the whole for those who know or some time will come to know one of the finest poetic geniuses to which America has given birth.

THE CHEKHOV LABORATORY.

Writing of Chekhov in the current Freeman, the Russian novelist, Kuprin, says: "It is true, on the whole, that we know nearly nothing, not only of Chekhov's creative activity, but even of the external methods of his work. . . . His mother used to say: 'When he was still an undergraduate, he would sit at the table in the morning, having his tea, and suddenly fall to thinking . . . then he would get his notebook out of his pocket and write quickly, quickly; and then again he would fall to thinking.'" These note books, into which Chekhov crammed his observations and thoughts during his most creative periods, are announced for early publication by B. W. Huebsch, Inc., as well as a volume of reminiscences of Chekhov by Maxim Gorky, Alexander Kuprin and I. Bunin.

TALES OF THE SEA.

GREAT SEA STORIES, edited by Joseph Lewis French. Brentano's, New York.

When Noah made his ark of gopherwood and set forth on the first personally conducted excursion of which we have record, he qualified as the father of the sea story, though the chronicle of what happened to Noah is about the most uninteresting of the lot.

Mr. French has not missed any of the old standard sea stories in compiling his list. We have bits from "Westward Ho!" "Peter Simple," "Tom Cringle's Log"—Michael Scott was no seaman, but he has written one of the best tales of the salt seas in English—"Moby Dick" and "Ninety-Three" as well as the expected contributions by Jack London, Morgan Robertson, Cooper, W. Clark Russell and John Masefield.

Of course, we all have our preferences in sea stories. I for one prefer Clark Russell and Kipling to all others, for somehow there is the feel of the sea in all they wrote, and so far I have been unable to interest myself in "Moby Dick," though there must be something in this book of Melville's, judging by the way his first editions are soaring in price.

It may be because of copyright reasons that Kipling and Joseph Conrad are not contributors to this selection. It is a pity, for the epic tales of the latter haven't their peer in any literature. My allegiance to Kipling has already been made apparent.

A SHIPMASTER'S STORY.

A SALEM SHIPMASTER AND MERCHANT: THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF GEORGE NICHOLS. Edited with introduction and notes and concluding chapters by his granddaughter, Martha Nichols. The Four Seas Company, Boston.

Out of an ampler age come these memories of a day when Salem shipmasters sailed the seven seas and Samuel McIntire, that master carpenter, wrought in tracery and line mightily. George Nichols's life was that of thousands of shipmasters who sailed from the now moldering wharves of Salem, but he is one of the few who have left records of the days when the merchant ships of New England were known in every harbor of the globe and the riches of distant climes were used to adorn those wondrous old houses fronting the elm-shaded streets of the town that Hawthorne made famous. The book is admirably illustrated.

JUNGLE SAFER THAN ST. LOUIS.

Africa, even in the interior, where white settlements are few and far between, is safer than America, and a woman is less afraid to go into the jungles with native guides than walk along the streets of St. Louis, Mrs. J. W. Dunn, formerly of St. Louis, who has just returned after two years in the "Dark Continent" with her husband, Dr. Dunn, said the other day.

"Because of the work of missionaries, Africa has become safer for the white man," Mrs. Dunn said. "I was much less afraid there than I would be here, with the present crime wave going on. The natives have learned to be respectful and offer a woman no harm.

"I have often gone alone into the paths of the African jungles for periods of six hours at a stretch with several native guides as companions. I wouldn't attempt a trip of that duration in this country without proper protection."—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

BEST BOOKS SINCE DICKENS.

Frank Shay, the book seller and editor, has prepared a list of the twelve best books since the days of Thackeray and Dickens. Doubleday, Page & Co. are gratified to see that three out of the dozen are their publications, "Lord Jim," by Joseph Conrad, and "Casuals of the Sea," by William McFee which head the list, and Frank Norris's "McTeague."

LITERARY GOSSIP.

Book collecting has become one of the principal diversions of a number of Americans, but few of them have been able to let the public in on the pleasures that this fascinating hobby affords. A. Edward Newton, whose book, "The Amenities of Book Collecting," has gone into a second edition, has just given us another book entitled, "A Magnificent Farce and Other Diversions of a Book Collector." The book is now ready for distribution by the Atlantic Monthly Press.

"The Council of Seven" is J. C. Snaith's new novel, published by the Appletons. Judging from what the publisher's announcement says of the book it must be an exciting melodrama. Here is their outline of the plot:

"A power-grabbing newspaper magnate comes to grips with a sinister international group of seven men, whose aim it is by any means, fair or foulest, to defeat his machinations toward war. Crushed between these forces is a memorably depicted young politician, at whose side fights a brilliant woman, whom he loves. The novel is written with every bit of Snaith's skill, and the characters, including old Josiah Munt (well remembered from "The Undefeated") are true creations."

Let us hope the book has some redeeming features.

The good old stories about Walter Raleigh and his pipe, John Smith and Pocahontas, and the like, which have traditionally enlivened elementary histories, are all very well, but teachers and children alike will be glad to hear of an author who has provided a store of new stories about old heroes. I. Lamprey, with a genuine love of historical research, has gone back into many original sources and found dramatic material, which she has woven into delightful narratives, in "Days of the Discoverers" (Stokes.) Her book will lend new life to classroom study of the period of discovery and settlement of America.

Lytton Strachey's "Queen Victoria" is now listed among the books most in demand at public libraries. It is one of those "eventually, why not now?" books, so far as those interested in keeping up with the best literature is concerned.

An unusual book, in two profusely illustrated volumes, is entitled "Towns of New England and Old England." It is by Allan Forbes, published by the Putnams.

A scientist who has marked literary style is J. Henri Fabre, whose latest book to be translated is "More Hunting Wasps."

A stirring romance in the style of long ago is "Scaramouche" by Rafael Sabatini. It is a tale of the French Revolution.

The story of "British Heraldry" is told by Cyril Davenport, an English authority on the subject, in a neat volume just published by E. P. Dutton & Co. Starting with the beginnings of armory, the author follows his subject through its various ramifications — heraldic manuscripts, tournaments, shields, badges and crests, genealogical trees, and other allied matters, illustrating each theme with bits of historical allusion or description.

MILITARISM VS. DEMOCRAC

A Passionate Protest Revealing the Reactions of American Youth to the Rigid System of Military Discipline.

THREE SOLDIERS. By John Dos Passos. George H. Doran Company, New York.

That democracy and militarism do not mix, and from the very nature of their structure, cannot mix, is the thesis of this book, "Three Soldiers," by John Dos Passos. It is a first novel, written in the white hot flame of passionate protest against military discipline as it obtained in the A.E.F.

Its principal defect as a tract against military discipline is that it draws general conclusions from a series of isolated and specific instances. The three men singled out, through the medium of whom the author presents his case, can hardly be said to be in any sense typical doughboys.

What the author attempts to show is that the average American youth, plucked suddenly from the free and easy routine of civil life, is incapable of sinking his individuality into a rigid system of military discipline.

That this was true in many instances, no one who had opportunities for observing the conditions that existed in the great military camps that were established throughout the country after we entered the war, will care to deny. But that these comparatively few men who chafed under the restraint put upon them by the rigid discipline of military life were typical of the entire army, is ridiculous, for had this been true America's influence in bringing the war to a speedy close would have been nil.

Neither is it true that all "loots" were drunk with their suddenly acquired authority, nor that all "Y" men were slackers, any more than that all chaplains were unctious, well-fed hypocrites. That there was a sprinkling of all these types in the overseas forces cannot be denied, but here again the author shows his extreme and unbalanced attitude, for in all this tale of the woes of the private, he shows us but one officer, a major, who seems to have a single drop of the milk of human kindness in his make-up, or even a spark of kindly humor.

The book purports to give the experience of three young men, from the time they entered the training camps in America up to and after the signing of the armistice.

Andrews, for whom there was the least excuse for his attitude, because he was in a sense educated, having spent some time at a university, is made the hero of the tale. A sorry hero, he is, who comes to grief through his own carelessness in leaving Paris, where he was attending lectures at the Sorbonne, without his pass. He is picked up by an M. P., and is held until the "loot" in charge of the M. P. operating in the district arrives. Boiling with indignation, outraged in every fiber of his being, he rushes up to the lieutenant and in his rage forgets to salute. The lieutenant curtly rebukes him for not saluting and then orders the M. P. to teach this private a lesson. The M. P., who is a husky roughneck, strikes Andrews to the ground and hustles him off to camp, where he is put to work with a lot of other men who have been guilty of infractions of military discipline.

"Old Granny Fox"
By Thornton W. Burgess

"Granny" Fox of The Green Meadows taught "Reddy" Fox all the things that clever little foxes should know—and many, many things that little children should know, too (only they are apt not to listen when parents tell them) "Granny Fox" taught "Reddy" all about what happens to little foxes and ducks (and children too) who call each other names and get angry or who forget things or who are careless or saucy or curious or too sure of their own judgment ("smarties," you know.)

Little folks can learn a great deal about the wild animals and their habits, too, and perhaps by getting their point of view, just a little, they will remember in the future to be kinder.

The story is told simply and fascinatingly. The book is printed in large type and has many beautifully colored illustrations. Priced $1.75.

The Burgess Bird Book for Children

A book "chuck full" of stories about all the different kinds of birds, told in story form (just like Peter Rabbit.) Each story teems with interesting facts so deftly inserted in the story that the lesson taught is "painlessly" absorbed by the young reader. There is no formal descriptive matter, simply a series of stories told by the birds themselves. Dr. William Hornaday, director of the New York Zoological Society, says that it is the best bird book for children that he knows. There are 58 colored illustrations of birds. Priced $3.00.

"Lightfoot the Deer"
By Thornton W. Burgess

Almost all the books you read are about little boys and girls and things you already know, aren't they? But these books aren't—they are about the beautiful animals of the Green Forest and things they say and do and think that you don't know at all—and never even guessed. You can learn, though, if you read this interesting book. Priced [illegible]

e GREAT DECEPTION

Bringing Into the Light the Real Meaning and Mandate of the Harding Vote as to Peace

By Samuel Colcord

An unusual writer who writes only in great crises and whose articles, written, whether in magazine or pamphlet, have each and every one fire, and seemed to do something.

William Allen White, four leading university presidents, a conspicuous r of the McKinley and Roosevelt Cabinets, and other nationally men united in a letter to President Harding requesting that "as a ment to your conferences with leading minds" he read the Author's to the Friends of World Peace" (a brief treatise in line with The Deception,) and added that no one was better qualified to present subject.

Mr. Colcord has consented to let Edwin Ware and Charles H. Richards se his book in their own way without interference, provided they within the facts. Accepting the trust they present the following:

THE AUTHOR'S HITS

of the most world famous and important acts in recent American statesmanship (which happened to relate to the peace question,) was un-and carried out in almost strict conformity with this author's advice to the principal actors, as is attested in a letter by an American whose world influence is second to none, and sustained by other evidence. But irreconcilable interference slipped a cog in the wheel, impairing its usefulness. To name it and tell the entire story would great interest.

His "Join the Allies," published in the Outlook and earlier in different in five articles in the New York Herald, shortly before we entered the brought letters and telegrams from all over the country from men of ance, including Roosevelt. Many of them urged that his articles be and sent to members of Congress and the Cabinet and to other leaders. This was done while messages were still pouring in to urge The remarkable influence they later attributed to it will be told in an-issue.

The response followed the magazine publication of his "German-Russian
" A prominent citizen ordered by wire a reprint of ten thousand copies mailed them to leaders of thought all over the world. One was sent author to Viscount Northcliffe with the playful threat that if he sur-

Northcliffe replied: "I have not only survived the perusal, but I am long-the pamphlet." One was sent to Lord Robert Cecil, who four months startled the world by saying in a London speech, "If Germany is alto gain complete commercial and industrial hold on Russia, she can the world forever"—exactly the contention of this article. Three other things happened to this publication, but lack of space forbids the telling.

His pamphlet, "A Supreme Effort to Win the War," published in the crisis is another instance. Its importance was acknowledged in letters from Wilson, General Crowder, Col. House, Senator Wadsworth and the thanks of the War Department, an invitation from Mr. Baruch, of the War Industries Board, to come to Washington, and a Wash-dinner in his honor. But its most remarkable endorsement was in the reversal within eight weeks of the War Department's war program conformity with the program he urged with unanswerable logic—the creation of an army of six million men, four millions to be on the line in France and Flanders, and two millions at home for training and defense.

When complimented on this prompt reversal and adoption of the program the author made light of it as "an interesting coincidence," and "The German offensive did it." Perhaps it did, but at least it showed guessed exactly right, as he seems to have the habit of doing in all writings. What President Wilson wrote was: "I assure you that I appre-to the full the considerations which you so effectually urge."

That pamphlet would make absorbingly interesting reading even now, but the great men of the nation ever saw it. The fine diplomacy and irrecommon sense with which it won the approval and praise of the very whose official decisions it questioned should give it rank as a great dip-paper. Instance this compliment: "We are doing splendidly and that we are. We were doing fairly well last spring and thought we doing all we could, but when the German offensive told us it was a case and death we doubled the achievement. We can double it again if need. Is there the need?" But far beyond its consummate diplomacy the reasoned presentation of an irresistible array of facts which com-the mind to admit that there was the need. There was no impolitic Witness this: "To ask is to show faith in the ability of this administration to do great things." Like fine diplomacy will be found in chapter of The Great Deception That shown in the last chapter will in the mind of any man who himself possesses qualities of statesman-the references to him in letters by many writers as "statesman" and proposals as "statesmanlike."

I could go on with columns of like surprising things that have followed inspired writings. Not all of them could be "coincidences." The story is here told because to hide that light "under a bushel" would be remiss in interesting the public in a book which many distinguished believe is destined to be a signal contribution to the most vital interests mankind, and whose author, while in a great way associated with important great and beneficent moves, in some of which he has been the actual has hid himself from public view.

What others say of his writings and works will be told next Sunday.

SHOWS PROTEST AT DISCIPLINE.

these three men were subjected might have happened, there is little doubt. That such things are concomitants of the military system, their is no denying. But "war is no picnic," as they were often moved to remark, and as long as war is permitted to curse the world, the military system will be part and parcel of it and men will be crushed under grinding, steel-shod heels.

What never seems to occur to the author is that, unfortunate as it may seem, it is the youth of a nation that must bear the brunt of protecting that nation when called upon to employ military force. If the young men whose courage and prowess enshrined the name of America in the everlasting temple of glory, see fit, they can make war, as far as America is concerned, impossible in the future. If they do not choose to do so, the youth of the land may expect to become the victims whenever it pleases those at the helm to steer us into wad.

But this book must be considered in another light, totally independent of its thesis. It is the first document of value to be produced since the armistice that gives us a glimpse of the reactions of one class of doubhboy to army life. As an exposition of these reactions it is a work of art. It is vivid, though not soncise. It is passionate, almost epic in the quality of its protest.

TIMELY GOSSIP ON BOOK NEWS.

The work has over two hundred illustrations by the author.

Arthur Somers Roche's new novel, "The Day of Faith," gives, we are told, a picture of the world as it would be tomorrow, if today we made up our minds to practice what we believe.

With the thousand pictures of Pilgrim furniture and furnishings in Wallace Nutting's book "Furniture of the Pilgrim Century," published by Marshall Jones Company, much interesting comment appears. In the author's opinion no furniture was brought over in the Mayflower, with the possible exception of chests. How this will dash some people's cherished superstitions. The number of Brewster chairs in existence is probably not more than five. Carver chairs are more numerous and specimens are being brought to light every year. Mr. Nutting shows a baby's high chair probably belonging to Cotton Mather. He shows a rare specimen of a milking-stool with a back. But why are milking-stools always shy one leg when they are more in need of being firmly based than the seats of the mighty? Five legs are proposed for new models by the writer on the basis of personal experience. In reupholstering old chairs take care not to have the antique effect spoiled by plump padding. There is an old wall cupboard in the collection with a riddle to it, since it gives absolutely no hint as to which end up it should be hung. Let it be reversed once a year on April 1, suggests Mr. Nutting, who has the antiquarian's respect for the rights of furniture developed to a high degree

The fifth volume of Channing's History of the United States has just been brought out by the Macmillan Company. It covers the period of transition, 1815 to 1848, and among the important subjects that receive scholarly treatment are the settlement of the West, the first labor movement, abolitionism, social and religious changes, the panic of 1837, and the Mexican War. The volume is illustrated with excellent maps.

For perhaps the finest and wisest characterization of the late Senator Knox, one must turn to a book which, although in press at the time of his death, will not be published for a couple of weeks. In "Washington Close-ups" (Houghton Mifflin Company,) Edward G. Lowry says:

"The impression I want to leave with you is of a steadfast, moderate, alert-minded man, keen and quick in his insight, thorough and deliberate in his mental operations, and with a native gift, which has been cultivated, for the underlying philosophy of the law. He is not long-winded; he doesn't chatter. He has a capacious, acute and subtle mind. Ever since he became a public man he has had to be reckoned with. He is an outstanding figure in the Senate today. In sum: An able citizen, at ease and enjoying the fruits of his labors."

What Ho! Now Preparing for Writers' Cramps

The Writers' ball and dinner to be held at the Ambassador on December 1 promises to bring out a distinguished gathering of literary lights and society folk and on that evening many dinners are to be given Mrs. Russell McDonnell Taylor and Mrs. William May Garland have both arranged to preside at large dinner parties. Mrs. Rob Wagner entertained a group of women on Thursday, who are busying themselves arranging the patroness list. They included Mmes. William May Garland, Thompson Buchanan, J. J. A. Van Kaathoven, William S. Hook, Jr., A. S. La Vino, Alfred Wright, Clayton Hamilton, Kate Corbaley, Rupert Hughes and Samuel B. Storrow. Marion Fairfax is chairman of the entertainment committee and Mrs. Rob Wagner is head of the patroness committee. The proceeds of the ball, which has been called the "writers' cramp," will go to furnish and equip the Writers' clubhouse at Sunset Boulevard and Las Palmas avenue. This clubhouse is expected to be the center of hospitality for all the writers who visit Los Angeles.

PLANE TREE A BLESSING.

Citizens of London have reason to be grateful to the plane tree, which beautifies their city more than any other English tree, says the Christian Science Monitor. It is called the London plane. With lofty dignity, clothed in pleasant green, it stands quietly in the parks and squares, a cheering sight to many hurrying workers. Sometimes it is stunted, but when it is free to expand it becomes one of the finest trees in the country. Some of them in Kew Gardens, "Oh! so near to London," are magnificent. Many London children, who know little of the beauties of nature in the country, are familiar with the London plane. It is such a hardy tree that it flourishes in many strange corners of the city. It is strange to think that its origin is unknown. It is pleasant to know that it came to London as an outcast from the great family of trees, and, in return for the sanctuary afforded, has given the great city its best.

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.

THE planting of vegetables is a part of garden work which must be done in proper season, and varies with the years. A well-thought-out plan is needed, even though weather conditions may cause the planting time to vary greatly. Whether the season is early or late depends on rains rather than on other climatic conditions. To achieve success the gardener must be ready to plant in proper season. By following a plan, it is possible to group plants in a manner that will give the garden a pleasing appearance. Rows of plants should be straight; distances between individual plants and between rows of the same kind should be uniform.

The success of a garden can be greatly enhanced by making early provision for transplanting when needed. The following are some that should be transplanted: cabbage, endive, eggplant, lettuce, onions, peppers and tomatoes. The young plants may be grown in seed boxes, or in specially prepared garden plots during certain seasons if they receive proper attention. Care should be taken not to injure roots of young plants in transplanting; this applies especially to beets, carrots, parsnips and other plants grown for their roots, if first grown in boxes, trays or seed-beds. Plants gown in seed boxes must be protected from ants. When the plants reach the age for transplanting, they should be toughened by placing the boxes in the sun for a short time early in each day. This exposure to the sun increases the vigor and hardiness.

As a rule, plants should be shifted to other boxes when the first pair of true leaves appears, to allow more room for development. To shift plants, pry them up in small groups with a knife or a little paddle and gently separate them. Do not pull seedlings out of the soil; handle them by taking hold of the two so-called leaves, or cotyledons; set one at a time in a well-prepared soil in seed-box. Set cabbage, eggplant, peppers, tomatoes, a little deeper than they grew in the first seed box. Water each plant lightly after shifting.

Shifting plants makes them strong and sturdy for transplanting to the garden. If done at the proper time, it encourages the growth of stocky plants. Shifting often saves seedlings which cannot be transplanted to the garden because of bad weather. If plants are not to be shifted before being transplanted to the garden, greater care should be taken to space seeds properly when they are planted in the seed box. Fruiting plants like eggplant, peppers and tomatoes may profitably be shifted.

It is usually safe to transplant when the second pair of leaves appear. Some plants may remain longer in the boxes, with proper care, whereas others should not. See that young plants are not left in seed boxes too long and that they are not transplanted too early. If transplanted before the root system begins to form, the growth will be slow. Plants like beets, carrots, parsnips, and others which are grown for their roots should be transplanted when very small; if left in seed box until the roots form, they should be transplanted with great care, because damage to the root will cause an inferior growth. The young plants should be dug (not pulled) so as not to injure the tiny rootlets, not allowed to wilt, and the roots should not be permitted to become dry.

To plant a seedling, dig a hole deep enough, and see that the roots are not twisted, doubled up or in a solid mass—spread them well. Plant the young seedlings a little deeper in the garden than they were while growing in the seed box. It is a good plan to set small seedlings so deep that the soil will come almost up to the first leaves. Press the soil down firmly around the plant, being careful not to injure the stem. After the plant is set, pour water around it to settle the soil snugly around he roots and to supply the plant with moisture After watering, draw the dry soil around it to cover the wet soil; do this every time the young plant is watered to help hold the moisture and prevent a hard crust from forming.

When large plants are transplanted, it is best to pinch off some of the leaves, so that water will not evaporate faster from excessive leaf surface than the broken roots can supply it. Transplanting should be done toward evening and the plants shaded for two or three days so they will not receive the direct rays of the sun from ten o'clock to late in the day. Plants removed from seed boxes should be planted at once. If they are to be taken away, they should have soil attached to the roots and should be wrapped in paper or cloth. Care should be taken not to crush or damage young plants in packing or in transit.

Do it This Week.

Of all weeds that infest the lawn, none is so hard to control or eradicate as Bermuda grass; after becoming established, it cannot be got rid of except through making a new lawn and carefully removing every little piece of the grass. But there are easy methods of control. With a steel rake go over the lawn now and drag forth the offending grass. All that is torn up and not removed by raking may be cut off with a mower. When you have repeated this performance until it ceases to be a pleasure, sow some cloverseed, water well, and retire until spring. The Bermuda grass, being native to the tropics, will scarcely grow at all during winter, and it will be late in summer before it is again noticeable, for its growth is prostrate and will be somewhat enfeebled through smothering under the rank, thick growth of clover. You may repeat this treatment—each year if desired, but once in three years will suffice to preserve a neat appearance and effective control of the Bermuda grass.

Fertilize Little but Often.

Two cases of damage to flowering plants by excessive fertilization have been brought to notice recently. In one, commercial fertilizer was used; in the other—by far the worse—chicken manure was put close about the roots in large quantities. Chicken manure, fresh from the coops, where winter rains have not lessened its strength, is a powerful stimulant and should be used with caution. There is little use going into detail advising the use of absorbents, etc. The best and most economical way of using manures is in a pure state, remembering you are playing with fire. Do not condense in one place, but scatter well and mix thoroughly into the soil; use a little often rather than much infrequently.

Lilies-of-the-Valley.

The lily-of-the-valley is a hardy plant and so cosmopolitan that it grows wild in the mountains of the southeastern United States, Europe and Asia. Yet few grow it out of doors. It is a shade-loving plant and needs a rich, cool, moist soil. If such conditions are provided, the root stalks will spread over a considerable area. The roots are medicinal, and in large quantities are poisonous, the extract being used medicinally as a heart stimulant. California air is too dry for this lovely plant in the open, but it may be successfully grown in cool places where the soil is retentive of water so that the atmosphere may not become too dry. Splendid plants have been grown here under shade of large trees.

Magnolias at Home.

Throughout the low lands of the South, extending from the Carolinas to Texas, Magnolia grandiflora is found in its greatest luxuriance of growth and bloom. The true type of the tree is erect, with a pyramidal head, and from 60 to 100 feet in height, but on the northern Gulf Coast in Florida they are frequently seen with angular limbs and rounded or flattened tops, decidedly like the live oaks with which they are associated. Some of these trees are beautiful, surpassing the taller form in size and quantity of bloom as well as length and breadth of leaves. At higher altitudes and at greater distance from the sea, the trees are more perfect in form, but smaller in every way, as are the leaves and blossoms.

Gardens for All.

Gardening in California is no class privilege, for he who will may at all times garden, be his purse ever so slender. No one who is able to own or rent a piece of ground but may afford the small expenditure necessary to purchase seeds for both vegetable and flower garden. The small investment for flower seeds may be made to cover many years' production. Chosen with good judgment, a dollar's worth of seeds will yield good and sufficient flower crops for several years. Those blossoms grown and gathered by one's own hands are doubly valuable, for he who buys flowers does so to give them away. The bulk of the flowers lovingly tended and refreshed from day to day are grown in the home garden. Floral gifts, unless of unusual excellence, are admired for a moment and soon forgotten.

The leading tomato-producing States in 1919 were Maryland, 58,033 acres; New Jersey, 36,986 acres; California, 31,410 acres.

Selected Hatching Eggs of Record Ancestry

HOW ABOUT CENTRAL HATCHERIES? BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBURG.

First prize White Bare Neck Bantam cock, Riverside Fair, Phil Lehrbach, Los Angeles, exhibitor.

THERE may have been a time when the ultimate success of the day-old-chick business was fraught with some apprehension and doubt; but that period has long since passed. So pronounced has been its success that the sale of eggs for hatching purposes to individuals has almost become obsolete and the demand for the smaller sized incubator has almost ceased. Where twenty-five years ago the medium sized machine was the best seller, it is only the very large machine and baby incubators that are in evidence—the latter finding purchasers in localities remote from professional hatcheries and among fancier-breeders. At first the eggs employed by the commercial hatcheries were purchased largely at random, often resulting in birds not always of quality either as producers or breeders. As the business developed a more exacting demand in quality of day-old chicks followed. In the light of egg-laying contests and the urgent demand for larger production, the public is demanding better birds—chicks that are robust, virile and capable of good peformance all along the lines. As has already been mentioned, in some sections of the country the hatcheries are using eggs from flocks certified to in the matter of good breeding qualities as well as production; usually such flocks are inspected by the poultry department of the agricultural colleges and experiment stations. This is certainly in the line of progress and betterment.

Where poultrymen are organized along co-operative lines and the organization controls a considerable volume of product represented by a number of individual units, it would seem feasible for such membership to set aside certain flocks of known good performance as sources of egg supplies for the large commercial hatcheries, particularly if located at some central point like Pomona, Van Nuys and Petaluma. Under such a system the purchaser would feel assured of securing good stock in day-old chicks, and the hatcheries of good fertility. Indeed, it is just as important to hatch from selected breeding eggs as it is to grow nursery stock from selected buds cut from record bearing fruit trees. In both cases the object is the same, viz. quality and quantity product. Where poultry farming is essentially a locality enterprise, such an undertaking presents no serious obstacles.

First prize Black Japanese Bantam cock, Riverside Fair, George W. Irwin, Portland, Ore., exhibitor.

We are afraid that there are those in the commercial day-old chick business who do not fully appreciate the importance of a strong ancestry in eggs. It is not enough that they are fertile and hatch a chick; the important factor is an embryo of sufficient vitality to produce a livable and profitable fowl; to reduce mortality in chicks to a minimum. Purity of breed is another consideration. We are not quite ready to sacrifice type for product; what we want is a pure-bred bird that is also a producer. Unless this is assured, we should let the "get" of nondescript fowl alone, even though tagged with a record as producers. That something like this is already in evidence in Sonoma county indicates a healthy condition. To secure stamina and virility capable of producing strong offspring it seems advisable that breeding birds should have good range, be carefully mated as to recognized productive blood lines, exercising care in the selection of males to avoid too close inbreeding; that such breeding plants be situated within easy distance to the hatcheries so as to avoid delays in shipping and handling; that the main breeding specimens shall be fully matured specimens on both the male and female side; and finally that they be given such feed and care as will insure breeding quality rather than forcing them to high production. Central hatcheries conducted along some such lines as here indicated certainly could accomplish much to insure livable chicks and an improved race of domesticated fowl.

A Pasadena Poultry Show.

Fanciers and breeders who feel the need of a poultry show in Los Angeles will find a bit of consolation in the fact that Pasadena will hold an exhibition of fine birds from January 4 to 7, inclusive. The fly in this web and feather ointment, however, is the fact that it will have its geographical limitations. Prevailing local conditions make such a ruling imperative, because (like Los Angeles) Pasadena has no exhibition accommodations for a large show commanding large entries. Hence it will be a strictly locality affair embracing the township of Pasadena, viz. Sierra Madre, San Gabriel, Alhambra, Altadena, Pasadena and South Pasadena. Three challenge cups and several special cups in addition to liberal cash prizes will be offered. The premium list will be ready about Dec. 10, 1921. Particulars may be had by writing to the secretary, H. W. Adams, 865 Lincoln avenue, Pasadena.

The Chick Men and Publicity.

When we first read the report that the American Baby Chick Association proposed to expend $50,000 in advertising the nutritive value of hen fruit and chicken meat in the human dietary, we blinked our eyes and pinched the flesh to learn whether we were dreaming or had missed the trolley in our fowl psychology. Can it be possible? And to think that all our hammering at this idea has produced no response from the snow-clad hills of Del Norte to the sun-kissed mesas of San Diego. In the meantime swelled rice, spaghetti, wheat, roasted cornflakes and canned beans meet our gaze in the morning and evening daily, in the fashion papers and the literary magazines. And yet, eggs are the greatest breakfast food on God's green earth. Strange world, this.

Winnings at R. I. Red Club Show.

In conjunction with the California Rhode Island Red Club meeting held in Pasadena, there was held an exhibition consisting of cockerels and pullets of both single and rose comb varieties. The representation was on the whole a good one, all the classes being filled. The awards were as follows: Single Combs—A. G. Lyons, cockerels, 1 and 5, pullets 3 and 4; T. S. Caldwell, cockerel 2, pullet 7, pen 4; Joseph Fowler, cockerel 3; A. G. Sly, cockerel 4, pen 2; Ferd Heying, cockerel 7, pullets 2 and 5, pen 3; Paul E. Kennedy, pullet 1; Geo. L. Ashton, pullet 6; J. L. Harrison, cockerel 6, pen 1. Male color and shape specials, A. G. Lyons; female color and shape specials, Paul E. Kennedy. Rose Combs—Sands Bros., cockerels 1 and 2, pullet 1, pen 2; C. R. King, cockerels 3 and 4, pullet 2 and 3; Mrs. I. H. Vail, pullets 4 and 5; Mrs. J. A. Cawood, pen 2. Sands Brothers, male and female shape and color specials.

Economical and Convenient.

So widespread and general has become the custom of poultry breeders buying their foods already prepared rather than doing their own compounding that any reference to the subject at this late day seems superfluous. Ready-mixed feeds, honestly made and sold right, are certainly an advantage and a convenience to the average breeder. It is more profitable to maintain the birds in fine condition and center one's energies on production and salesmanship than it is to mix one's own grain and mash foods with a scoop shovel on the barn floor. Some of the larger operators may find it profitable to buy their grain foods in the open market, particularly if possessed of capital to buy advantageously; but the average poultryman is hardly in a financial position to do this. Besides we question its economy. This is an age of special work, and we believe the time is not far distant when the egg man will center on hen fruit; the hatcheries on day-old chicks, the special breeders on breeders and exhibition birds, and the expert on supplying the constantly growing demand for laying pullets ity thus individualizing special operations each becomes expert in his particular line, thereby avoiding losses, wear and tear, and so reducing costs as to enable each to make prices alluring and profitable on his particular line of goods.

The best way for the town or city man to get his poultry stock is to buy it in the fall. Try to get pullets, rather than older hens, and select well-matured pullets, so they will begin to lay before cold weather sets in.

Scientific Poutry Feeding

Means Balanced Rations

A pe fectly balanced ration, one that will maintain the health and vigor of the flock at its maximum and produce an equal number of yolks, whites and shell material, is the first principal of correct poultry feeding.

A large variety of pure ingredients blended into a mash, so palatable to the birds that they will eat sufficient quantities to produce a large number of eggs is the second principal of scientific feeding.

To mix your own mash and have one you can feed profitably, you must not only know how to properly balance your simples, but you must KNOW feed values and be in a position to buy in large enough quantities to secure the very lowest prices on the very highest quality grains. Unless you are a judge of grains and have the proper buying connections, there is no economy in the purchase of these materials at retail prices and trying to mix a mash that will give the desired results.

Scientific analysis of feeds and the proper combination of protein, fat and carbohydrates must take the place of haphazard methods. Hundreds of successful poultrymen in Southern California feed PCA Dry Mash in preference to mixing their own.

PCA Formula Brings Results

That Means Profits To You

Many mash mixtures contain too large an amount of indigestable matter. Why tax the hen's system with this material? If they do not get enough of the egg-making, body-building elements in their feed, they draw it from their body tissues until they get out of condition, quit laying and make it impossible for the owner to show any profit. PCA feeds contain products known to be rich in vitamines which build up the vitality of your flock.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.
Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

The Day of the Date.

DOWN beneath the level of the sea, in the great Salton basin, men of intellect and imagination are pioneering in date growing, a picturesque agricultural industry which promises to become one of the most valuable for certain parts of the irrigable arid regions of California and Arizona of any crops yet tried. The International Festival of Dates, held last week at Indio, celebrated the arrival, commercially, of the American date, a distinctly superior product. It was a wonderful exhibition, in which the Federal Bureau of Plant Industry co-operated with the growers in showing the best products of the American Nile country's' date gardens. Every detail of date growing, from planting the seedling and cutting the offshoot, to ripening and packing the product, was shown either in the festival inclosure or near by in the wonderful date gardens of the Coachella Valley. It was a revelation to hundreds who visited the festival.

More dates per tree, and better dates, it has been demonstrated, can be raised by the growers of the Coachella and Imperial valleys than by the Arabs, Algerians, Egyptians, Moroccans and other peoples of Northern Africa and Asia Minor who have been growing them for hundreds of years. The Old World was loth to give up any of its good date offshoots or its date lore to the Young Giant of the Western Hemisphere, but Federal explorers and private growers have now established the choicest of dates in America's Nile country, and are applying occidental intelligence and energy in the production of fresh dates which delight the palates of those who have only known the stale, sticky imported article. The best dates of the Orient are sent to the markets of Paris, London, and other European cities, and our Americans seldom enjoy them. The growers of Southeastern California, Southern Arizona and Lower California propose to give Americans all they can consume of the world's best dates and have already made a wonderful start toward this goal.

Make It Permanent.

THE California Flower Show and Horticultural Exhibition which came to a close last week, was an exposition well worth perpetuating as an annual event in Los Angeles. Never has there been held in this section an exhibit which has so beautifully and interestingly reflected the progress of the plantsmen's industries, and never has there been a show of any kind that has so appealingly emphasized the possibilities for home beautification in this favored clime. Innumerable persons who visited the wonderful floral and horticultural display at Exposition Park will be inspired to take advantage of the unique conditions existing in Southern California for the growing of ornamental plants and shrubs and if this kind of object lesson could be kept before the public by an annual show, it would undoubtedly result in an ever-growing sentiment for city beautification in the cities and towns of the Southland.

People coming to this part of California from the East are always delighted with the beauty of the grounds and gardens that are pointed out to them by their friends, but many marvel that the beautification is not more general. Thousands in Los Angeles miss the opportunity that is theirs for making veritable bowers of beauty of their homes. Truly the plantsmen have a great mission to perform right at home and it is to be hoped that their missionary and educational work will be continued.

FESTIVAL OF DATES HERALDS TRIUMPH OF UNIQUE INDUSTRY.

CELEBRATING the progress of the newest and most picturesque agricultural industry on the American continent, the International Festival of Dates, held at Indio from October 20 to 23, was one of the most unique and interesting expositions ever held in California. The showing of the Coachella Valley people was a surprise to all who visited the festival and a distinct triumph for the growers who, by hard work and perseverence have established the ancient industry of the African and Asiatic oases in the irrigated desert regions of Southeastern California and Southern Arizona.

That the impressive title selected for this, the first of the annual date exhibits of the American growers, was not an exaggeration of the scope and purpose of the show was evidenced by the presence at the festival of representatives of two foreign governments, as well as of exhibits from practically all date-growing regions of the globe. Gov. Ybarra of Lower California delegated a representative in the person of A. Leon Grajeda to convey the good wishes of the Mexican republic to the festival, and Prof. Veuillet, in charge of agricultural work in French Soudan, and an international authority on date culture, was an honored guest of the management.

The United States Department of Agriculture was represented by W. T. Swingle, in charge of the government work in plant physiology and breeding investigations, and others prominent in the department's activities. Uncle Sam also sent out a wonderful exhibit from the nation's capital, in charge of F. L. Goll of the department's office of exhibits. Included among the representatives of the Federal and State agricultural departments at the festival were Bruce Drummond, superintendent of the government date station at Indio; A. D. Shammel, citrus bud selection expert of the Bureau of Plant Industry; A. J. Shamlelin of the Federal Horticultural Board; Dr. Stickney in charge of date scale federation work; Prof. Pomeroy of the Bureau of Plant Industry; Prof. Camp, in charge of cotton investigation work for the Bureau of Plant Industry; Prof. Barrett, director of the citrus experiment station at Riverside; Dr. Faucett, pathologist of the citrus experiment station; Prof. W. W. Mackie of the department of agronomy, University of Califronia; Prof. Johnson of the department of citriculture, University of California; U. G. Bryon, Prof. J. J. Tornbee and Prof. Crider of the University of Arizona.

The exhibits included practically every variety of date that has ever been given a trial in the Coachella Valley, Imperial Valley and in Arizona, together with a great number of seedlings developed by individual growers and the government stations at Indio and Mecca. The fruit of the seedlings shared in interest with that of the government and private importations. the displays reflecting the achievements not only of those who have labored so hard to secure and import the tested varieties from regions overseas, but of the growers who have patiently bided their time year after year seeking suitable varieties in the gamble of seedling production. Side by side with rare imported varieties obtained from reluctant growers by self-sacrificing Federal plant explorers in the hot lands of Africa and Asia were shown the promising "discoveries" that are occasionally found in great mass of mediocre or worthless fruits grown from seed planting. And with the fine fruits were shown the precious offshoots which are depended upon to breed true types for the future profit of the date growers.

Among the exhibits that attracted greatest attention were those showing the uses to which the date can be put. The possibilities of the date for cooking and as an ingredient for pastries and confections were convincingly illustrated in a special booth in charge of Mrs. H. Metzler. The importance of this exhibit lay in the fact that the date growers expect to be able to find a ready market for all fruit that is not suitable for packing by processing it for the housewife's uses. This will afford an outlet for much seedling fruit which, though of excellent flavor, lacks keeping quality or the attractive appearance to make it bring a good price sold in fancy packages.

THE EXHIBITS.

The festival was held in a large inclosure divided into a main exhibit and a concessions section. The latter included both amusements and trade and implement displays. The exhibit proper was housed under a huge tent left open under the spreading top to give a maximum of comfort under the ardent valley sunshine.

The Coachella Valley Chamber of Commerce had two exhibits, one of dates in the main display and another of general valley products under a canvas top in the concessions section. The date display included both packed and preserved fruit of a number of fine varieties.

The Mecca district featured seedling developments, of which it exhibited some twenty kinds. Included were bunches and packed dates from the oldest seedlings planted by individuals in the Coachella Valley.

The Risher Date Gardens of Indio had a beautiful display of fine seedlings, principally of the Deglet Noor variety, packed in boxes in artistic patterns, for holiday trade. The M. H. Whittier Company showed fancy packs of Deglet Noors and dry dates in bunches. Fancy packs were also shown by the Holmes Date Gardens, Indio; Arabah Farm, Coachella; Rancho Los Pavos, Coachella; the Laflin Date Company, Thermal; the American Date Company, Mecca; the Lovelace Date Gardens, Indio; the Narbonne Ranch, Mecca; the Gillette-Rosenberger Company; the Deglet Noor Date Growers' Association and others. The varieties thus displayed included fine seedlings of many kinds, as well as the Deglet Noor, Iteema, Maktum, Tazizaloot and other famous varieties.

Arizona was represented by a display of several varieties that have done well in that region, the Hayany being featured. Imperial Valley demonstrated its date-growing possibilities by putting in a fine display in charge of Frances Heiny, pioneer date nurseryman of that region, and F. W. Waite, Imperial County Horticultural Commissioner.

The Deglet Noor Date Growers' Association, an organisation of forty-one producers of American dates, offered one of the largest and most interesting exhibits, consisting of the most popular commercial variety in bunches, boxes and in bulk. Several interesting developments from Deglet Noor seed were shown in the way of packed fruit. The ground on which the festival was staged is the property of this association, which gave the festival association a lease for several years for the purpose of showing what American growers and American scientists are doing in developing an American date.

The Gillette-Rosenberger Company's booth was probably the most attractive in the inclosure, occupying a strategic corner, the floor of date husks, and the walls of Persian rugs, while ensconsed in nooks were "Sheik," T. H. Rosenberger, in costume, and the "Persian" ladies of his court, attractively decked in oriental costume. King C. Gillette, joint owner with Mr. Ros-

FLOWER SHOW OVER, BUT SUNKEN GARDENS REMAIN PERMANENTLY.

LOS ANGELES' first Flower Show, which will long be memorable, ended Wednesday night, after being open six days. Despite inclement weather which kept many hundreds from viewing the elaborate exhibits last Sunday, the show was a success from every standpoint. During the show many thousands viewed the living blossoms in the sunken gardens, and the cut flowers and special exhibits in the huge tent.

At one of the sessions of the California Association of Nurserymen, resolutions were adopted to make the exhibits of plants in the sunken gardens a permanent attraction of Exposition Park, and events have shaped themselves since toward the fulfilling of the desire of tse nurserymen to transform the sunken gardens into a floral and ornamental experiment station, which will be placed in charge of the State De Department of Agriculture fof the testing Department of Agricultural for the testing of native and foreign plants. Resolutions were also adopted thanking the Los Angeles Park Commission and other civic bodies for their co-operation in staging the show.

The many silver cups and money distributed as prizes went to a large number of exhibitors. There were eleven sections in the cut flower and horticultural exhibit judged, and three sections in the sunken gardens. Unusual interest centered in the landscape exhibits in the four corners of the sunken gardens. Howard & Smith received first prize in this section, with the Pioneer Nursery second and Paul W. Howard third. In the panel beds, the E. H. Rust Nursery won first, and in the carpet beds Howard & Smith won first prize. Hundreds of awards were made in the flowering plant sections, for the publication of which space will not permit.

There were many praises for O. W. Howard, under whose direction the sunken gardens were transformed into a bower of floral beauty, unmatched in this section of the country. Many were the extravagant expressions used in describing the wonderful variety of bloom and the floral patterns developed. The Dahlia Society of Southern California took great interest in producing an exhibit that was unusual in its beauty.

The sessions of the California Association of Nurserymen were interesting, and replete with fact and aid for the most important group of growers of floral, ornamental and economic stock in the country. The setting from this year's meeting of the nurserymen was the best in the history of the association. The delegates to this meeting and those of the California Fruit Growers and Farmers, the Association of County Horticultural Commissioners and the members of the Avocado Association were well pleased with the elaborate and pleasing presentation of flowers and plants.

EFFECTS OF YEAST ON EGG PRODUCTION.

Preliminary tests have been carried on by Federal poultry specialists in the use of yeast as a feed for laying hens, the theory being that this material was extremely high in vitamines, and particularly valuable in the dietary of laying hens. In the initial test, the yeast was dissolved in warm water, added to the mash, and the mixture allowed to stand for twenty-four hours until the yeast had thoroughly permeated the feed. While the hens ate this mash fairly well, with the result that their egg production was slightly increased for a short period, apparently they soon tired of the mixture, and did not consume it with a relish. Subsequently, decreased egg production resulted, and the mortality among the fowls which received the yeast was noticeably higher than in the pens not receiving it.

It is thought that this mortality was due to changes occurring in the mash which developed while it was being held in a moist condition for the twenty-four-hour period previous to feeding, rather than as a result of the yeast itself. The moist mash was discontinued, and the experimental pens were put on a dry mash containing 1 per cent of dried fresh yeast. The condition of the flock improved materially with this change, and the birds soon resumed their normal appearance, with fair egg production.

However, the egg yield was not greater than that from check pens without the yeast. Thereafter, 3 per cent of yeast, which was air and sun-dried and fed in a ground condition, was used in the mash, without any perceptible increase in egg production. These tests in the feeding of yeast were not conducted on a very extensive scale, nor long enough to determine thoroughly its value.

Date Festival.

enberg of the company's ranch, was a visitor during the festival.

L. J. Yost, C. L. Edwards, F. M. Harvey, W. D. Gibbs, Melvin Bisbee, E. P. Carr and the Sclater Ranch Company combined on one of the best exhibits of the show, that of the Oasis district. Here were shown not only dates, but excellent grapefruit, of which there are 120 acres in the Oasis district, almonds, pomegranates and raisins.

The Brumwell Date Ranch booth contained an interesting collection of seedling and offshoot dates, and was festival headquarters of the Valley Packing Association of Coachella.

Cook's Nursery of Yuma, Ariz., exhibited offshoots and palms in tubs.

The exhibit of the Narbonne ranch, one of the most extensive ranches of the Coachella Valley, was in charge of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Gridley, the former manager of the ranch. Various kinds of dates were shown in boxes, jar and bulk, including some of the finest fruit produced this season. This company has fifteen acres in producing date palms and conducts its own packing-house.

The Department of Agriculture exhibit occupied the center of the big tent. It included a comprehensive display of fruit produced at the government stations at Indio and Mecca, including both seedling and pedigreed dates. Notable in the fruit display was a bunch of Deglet Noors from the Mecca gardens weighing eighty-three pounds. Photographs of date orchards in foreign lands were shown along with products of the date palm collected in Egypt, Arabia, Morocco and other date-growing countries. These by-products of the date included rope made of the fiber of the palm leaves, crates made of the midribs of the leaves and used for the shipping of offshoots and products made of the "leef" or fiber that grows around the trunk.

Watermelon Culture.

which seemed more important—baseball, for instance.

The seed are planted about eight or ten feet apart in the rows, and covered about two inches with soil. When the plants are well established, they are thinned out to two or three to the hill.

In dry farming, the seed are planted sixteen feet apart in rows spaced eighteen feet apart. A furrow about three inches deep is drawn, and the seed are planted in hills. This furrow is filled in gradually as the plants grow. The vines are left to wander where they will, after they begin to spread. The Klondyke melon will cover the intervening space thickly, and bear many tons to the acre.

Some growers plant very early, and cover the small plants with tissue paper, to protect them from the frost. This is done particularly in districts where there is a danger from late frosts. Cantaloupes and cucumbers are afforded the same protection.

During the height of the watermelon season, the local markets will have many tons on hand at once. A large percentage of the county growers rent stalls on the market, and put down two or three tons on straw, with a salesman in charge of them. Others sell to yard dealers, who put them down in the same way. It is from this source that the peddler and the smaller retailers draw their supplies. The shipper usually buys in the field, or contracts for an entire crop before they are picked.

A few words about selection of seed. The local seed houses are very careful about selecting watermelon seed, and contract only with reliable growers. Each raises a certain variety of melon for seed. If one contracted for all varieties and grew them in the same field, a wonderfully bad mixture would be the result. The seed men are careful to contract with a grower who will not sell off the larger melons, and save the smaller for seed. If this were done, the various types could not be kept up to standard.

The development of watermelon types in Southern California has been remarkable, and a seedless watermelon, brought out in Southern California, would be only in keeping with our progressive methods.

Farm News of the Great Southwest.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

YUCAIPA.—It has become necessary to revise the early estimates as to the size of the apple crop in the Yucaipa Valley. Few growers have estimated their crops sufficiently high and the result is that the total yield will run 100,000 packed boxes more than the expected 700,000 to 800,000 boxes. It is believed now that the total will be close to a million boxes, or about 1500 cars. The packing-houses have been taxed to their greatest capacity to take care of the fruit, and there is not a house but has had apples piled up as high as they would go. Practically all of the houses have for three weeks been working day and night shifts in an effort to take care of the fruit. Fortunately the nights have been cooler for a week or so and the fruit has been ripening more slowly, but despite this, it has been necessary to put some fruit in cold storage loose and to pack it later. It is said that next year it will take more than the seven existing packing-houses to handle the fruit.

TRIES NEW METHOD.

RICHGROVE.—A. V. Taylor of Hanford, who owns considerable land near Richgrove, is demonstrating an entirely new method of growing a vineyard, as concerns irrigation. The vines were planted in the spring and after the first irrigation, surface irrigation was entirely discontinued. Since then all the moisture the vines have had, until a few days ago, was from subirrigation, this being accompanied by thorough cultivation. There is almost a perfect stand and the vines are of uniform size. They have not made the same cane growth as vines with more moisture, but Mr. Taylor claims he has forced a stronger root system and that the stronger top growth will come next spring. This dust mulch and conservation of moisture theory is that followed by Hardy W. Campbell, dry farming expert, for many years in Colorado, and which a number of Richgrove grain farmers are following.

HOG PRICES LOWER.

TULARE.—The price of hogs at the regular hog auction recently held here under the auspices of the Farm Bureau Marketing Association was slightly lower than at the last previous sale, there being a difference of 20 cents in the top prices received. Many buyers were present and bidding was brisk. Forty consigners received $9398.57 from the sale. Top price was $9.75.

ENLISTED AGAINST PESTS.

REDLANDS.—Walter B. Hadley, who has been deputy horticultural commissioner for this district for some time, has just received an appointment as spray quarantine guardian for San Bernardino county from the State Horticultural Commissioner. This gives San Bernardino county two guardians, John P. Coy, the county commissioner, and Mr. Hadley. Practically all the trees, potatoes and other stock shipped into the county for the farmers comes to Redlands or San Bernardino, and Mr. Hadley will now have full authority to seize any shipment that is infested. He says that every carload of potatoes shipped in from Idaho now is inspected carefully in a determined effort to keep out the alfalfa weevil. Potatoes are often shipped in cars in which alfalfa has been shipped and the danger of the weevil being brought into the alfalfa fields of the county in this manner is great. Mr. Hadley also looks forward to a busy time in another month or so, for there will be heavy shipments of fruit trees for the Yucaipa section. It is estimated that close to a thousand acres will be planted in Yucaipa this year and all the trees must be carefully inspected so that various diseases may not get started in this valley.

PRICES AT RIALTO.

RIALTO.—Thirty-two cars of grapes have been shipped out of Rialto this season, and while figures on returns are not yet obtainable, it is understood that good prices are being obtained. The grape crop in this vicinity was heavy and of finest quality. There was some damage to the crop from the rain, but the damage is not to be considered in comparison with the great benefit accruing to the citrus groves. Most of the Rialto citrus houses have completed the season's shipments, but the Rialto Packing Company is still sending out Valencias. Other miscellaneous varieties shipments have been completed, with an average price per box f.o.b. Rialto, for all grades and sizes received as follows: bloods, $1.95; navels, $2.33; seedlings, $2.34; Mediterranean Sweets, $2.66; St. Michaels, $2.73; grapefruit, $2.80; lemons, $3.46. The Rialto Heights Association reports for Washington navels the highest average price of any of the associations in the San Bernardino County Fruit Exchange. The season's average for everything shipped, all sizes and all grades, per packed box, f.o.b. Rialto, being $2.78, which is 40 cents per box above the price received by any other house in the country. Other averages, per packed box, f.o.b. Rialto for shipments sent out by the Rialto Heights Association are Mediterranean Sweets, $2.35; St. Michaels, $2.98; grapefruit, $2.52; Valencias, $3.01.

EXPECTS BIG CROP.

TERRA BELLA.—C. W. Burtner, caretaker for 100 acres of citrus groves in the Halbert tract, is anticipating the largest crop of navel oranges ever taken from these groves. Every acre in the properties will show a decided increase over last year, he says. On the W. S. Wilson ten acre orchard he has placed 225 props to keep the limbs from breaking down. and he will prop many trees in groves owned by the Misses Cook, the Hickmans and Prof. H. E. Owen. The Wilson grove yielded around 800 boxes in 1919, 1200 boxes last year, and this year's yield is estimated above 2000 boxes. Other properties show proportionate increase.

EARLY POMEGRANATE.

SPRINGVILLE.—A. W. Patton, who has been conducting experiments at his ranch near here for fourteen years, is displaying a new product this fall in the pomegranate line. Mr. Patton has a young tree some distance from his pomegranate orchard which he has watched closely. This season it produced a good quality, rosy-red, well-formed fruit which is said to have turned to the mature color and to have ripened fully a month earlier than any known variety of pomegranates. The fruit is of excellent flavor and is attracting considerable attention. Chester A. Doyle, field man for the Stewart Fruit Company, states that the fruit's earliness should make it a leader on the market and insure a top price. Mr. Patton intends to propagate from the tree and make a specialty of the product.

SUCCESS FARM CENTER.

PORTERVILLE.—Indicative of the popularity of the farm bureau movement in this section is the organization of a farm center for the Success district, with Dowell Washburn, owner and manager of the Peacock Groves, president, and P. A. Morrison, secretary and treasurer. The organization meeting was held at the Tula River Packing House, at Success. County Farm Adviser C. M. Conner talked on "Conservation of Water in the Orchard." Mr. Conner restricted his remarks almost entirely to a discussion of the use of the available water supply of the soil by the tree and the conservation of that supply. Other topics discussed were: subsoiling, furrow application of manure, irrigation practice and the effect of surplus water on different types of soils.

PIMA LOOKING UP.

BRAWLEY.—The price of Pima Egyptian cotton is steadily rising, and the staple is now bringing 42 cents for No. 2 grade, an increase of 14 cents in two months. Most of the Pima growers in Imperial Valley are holding their cotton for a still better price.

ALFALFA MEN ORGANIZE.

BISHOP.—Alfalfa growers of Inyo county have organized a co-operative marketing association, and are planning to ship their hay to eastern markets by water.

GROWERS PREPARING FOR BIG NAVEL CROP.

REDLANDS.—Redlands, the largest navel producing center in Southern California, will have one of the largest crops of navel oranges in the history of the industry here, providing there is no bad weather to spoil the crop. The fruit has now reached a size where it is possible to tell something about the amount on the tree and the early estimates of the growers and packing-house men are being revised. It is believed that the crop will run close to 5000 cars for the Redlands district, which is composed of Crafton, Redlands and Bryn Mawr. The fruit is heavy throughout the trees in most of the groves, the amount on the inside of the trees having shown up in the past few weeks. The weather so far this fall has been almost ideal and the cold nights and warm days mature the oranges just at the right time. The fruit has shown a big growth in the past month and in some groves the first tinge of color can be seen.

There is great activity in the packing-houses here now, as the box makers are hard at work making boxes of the shook shipped during the summer months. The label men are also at work putting labels on the boxes, and the machinery in most of the packing-houses is being overhauled for the heaviest run of several years. It is said that there has been no crop like this season's since 1913, when the yield was the heaviest in the history of the industry all through the south. Shippers are already beginning to work with the railroads to insure plenty of cars for sending the fruit to the eastern markets. During the summer months the groves have been sprayed or fumigated and the results, which are now being checked by the State horticultural inspectors, seem to have been good.

ENTERS COTTON AT FAIR.

BLYHE.—H. M. Pope, local cotton raiser, has shipped samples of Palo Verde Valley cotton to the Texas State Fair at Dallas to compete with the best cotton produced in the South. The 1921 cotton crop will be a good one, reports from many parts of the soil not only effects leaf development, menced and pickers are at work everywhere.

BY ROBERT T. LYANS.

At a meeting of exhibitors at the recent Riverside Fair goat show it was decided to hold a "get-together" goat breeders' meet-drawing to a close, ended with the contest flock averaging 34.3 per cent, bringing the average production per hen for the 334 days, mountain country. A number of exhibits will also come from far Eastern States and Middle West points, and Western Canada will have its usual substantial representation. A chicken and rabbit division has been added to the big live-stock show this year, with a $2,500 premium list. The first entry for the 1921 Pacific International was made by A. L. HORSES.

Geo. P. Thompson
BREEDER OF

BANTAMS FEATURE OF BIG POULTRY SHOW.

The poultry section of the 1921 Southern California Fair at Riverside was the largest and best that has yet been seen at this annual exhibit. More than 1700 birds in all were cooped by 159 exhibitors under the big tops given over to this division, and the displays were of a high quality throughout. The bantam show was probably the largest ever held on the Coast.

More than 500 of the midget fowls were shown, thirty-seven varieties in all being on display. The Buff Cochin exhibit was particularly noteworthy, over 100 of these little birds being entered. Seventy-five games were shown. An exhibit of "Bare Necks" attracted much attention. The interest in the bantam section was attested by the fact that entries were received from Oregon and Utah, as well as from all parts of California.

The Rhode Island Reds comprised the strongest class in the regular divisions, which were unusually well balanced as to breed exhibits. There was also a good showing of Buff Orpingtons, a fowl that has not been seen so much at recent shows, and of Cornish. Visitors to the show were much interested in a display of a dozen Jersey Giants, a breed now coming in for much discussion, and recently brought to California from the East.

The turkey show was one of the largest yet assembled on the Coast, sixty of the big birds being on display. Fifty ducks and geese were cooped, and there were around 150 pigeons. The rabbit and cavy section was well filled, there being 200 of the former and about 150 of the latter animals on display.

The success of the show reflected great credit upon the manager, E. I. Hammond, of Riverside, through whose efforts the Riverside poultry exhibit has been made one of the leading features of the West. The judges in the different classes were: W. S. Russell, San Leandro, poultry; Fritz Thott, Glendale, and George England, Inglewood, bantams; James Smith, Los Angeles, pigeons, and Lewis Salisbury, Pasadena, rabbits and cavies.

[illegible] Cal., who brings an [illegible] string of his milking Shorthorns to the Pacific International each year, will bring an unusually large show-herd this year. Bob Davis, of Rio Frio, Texas, has written that a big shipment of blue-ribbon Angora goats will be sent from the Lone Star State to compete with California and Northwest Angoras, and D. O. Brant, of Los Angeles, will ship twenty head of Guernseys from the Brant Rancho at Owensmouth. There will be many entries in the Holstein classes. Among the large show herds of this breed will be those of William Bishop of Chimicum, Wash., and the Hollywood and Carnation Farms, Seattle. Among the entries from more distant points are thirty-three head of Ayrshire cattle from the Alta Crest Farms at Spencer, Mass., which are now en route to the Coast by way of the National Dairy Show at St. Paul. These Ayrshires will be shown at San Francisco at the California National Livestock Show, October 23-30, and will be sent on to Portland by special train which will bring livestock exhibits to the Pacific International on passenger train time, so that the animals may be rested and conditioned for the opening of the stockshow. Adam Seitz of Waukesha, Wis., will ship a show-herd of Ayrshires to the Pacific International.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the San Joaquin County Fair Association, held in Stockton, on September 28, it was decided by unanimous vote of the directors to have the San Joaquin county fair precede the State Fair in 1922. It was decided to open the fair on Thursday, August 24, and close on August 30. By having the fair on these dates, the stockmen, horsemen and other exhibitors, who also exhibit at Sacramento, will have two days' time in which to remove their stock and exhibits from Stockton to Sacramento. A great many of the horsemen and stockmen, also the exhibitors, have expressed themselves as being very favorable to these dates.

F. S. Borror & Son, Tipton, Cal., who are joint owners with W. J. Higdon, Tulare, of the $9250 bull, Sir Aaggie Mead, recently sold two registered Holstein cows for $1000 to the Tri-county Tubercular Hospital, at Madera. H. G. Stahl, manager of the hospital herd, reports that he visited herds in five counties before making his selection.

Gerben Abbekerk Maid, the twice 34 pound cow whose 100 descendants sold for over $50,000 in the Rosamaines Rancho dispersal sale at Riverside last fall, is now on strictly official test (yearly) at Sycamore Acres, owned by Robert N. Clapp, Nuevo. In the first 120 days on test she has to her credit 440.05 pounds butter and 13,406.3 milk, an average of over 100 pounds milk per day. The grand old matron is now ten years old and has ten living calves, six females and four males. The last calf, a bull, sold at 8 weeks of age for $2000 to the noted author, Peter B. Kyne, and his partner, O. H. Cash, Sierra Vista Stock Ranch, Perris.

A reduction in railroad rates on cattle and calves of 20 per cent became effective September 30. A minimum rate, however, is established of $118 per thirty-six feet car.

EASTERN CALIFORNIA PROGRESS SHOWN IN INYO COUNTY FAIR.

BY J. P. HERTEL.
County Agent, Inyo County.

BISHOP.—The Inyo County Fair held at Bishop on October 4, 5 and 6 was probably the largest and best gathering of agricultural displays ever assembled in Eastern California. From many standpoints it was a unique fair, being more typically agricultural than the average California fair, and all the exhibits coming from Inyo county alone. It was presented through the efforts of the Inyo County Farm Bureau, and was underwritten by the American Legion post of Bishop. The former service boys had charge of the entertainment, and furnished saddle and harness races, baseball and football games, and general and live-stock parades. The farmers had charge of assembling the stock, and the agricultural products, grooming and showing them, and they did this in a manner that reflects credit upon their ability along these lines.

The fair opened on Tuesday at 10 a.m. with a large parade on the streets of Bishop, including about twenty-five floats, led by a "tank," constructed by the members of the American Legion. The floats represented the schools, industries, lodges and other organizations, and a grand prize was given for the best one.

After this came a parade of the kiddies, which, in the opinion of many, surpassed the first parade. The youngsters led goats and pulled decorated wagons down the street. The judges had a difficult time to decide among them.

After the parades almost everybody went to the fair grounds, where the dairy and beef cattle were judged by Prof. E. H. Hughes of the Animal Husbandry division of the University Farm at Davis. Wednesday morning, he judged the horses, hogs and sheep, and upon leaving he commended the people highly, especially on their horses, beef cattle and hogs. There was a good representation in each division, and strong competition in the various classes, thirty-one horses, thirty-five beef cattle, forty-four dairy cattle, forty-three hogs, thirty sheep and 205 head of poultry being shown.

One of the features of the fair was a three-day butterfat contest, in which a cow owned by J. Markham of Bishop won, with 164 pounds of milk and 4.64 pounds of butterfat for the three days. Another feature was a live-stock judging contest engaged in by the boys, in which George Linscott of Laws received first prize and Arthur Schober of West Bishop, second prize.

The sweepstakes for stallions of all ages and all breeds was won by William Rowan with his two-year-old Percheron stallion Matley, sired by Matieaux, that won first prize for two-year-olds at the P.P.I.E. in 1915, at San Francisco.

The sweepstakes in the beef breeds was won by Village Crest 2nd, a three-year-old Shorthorn bull, owned by Watterson Bros., Inc., Bishop. The animal was bred by G. W. Bird, Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, and his full brother as a calf was sold for $3500.

The sweepstakes prize in the dairy division was awarded to the Holstein bull, Segis Beets Alcartra King, owned and shown by C. E. Johnson of West Bishop. This bull was bred by E. C. Schroeder of Moorehead, Minn., and has wonderful production as well as type.

The sweepstakes in the hog division over all ages and breeds was awarded to the Duroc-Jersey boar, Thompson's Pilot Defender, owned by C. T. Thompson of Bishop. This animal was grand champion at the Los Angeles Live Stock Show in 1919.

The City Market of Bishop paid 25 cents a pound for the best pen of five fat lambs, in which three pens competed, and Gerald McLeod of Bishop won the prize.

The Line-Street Market at Bishop paid a premium of 25 cents a pound for the best pen of three fat barrows, which prize was won by C. T. Thompson of Bishop.

The poultry was judged by George Griffin, and the classes represented were, Barred Rocks, White and Silver Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds, Light Brahmas, Speckled Sussex, Leghorns, Anconas, Silkies and Bantams. There were also Bronze Narragansett, Bourbon Red, and White Holland turkeys, as well as Embden geese and White Pekin, Rouen and Muscovy ducks. A special prize, given for the largest spring turkey, was won by Mrs. J. G. Bell of West Bishop.

The horticultural exhibits were judged by County Horticultural Commissioner John Dixon, and among the apples represented were Ben Davis, Arkansas Blacks, Delicious, Winesaps, Grimes Golden, Rome Beauties, Spitzenburgs and King Davids. It was a wonderful display and proved that there is variety as well as quality in Inyo orchards. Some peaches were displayed that had been kept in cold storage for six weeks. The grape display also was very attractive, and N. A. McDole received a special prize for the best display in this division.

In the agricultural display, Indian corn was one of the outstanding features. Wonderfully fine potatoes were also shown, as well as almost every other variety of vegetable. A special prize awarded for the best agricultural display from one farm was won by J. L. Gish of Laws. A special prize given to the boy member of the corn club who showed the best twenty ears of corn was won by Robert Gillespie. In the boys' corn judging contest, Arthur Schober won the prize as the best judge.

The woman's department was a place of much interest, some excellent fancy work being shown. The culinary department had many entries. Mrs. J. Rogers won $10 for the best lemon pie. The flower show was very attractive, roses, dahlias, asters and other flowers, which grow abundantly in Owens Valley soil, being attractively shown.

There was also an excellent mineral display, which appeared to show all the mineral elements under the sun, and permitted a glimpse of the extensive mining industry of Inyo county.

There were some games and a few races for amusement, but there were no carnivals, no side shows and no gambling. The people came to learn the best that agriculture could teach them, and they went home feeling that they had both enjoyed and profited by the fair. The attendance was approximately 2000 daily.

COMMISSIONER WARNS OF PUNCTURE VINES.

EL CENTRO.—A noxious weed, the caltrop, or caltrap, so called because its thorny seed pod resembles an instrument of that name with four iron points so disposed that when it lies on the ground one point always projects upward, has suddenly come into prominence here. It has been made the subject of a report to the County Supervisors by County Horticultural Commissioner Waite, who says:

"Considerable publicity has been given the weed known as puncture vine, due to the fact that it punctures tires occasionally. This weed grows close to the ground, spreading out in all directions from its center and contains many thornlike seed pods, known as caltrops. This weed is an annual and clean cultivation will eradicate it. Cutting off at this time, piling and burning it, is a simple method of eradication. Will each property owner see to it that none of these weeds are allowed to go to seed on their property?"

This weed flourishes unmolested along the country roads, ditch banks and on nearly every vacant city lot. It is the bane of every barefoot boy and girl, for the spikes on the seed pod are numerous, long and as sharp as needles.

The Livestock Bulletin.

BY ROBERT T. LYANS.

At a meeting of exhibitors at the recent Riverside Fair goat show it was decided to hold a "get-together" goat breeders' meeting at the Pomona Public Library on January [illegible] interested in the goat industry are invited to be present. One of the things to be taken up at the meeting will be a plan for greatly enlarging the scope of the annual Riverside show.

R. H. Rector of San Fernando has sold the first prize jack that was exhibited at the San Fernando Fair to W. C. Borden of San Fernando. Mr. Rector exhibited at San Fernando, Ventura and Riverside fairs this year. His four-year-old jack, Blackstone, sired by Limestone, a Missouri jack, was first prize and champion jack at the Riverside show and second prize jack at the Ventura fair.

The 1921-22 California Farm Bureau egg-laying contest at Santa Cruz is starting on the initial lap of the twelve-month stretch with a total of 63 entries, while the 54 entries in the fast closing 1920-21 contest, now hardy veterans, are straining over the last monthly lap in a final spurt for a big prize. With the flashing on of the lights at 5 a. m., Saturday morning, October 1st, the 756 incoming pullets settled into the egg-laying harness with such zest that a special deputy had to be placed on duty for the sole purpose of patroling the pens and putting pullets showing signs of wanting to lay on the nests, so as to bring the number of floor eggs down to a minimum. September, the tenth month of the 1920-21 contest now drawing to a close, ended with the contest flock averaging 34.3 per cent, bringing the average production per hen for the 334 days, ending September 30th, up to better than 176 eggs.

The Guernsey cattle exhibit by the Bryant Rancho of Owensmouth at the San Fernando Valley Fair took a big share of the Guernsey awards, winning fifteen first prize and champion ribbons, including first and second prize age cows, first and second prize 2-year olds; first and third prize senior yearlings, and first prize junior yearling. Sylvia of Frankland, grand champion cow at the California State Fair, was made grand champion at San Fernando. In the bull classes, Bryant bulls won first prize aged bull, second prize two-year-old and yearling and first prize calf. In the herd and group classes, the Owensmouth cattle won first in every class, including aged herd, dairy herd, breeders' herd, calf herd, produce of cow and get of sire.

The Pacific International Livestock Exposition, to be held at Portland November 5-12, gives promise of being bigger and better than ever this year. The railroads have made a reduced rate of a fare and a half for all Pacific Coast points, which will make a material reduction in the cost of travel. As the total of cash premiums this year will run above $75,000 in addition to numerous medals and silver trophies, competition will be very keen. Entries of fine dairy cattle, beef cattle, horses, swine, sheep and goats will come from all over the Pacific Slope and Intermountain country. A number of exhibits will also come from far Eastern States and Middle West points, and Western Canada will have its usual substantial representation. A chicken and rabbit division has been added to the big live-stock show this year, with a $2,500 premium list. The first entry for the 1921 Pacific International was made by A. L. Gile of Chinook, Wash., who entered seventeen head of his blue-ribbon Guernseys. William Ladd and D. Brooks Hogan of the Iron Mine Farm, at Oswego, has entered sixteen head of prize-winning Jerseys, and Jerseys have also been entered by George Lawrence & Son of Estacada. D. L. Burge of Albany has entered eight head of Percheron horses. Among those who have entered Aberdeen Angus cattle are Congdon & Battles, regular Pacific International exhibitors, who will bring a show herd of twenty animals. Edwards Bros. of Mayville, Or., have entered Herefords, and among other Hereford breeders who will send show herds are Herbert Chandler of Baker, A. B. Cook of Townsend, Mont., and J. D. Miles of Livingston.

CAULIFLOWER SEED INDUSTRY PROMISING.

BY ROBERT R. McLEAN,
Farm Service Department, First National Bank, San Diego.

We are gradually coming to find that in some part or other of California it is possible for us to grow many fruits and vegetables we formerly supposed must of necessity be imported from far-away lands.

Not only are we learning that we can grow these here, but in nearly every instance we are producing a better article under superior conditions. As proof of this, one need only mention the development of the Smyrna (Calimyrna) fig industry in the great central valleys of the State and the growth of the date industry in Coachella and Imperial valleys.

A lesser known but none the less promising enterprise that is now open to certain frostless coast sections of the southern counties, at least, is that of growing cauliflower seed.

For many years our cauliflower seed has come from Denmark and Belgium. In fact, so long have these countries, Denmark in particular, supplied us that the seed trade had come to regard them as the only source of supply and until confronted with samples of the California product had expressed considerable skepticism as to the ability of California growers to compete with the foreign article in quantity or quality.

So far as known to the writer, San Diego county originated the cauliflower seed industry in California on a commercial scale, although the output is as yet limited to comparison with the suitable acreage available. The Agricultural Extension Service of Los Angeles county has informed the writer that some seed is also grown in that county, but no figures as to the quantity have been given. The purpose of this article is, therefore, not to call attention to an established industry, but to the really fine seed that can be grown in California and to the unusual possibilities there are for its development into a live industry.

To successfully grow cauliflower seed in the open requires a moderate winter climate free from killing frosts, such as is found along the coast in San Diego county and elsewhere. While not enough experimentation has been made with different soils to give an authoritative opinion, a rather heavy soil appears to be best adapted to this plant for seed purposes.

Two varieties only have been grown in San Diego county, Early Snowball and Italian. Snowball is the most commonly grown cauliflower throughout the United States and is familiar to all, although Italian is becoming better known and the demand for it is increasing. The Italian seed is said to be grown in this country only in San Diego county and at the university experimental farm at Davis. It produces remarkable heads, snow-white in color, and occasionally specimens are found weighing twenty pounds.

The seed beds are planted during October, one ounce of seed producing some 3000 plants. When transplanted a few weeks later to the open field, they are spaced about 24 by 30 inches, a little over 7000 plants being set to the acre, making due allowance for an occasional wide row. The seed is ready to harvest in June, eight or nine months being required to mature the crop from seed to seed. According to experience here, an acre will produce approximately 400 pounds of seed.

When ready to harvest, the plants are cut and carefully stacked to prevent shattering. The old method of flailing out the seed is still used, a sufficient acreage not yet being grown to warrant the employment of power machinery. After threshing, which can only be done near the coast during a few hours in the middle of the day, the seed is run through a cleaning mill several times to thoroughly free it from trash and to remove light and broken seeds.

Cauliflower is attacked by practically the same insects that prey upon cabbage, the false chinch bug, harlequin cabbage bug, cabbage aphis, imported cabbage worm, etc. and is also susceptible to eelworm injury. Birds are very fond of the ripening seed and unless driven off will sometimes do considerable damage.

Cauliflower seed field.

C. W. Rogers, pioneer grower of what promises to be a profitable crop for coastal lands in San Diego county and elsewhere.

No experiments have yet been made with fertilizers, but it is probable that ordinary means of keeping up the humus and nitrogen content of the soil should be used, supplemented by occasional applications of sulphur and lime, this latter especially if the cauliflower is grown on heavy soil.

Due to unsettled conditions during the past few years, the price received by the growers has varied considerably, ranging from $3 to $10 per pound. This seed, however, is quoted in the seed catalogs at anywhere from $1.50 per ounce to $45 per pound, a higher price being asked by some houses for the imported than for the domestic article. This indicates that a certain prejudice in favor of imported seed on the part of seedsmen and market gardeners will have to be overcome and a sufficient quantity produced to command their attention.

There appears to be no question as to the worth of the seed that can be grown here. Eastern seedsmen who have handled San Diego county seed have stated to growers that their seed excels the foreign article in purity and germination. An official test made for the writer gave the germination of the sample submitted as 98 per cent.

The pioneer growers in San Diego county are C. W. Rogers and W. W. Fish, growing Early Snowball seed in Tecolote Valley, in the San Diego city limits, and A. L. Brink of National City, who grows Italian seed.

BEE MEN TO MEET.

Bee men of Southern California are invited to attend a "get-together" meeting called by the Western Honey Bee and to be held in the Assembly Hall at Exposition Park, Los Angeles, November 4 and 5. Everyone interested in the production of honey is asked to be present to participate in a discussion of problems affecting the bee industry. Those attending are asked to bring their lunches. Coffee will be provided by the committee in charge.

CALISPRAY
Nicotine-Sulphur Dust No. 1
Prepared Especially for Use in the American Beauty Dust Sprayer

COMPOSITION

Pure sublimed sulphur	not less than 71.0%
Hydrated lime	not more than 24.0%
Miscellaneous inert matter	not more than 3.4%
Nicotine	not less than 1.0%

STATEMENT

A nicotine dust of standard strength for general use, unusually quick acting and effective against a wide range of insect pests, especially recommended against aphids, thrips, cucumber beetle, etc.

The more resistant forms of aphis, such as the black peach aphis, pea aphis, etc., sometimes require a stronger mixture, use CALISPRAY NICOTINE-SULPHUR DUST NO. 21.

CAUTION

Nicotine is volatile and will evaporate if exposed to the air. KEEP THIS CAN CLOSED.

DIRECTIONS

Do not wait for the insects to become numerous, damage is being done as they multiply, destroy them before they have time to cause permanent injury to plant or crop.

If the insects are numerous when discovered, make the application directly to the infested parts, dusting the insects rather heavily. ALWAYS DUST THOROUGHLY, see that every part of the plant is treated.

Dry, warm weather is the best time for dusting; do not dust when the plants are wet, the excessive moisture on the leaves catches and holds the dust, preventing thorough distribution; dusting dry plants gives best results.

BRIGHTER FUTURE FOR THE IMPERIAL FARMER.

EL CENTRO.—Imperial Valley, now recovering from a set-back occasioned by the drop in cotton prices, promises to be one of the big links in the "Greater Southern California, Straight Ahead" campaign.

Last year's cotton slump and high taxes, both State and county, as well as irrigation district, gave agriculture in Imperial county a severe jolt, one from which many outsiders thought it would be hard to recover. However, there is a clear sky ahead. State and county taxes have been reduced approximately 30 per cent. The assessed valuations have been cut by the Board of Supervisors 40 per cent, but the rate was increased 18 cents, which still leaves a reduction of about 30 per cent. This will be a saving of over $1,000,000 to the taxpayers. Much of this year's tax money will be used in the construction and equipment of schools, and in the construction of thirty-five miles of paved highways.

The irrigation tax reduction for the coming year is even more striking than are those of State and county. There is no cut in the assessed valuation of the irrigation district tax, but the rate of taxation has been reduced from $2.50 per $100 valuation to $1.10 per $100. This means a reduction of 56 per cent from last year's irrigation taxes. It will mean a saving of over $1,000,000 in irrigation taxes to the land and property owners. In addition to this, the irrigation district proposes to spend from the money raised this year $250,000 for drainage work, and another sum nearly as great, to give the Colorado River a more direct channel to the gulf. This flood control work is vital, and this year's program of work will mean a big and permanent improvement for the farmers in Imperial Valley.

The farmer has not received sufficient re- [illegible] where in the entire country has the farmer been able to make the cost of production this year. Higher cotton prices make cotton culture more favorable. These low prices on forage crops are nevertheless beginning to get the farmers back on a live-stock basis, which is good for the soil, good for the farmer and good for the merchant.

It has been said by men who have spent years at assessing land and live stock that the man with a herd of cows is always in a position to meet his taxes when they are due. Cheap alfalfa hay and pasture, with butterfat prices at 50 cents a pound means more cows for Imperial Valley. A cow producing one pound of butterfat pe- day will return $15 per month. Many a cow has been known to pay for herself in one year in this fertile valley. A cow-testing organization, in progress for the past five years, has been able to weed out many of the "boarder" cows. Today the cry is for more and better cows. Another two years will see Imperial county a greater butter producer than ever before. More cows generally mean more poultry and more hogs. Certainly there is a wonderful future ahead for any country which builds upon such a basis. It brings a steady flow of money to the farmer and to the banks, and builds the soil for better crops.

This tractor is taking a turn at lawn mowing.

TO TEST AIR CLEANERS AT STATE UNIVERSITY.

The agricultural engineering division of the University of California, college of agriculture, is preparing to test as many of the prominent makes of air cleaners of tractors as can be obtained. The tests will be conducted disinterestedly, by accurate laboratory methods, to determine the percentage of dust removed from the air by the respective cleaners. The dust used is to be from those parts of the State where most trouble has resulted. All sources of possible error in the work have been carefully considered and provided for.

The tractor which ventures into California unprotected by an efficient air cleaner is sure to have its vitals speedily cut to pieces by the sharp, gritty dust that is taken into the carburetor, say the university experts. Ths is the first test to determine the relative merits of the many types of air cleaners used in California, and the results of this work will be of considerable interest to tractor users throughout the State.

SOIL TEMPERATURE.

TERRA BELLA.—"Soil Temperature" formed the basis of an interesting address given by Dr. P. A. Boncquet at the regular meeting of the Terra Bella farm bureau. He said in part: "A warm soil in the spring is particularly essential to citrus crops, as, in raising a semitropical product, complete development depends to a great degree on the temperature of the soil. Temperature of the soil not only eects leaf development, but that of the wood and the crop. When the temperature of the soil becomes too low to make the pumping machinery of the plant work, then the plant ceases feeding itself from the soil. Then the plant wilts and dies from starvation, although its roots are immersed in an abundance of soluble plant food. Factors in keeping the soil warm are deep fall plowing, the use of organic matter in the soil, especially if turned under in the late winter, and light winter irrigation. Such factors as cover crops, heavy winter irrigation and the presence of "plow pan" are to be avoided. They favor the loss of temperature from the soil and as such may be the cause of partial or total failure of orange growing."

COTTON STILL LIVE TOPIC IN ARIZONA.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—From Secretary J. A. Arnold of the Southern Tariff Association has come prediction that the new tariff bill will, at least, sustain the present 7-cent duty on long-staple cotton. The hearing is expected to arrive at the cotton sections about November 1. Gov. Campbell and a strong delegation of Arizona growers are expected to be present.

The Arizona Experiment Station in the Salt River Valley is now studying the effects of various grades and combinations of fertilizer on cotton lands and crops. For three years there has been division of a ten-acre field into half-acre blocks, in each of which there has been used a different fertilizing agent. On one plot as much as ten tons of barnyard manure has been used in a season. On another there has been liberal use of cottonseed meal. Various commercial fertilizers have been tried, as well as chemical combinations evolved by the director. It is told that while, in comparison with the unfertilized field, there is a marked difference in the growth of the plants, the difference in yield is less notable than might have been expected.

Jean Vuillet, director for the French government's agricultural work at Dakbar, French West Africa, is in Phoenix, making an exhaustive study of the culture of Pima long-staple cotton, in comparison with the Egyptian varieties to which he is accustomed.

With the rise in long-staple cotton values has come a rise in the picking rate, from 1½ cents to 2 cents, the price in effect several years ago. Pima cotton has one less "finger" than the short staple and 100 pounds a day of seed cotton is not a poor day's work. The Mexican pickers gain mainly in the fact that the whole family picks, the children often turning in as much cotton as their elders.

A late sale of No. 1 Pima in New Bedford was at 46 cents, equivalent to 40 cents in Phoenix. There are reports of many inquiries from spinners who heretofore have specialized on Egyptian. Sales and prospects have had a remarkably strengthening effect upon local financial conditions, though there is a disposition toward conservatism, awaiting what the later season may bring forth.

Production costs on the farms have been cut about in half, compared with last season, while farm products, save in the dairy industry, have remained at remunerative prices. Milk is very low, the explanation given being that the valley's main butter and cheese market, in the mining camps, has been lost since the start of the copper slump.

LONG BEACH.—Fred H. Bixby, president of District 5, California Cattlemen's Association, reports selling a carload of prime cows to a local butcher for 6 cents per pound, f.o.b. ranch, 3 cent shrinkage. He also reports sales in Modoc county as follows: Steers, 5½ cents; cows, 4½ cents; weighed at ranch, buyer to drive animals twenty miles to a railroad.

Progress in Watermelon Culture in Los Angeles County.

BY ROSS H. GAST.

Hundreds of tons of watermelons are grown without irrigation in the San Fernando Valley. Dry culture of melons.

Los Angeles county growers are making watermelon history. This is the Klondyke, originated by Dr. George P. Clements.

"FRESH watermelons—we plug 'em." So did we a few years back, when getting under fences and dodging bird shot was easier on us than it is now. Now we would rather stop along the way where such a sign is posted, and let the vociferous curbstone broker do the plugging.

The history of the watermelon in Los Angeles county is a story in itself. Twenty-five years ago, when there was no demand except the local requirements, growers did not plant heavily, nor did we have any "Watermelon Kings." Of recent years, large acreages have been planted to watermelons, and many carloads are shipped out of Southern California annually. Many new varieties have been introduced, the best of them coming as sports in the fields of the local growers. Owing to the shipping demand, the watermelon that held up better in transit soon found its way to the top. There are three outstanding varieties that are in greatest demand both on the local market and for shipping. They are the Chilean, the Angeleno, and the now famous Klondyke.

The melon that earliest attracted individual attention in Southern California was the Chilean. It was first grown here by John Trapp in 1899. It quickly superseded all other melons, and was for many years practically the only variety that appeared on the Los Angeles market. The Chilean was popular with the shipper and the local dealers on account of its thin rind, delicious flavor and its good shipping qualities.

In 1905, the Angeleno appeared as a sport in a field of Chileans planted by Mr. Ostergard of Burbank. Until the advent of the Klondyke, the Angeleno was the most popular, especially with the retail dealers. The Chilean held a close second, but a larger acreage of Angelenos was planted for several years. The Chilean is still a good seller, and many are planted by the growers.

In describing the Angeleno, William Tracy of the United States Department of Agriculture, says, "—the most beautiful melon in the world, perfectly symmetrical in shape, dark, glossy green in color, flesh of the deepest red, and free from the slightest appearance of fiber. It is as delicious in flavor as it is beautiful."

The Angeleno was hybridized with the black-seeded Chilean, and the result was the black seeded melon. This was necessary for some dealers demanded a black seeded melon. In shape, size and color, the black seeded Angeleno is the same as the white seeded melon of that variety. The quality does not differ.

Melons are very easily hybridized. If stock citrons are grown anywhere near watermelons, the melons will deteriorate. They will have that "punkin taste." The large grower has to be very careful where he obtains his seed, especially if he has contracted to grow melons of a certain variety and type. If the seed melons have been grown close to other varieties, then the chances are that half the resultant crop will be unsalable hybrids.

Might be mistaken for a stock citron—the Florida favorite, a good melon for the early market.

The latest addition to the watermelon family in Southern California is the Klondyke. It was discovered by Dr. George P. Clements, then of Riverside, now secretary of the agricultural department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. The Klondyke was found as a sport among Chileans, and, after three years trial, a fixed type was obtained. A local seed house recognized its good qualities, and in two years was able to offer the public the seed.

The Klondyke was popular from the start, and very quickly took precedence over all other melons on the Los Angeles market. It is an excellent shipper, as it does not wilt nor decrease in weight in transit. It invariably commands a higher price than other melons, as it is sold more readily from receiving points. The Klondyke cannot be praised too highly. It has made small fortunes f r many local growers. Although little known to growers outside of Los Angeles county, it was planted on three-fourths of all the acreage planted to watermelons in this county last year.

There are several other melons that deserve notice. The shippers are contracting for a considerable acreage of the larger melons—the Tom Watson, an old Southern melon; the Florida Favorite, and the Excel. All are grown to some extent in this county. The Irish Grey is a good melon, and will become more popular. Perhaps its lack of popularity now is because of its resemblance in shape and color to the citron. "Many an honest heart lies beneath an ugly coat."

Some of the best melons, and other kinds of produce, are held back because of their appearance. It took the casaba twelve years to come into its own. It all goes to show that we spend our money on appearance, and not quality as a rule.

A good proof of this is the so called Winter Growing Watermelon. It is to the watermelon family what the casaba is to the cantaloupe. This melon is of Russian origin, and first appeared in the Northwest about five years ago. It owes its popularity more to its good keeping qualities than to its flavor, though if it is not cut until Christmas, but left to mellow for a few months, the flavor is exceptional.

The Winter Growing melon gets its name from the fact that it will keep for many months after it is parted from the vine. It bears prolifically on poor soils; in fact is as hardy as a citron, which it resembles. It would prove profitable for any grower who could gather a good supply on hand about Christmas. They can be stored away in straw for months, and those who know the melon say that it will become very popular as a late melon, to ship along with the casaba.

Since the lands about Downey have been planted almost exclusively to fruit trees, San Fernando Valley has become the chief watermelon growing section. Conditions there are ideal, and almost all of our melons are grown there. There are a few watermelons grown around San Gabriel, and most of these find their way to the local market.

The earliest melons come from Imperial Valley. They are on the market from four to six weeks ahead of the local crop. The first local melons are ready about the middle of July. But we who must limit ou appetites to the size of ou pocketbooks can only look at them for a few weeks, until the supply increases and the price comes down to our level. As soon as the locals begin to appear in any quantity, the "curbstone broker" brings out his faded watermelon sign, touches it up, and we read—"Nice Fresh Watermelons, We Plug 'em." It is then you may be sure that the watermelon season has fairly begun.

The culture of the watermelon is simple. They grow best on sandy loam, but will do well on soil that is very light. Many of the largest fields of the San Fernando district are in sandy soil, in fact, soils of the river bed type. The melons require little water, and in many cases are never irrigated.

The old method of planting was to throw up a wide ridge, and plant on both sides. This ridge would be about five feet across, with a furrow about three feet wide between them. This is a good method for those who wish to irrigate and cultivate often. The vines are trained to the center of the ridge. I remember that one of my farm jobs was to turn the runners out of the furrow, so that the cultivator could go through without harming them. While the boss was watching, backs were bent and hands worked well, but when he was off the job, bare feet turned the vines, saving the energy wasted in bending, for other things

Egg Laying Marathon Starts; Every Hen for Herself.

BY G. E. GORDON.

FARM BUREAU EGG LAYING CONTEST

The first Farm Bureau egg-laying contest for Southern California started at Pomona, on October 1. Contest houses.

The contest, which will extend over a period of years, is in charge of C. G. Burgess, the man in front. This is the supply house.

THE Southern California Farm Bureau Egg Laying Contest, which was started on October 1st, is the major activity of the Poultrymen's Department of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau. There are [illegible] of the best hens in Southern California now in the contest houses at Pomona, where they have all of the modern conveniences known to hens, and every opportunity to make creditable records for themselves and their owners during the ensuing year.

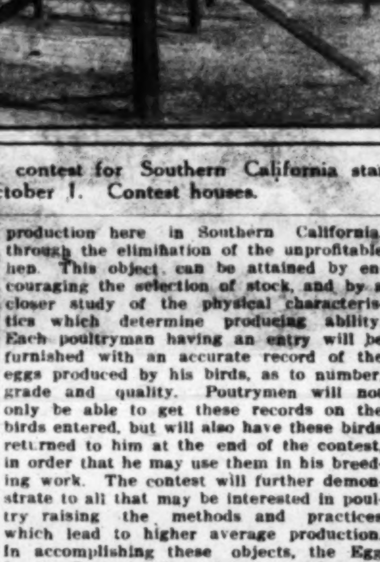
The contest was organized last spring, and was decided upon because of the interest of Southern California poultrymen in work of this character, and the necessity of increasing egg production on Southern California poultry ranches. Contests of a similar character have been held in various sections of the country, but this is the first attempt at an egg laying contest of any size in this section.

"What is an egg laying contest?" is the question that is often asked. An egg laying contest is a competition in which a number of hens are entered, for a given time, to determine which hen or which group of hens will produce the greatest number of eggs in that time.

The Southern California Farm Bureau Egg Laying Contest will last for one year, from October 1, 1921, to September 30, 1922. There are 48 entries in the contest, made by as many poultrymen located in various parts of Southern California. Each entry consists of twelve hens of the same breed, and the records on the ten highest of the twelve will be credited to that entry. The contest was open to all breeds, and there are three breeds in the contest, White Leghorns, Rhode Island Reds and Anconas. All the birds have numbered leg bands. Each bird is trapnested, and each hen receives credit for every egg laid by her during the entire year. The trapnests are so constructed that, when a hen enters, the door drops and fastens her in the nest until released by the attendant, who then collects the eggs and gives the hen due credit. The hen's number is also placed on the egg, and the eggs are later graded, and the records compiled and monthly reports issued to all contestants, and to the press, showing the standing of the birds in the contest, month by month, during the entire competition. At the end of the year, the birds will be returned to their owners, with their official trapnest records. The owners will then be able to use the high record birds for breeding purposes, and through breeding and selection, the flocks will gradually be built up to a higher producing level. The contest will last over a period of years. When the birds now entered are returned to their owners, other birds will be entered, so that the progeny of the birds trapnested this year can be placed in the contest in future years, until the breeding ability of the high record hens can be established and made use of in permanently improving flock production.

The object of the contest, then, is to increase efficiency in poultry raising and egg production here in Southern California, through the elimination of the unprofitable hen. This object can be attained by encouraging the selection of stock, and by a closer study of the physical characteristics which determine producing ability. Each poultryman having an entry will be furnished with an accurate record of the eggs produced by his birds, as to number, grade and quality. Poutrymen will not only be able to get these records on the birds entered, but will also have these birds returned to him at the end of the contest, in order that he may use them in his breeding work. The contest will further demonstrate to all that may be interested in poultry raising the methods and practices which lead to higher average production. In accomplishing these objects, the Egg Laying Contest will be doing a service, not only to the poultry industry, but to agriculture as a whole, and to the consuming public as well.

The resident manager, C. G. Burgess, in whose care the birds are placed, is well qualified to handle a contest of this sort, and to give good practical information on poultry husbandry and management to the many visitors who seek this information at the contest grounds. The contest is in the hands of a board of directors, consisting of Prof. J. E. Dougherty, C. G. Ross, M. A. Schofield, E. J. Hauser and the writer. The University of California, through its Division of Poultry Husbandry, is supervising the contest. The Pomona Chamber of Commerce is backing the contest financially, having appropriated money to erect buildings, as well as providing ground for the contest. This site was chosen by a representative committee from Southern California counties as being one most nearly suited, of all sites offered, to this work.



As each hen is taken from the trapnest, the number of the leg band is placed on the record and on the egg.

In order to assure each hen the same amount of feed, the latter is accurately weighed.

An entry fee of $24 is charged, or $2 per bird. This money, together with the money derived from the sale of eggs, is used to defray the cost of feed supplies and to pay the salaries of the contest manager and his assistant.

The houses used for the contest work are of the shed-roof type, as recommended by the University of California. Each compartment is 18 by 20 feet, with a yard on each side, 20 by 50 feet. Ninety-six birds are housed in each of these buildings. Every bird is subjected to identically the same conditions in all respects as the houses are uniform in size and shape and exposure. The birds will all be fed in exactly the same way. The ration being fed is as follows:

Scratch feed: barley, 40 per cent; cracked corn, 20 per cent; wheat, 20 per cent; milo, 20 per cent. Mash: bran, 35 per cent; corn meal, 20 per cent; "red dog" flour, 20 per cent; linseed meal, 10 per cent; meat scrap, 7½ per cent; fish scrap, 7½ per cent; charcoal, 2½ per cent; salt ½ of 1 per cent.

The mash mixture is kept before the birds in hoppers at all times. Grit and shell are also placed in hoppers. Weights will be kept on all the feed consumed, and the grain ration will be fed in equal amounts by weight to the mash, one-third being fed in the morning, and the other two-thirds at night. Green feed is placed in hoppers every morning in sufficient quantity to last all day.

The entries were limited to Southern California for the first year. The entries at the present time are quite representative of the poultry industry of this section. Following is a list of the entries, with the contestant's number, name, residence, and the breed entered.

White Leghorns—L. G. Wiley, Van Nuys; Moses L. Frick, Los Angeles; J. L. Miller, La Verne; Fliniau & Furstenfeld, Van Nuys; W. E. Gainskey, Torrance; F. R. SODIUM FLUORID TO BE USED WITH CARE.

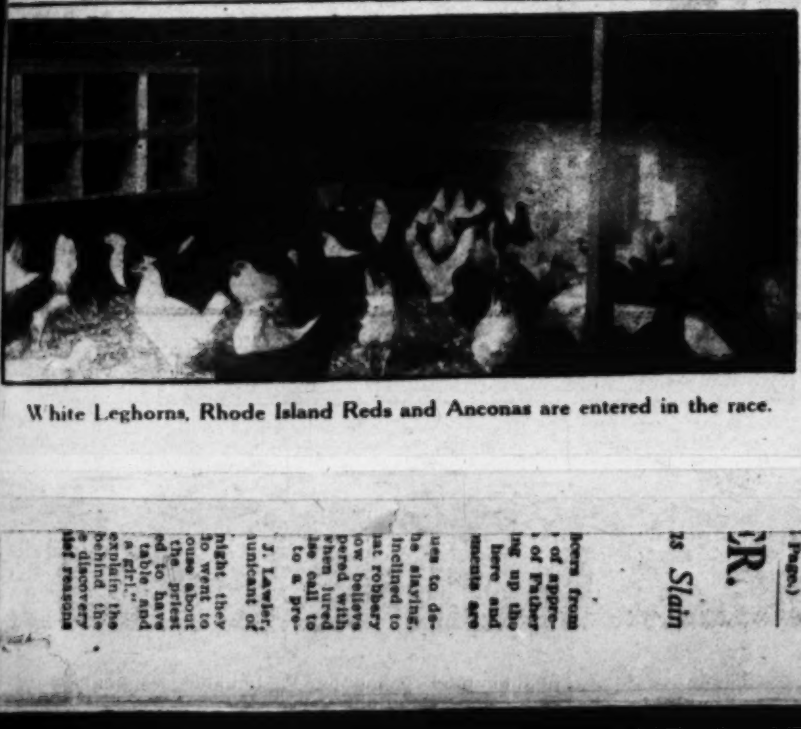
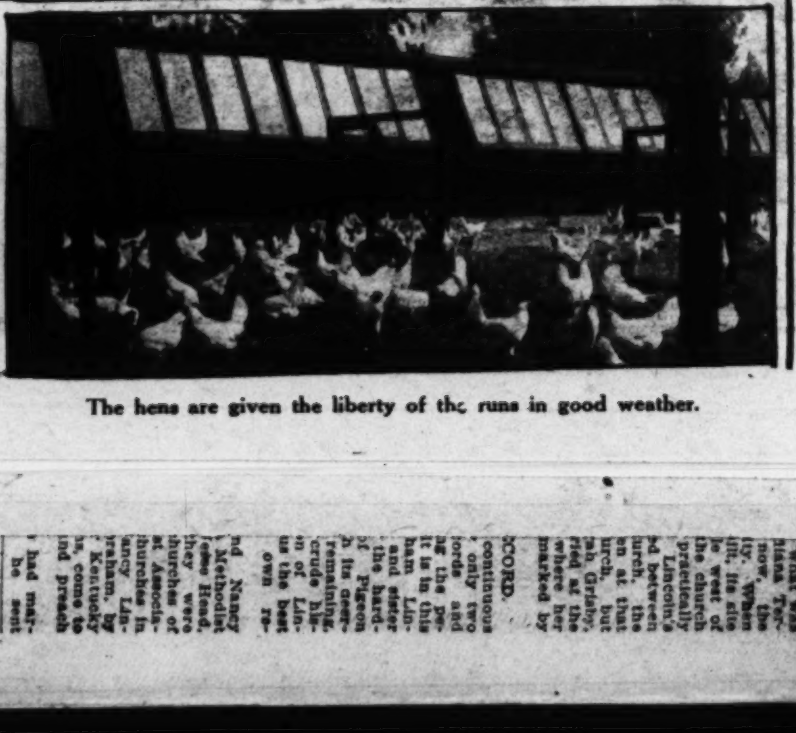
If sodium fluorid is used for killing lice on chickens be careful not to let it get into the food or water. Don't pour it out where the hens will drink it before it can soak into the ground. The material is rather poisonous if taken internally.

Where some of the sodium fluorid in dust form reaches the body of the operator, and is allowed to remain for several hours, local irritation and burning may occur on tender parts of the skin. In dusting large flocks it is better to use a table rather than to hold the fowls between the knees. The solution does not injure the hands, even when dipping is continued for several hours, except where there are sores, which may become slightly irritated.

Don't allow sodium fluorid solution to remain in galvanized vessels a great length of time. It is best not to keep it overnight in tubs or galvanized containers, as it will injure them.



White Leghorns, Rhode Island Reds and Anconas are entered in the race.



The hens are given the liberty of the runs in good weather.

Pimples and boils are signs of lowered vitality

A familiar food now used to correct them

PIMPLES and blackheads (acne) and boils are often the signals of a falling off in health. "A bad acne may indicate profound debility," writes a physician connected with a number of leading New York hospitals, and "the repeated occurrence of boils should always be looked upon as an indication of lowered vitality."

It has been found from actual clinical tests that remarkable results are obtained in treating these complaints with Fleischmann's Yeast.

Today Fleischmann's Yeast is everywhere recognized as a valuable "conditioner." It is a fresh food which supplies in rich quantities the newly discovered vitamine known to be lacking from many of our foods. It thus corrects lowered vitality which is so often the underlying cause of these minor ailments.

To protect themselves against these complaints many are making Fleischmann's Yeast a part of their regular diet. It is a highly digestible food assimilated like any other fresh food. You will like its fresh, distinctive flavor and the clean, wholesome taste it leaves in your mouth.

Eat Fleischmann's Yeast before or between meals—from two to three cakes a day. Only one precaution: if troubled with gas, dissolve the yeast first in very hot water. This does not affect the efficacy of the yeast. You will like Fleischmann's Yeast spread on toast or crackers, dissolved in milk or fruit-juices, or just plain. Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast and get it fresh daily.

Send 4 cents in stamps for the interesting booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." This nominal charge covers cost of handling and mailing. Address THE FLEISCHMANN COMPANY 941-945 Mission St., San Francisco, Cal.

To clear the skin

Treatment with Fleischmann's Yeast has proved very successful in clearing the skin of impurities and blemishes.

In 17 cases of pimples and blackheads treated in leading hospitals Fleischmann's Yeast brought about improvement or cure in periods of time ranging from 1 week to 2 months. The same good results were seen in 8 cases of red, blotchy faces, and in 16 cases of boils the cure was remarkably quick. In acute cases be sure to consult your doctor.

Beware of new and untested yeast preparations. The name Fleischmann is your protection and guarantee of uniform purity and strength.

Your skin needs two different creams at different times

In the daytime, use Pond's Vanishing Cream to protect your skin against sun, wind and dust. It will not reappear in a shine

For the nightly cleansing, use Pond's Cold Cream—the cream with an oil base

For daytime use—the cream that will not reappear in a shine

When you powder, do it to last. First smooth in a little Pond's Vanishing Cream, then powder. The powder will stay on two or three times as long as usual.

The cream is so delicate that it can be kept on all day without clogging the pores and there is not a drop of oil in it which could reappear and make your face shiny.

Furthermore, this protective cream, skin specialists tell us, prevents the tiny grains of powder from working their way into your pores and enlarging them.

At night—the cleansing cream made with oil

Cleanse your skin thoroughly every night, if you wish it to retain its clearness and freshness. Only a cream made with oil can really cleanse the skin of the dust and dirt that bore too deep for ordinary washing to reach. At night, after washing your face, smooth Pond's Cold Cream into the pores. It contains just enough oil to work well into the pores and cleanse them thoroughly. When this dirt is allowed to remain in the pores, the skin becomes dull and blemishes and blackheads appear.

Start using these two creams today. These creams will not encourage the growth of hair. In both jars and tubes at any drug or department store. The Pond's Extract Company, 131 Hudson St., New York.

A Better Way Than Diets and Exercise For Reducing

Diets and exercise are sometimes helpful for reducing. But they are inconvenient and unpleasant, and usually produce only temporary results. Then, too, they are merely corrective measures. A better way is to aid the digestive organs to turn food into muscle, bone, and sinew, and not into corpulent tissue. This method allows you to eat many kinds of food which others eat and does not require strenuous exercise.

Thousands have found that Marmola Tablets give relief from obesity in just this way. Marmola Tablets are made from the same formula as the famous Marmola Prescription. If taken after meals and at bedtime, they retard the development of fat by helping the digestive system to obtain full nutriment from food. When the accumulation of fat is checked, reduction to normal, healthy weight soon follows.

All good drug stores the world over sell Marmola Tablets at one dollar per box. Ask your druggist for them, or order them direct and they will be sent in plain wrapper, postpaid.

Patrick Week

"Bigger Than Weather"

November 5th to November 12th

SATURDAY morning, November 5th, thousands of clothing stores the country over will open their doors and welcome you to Patrick Week.

This event heralds the approach of colder weather and bids you select your clothing for the season.

In windows and on display in these stores you will see the complete Patrick-Duluth line. Greatcoats and overcoats for men and sport coats for women, smartly tailored from genuine Patrick cloth. Mackinaws for men and boys. Sweaters in all the varied colorings and stylings. Complete outfits for the hunter, fisherman and sportsman. Pure virgin wool robes and blankets for motoring and camping. Wool hose and caps. In fact, everything bearing the green and black label of Patrick-Duluth quality.

You will get a full season's wear out of winter clothes by making your selection during Patrick Week. You will save money by buying Patrick-Duluth garments, not because they are priced lower, but because they wear longer and give you more in style, comfort and fit.

Remember: there is no cloth just like Patrick cloth. It is as distinctive to America as friezes to Ireland, cheviots to Scotland and tweeds to England. Patrick cloth comes from pure northern wool and is spun, woven, dyed and fashioned in the Patrick woolen mills and garment factories on the shores of Lake Superior. It is "bigger than weather."

This is the sign of Patrick Week. Look for this display in your dealer's windows.

To free your skin from blemishes —the right way

ASK a skin specialist why it is that your skin is continually breaking out with disfiguring little blemishes. He will almost certainly tell you that this condition comes from an outside infection.

Authorities on the skin now say that skin blemishes are generally caused by bacteria and parasites which are carried into the pores from outside, through dust and soot in the air. By the following simple treatment, you can gradually but thoroughly free your skin from blemishes:

EACH night just before retiring, wash your face with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water, finishing with a dash of cold water, and dry carefully.

Now dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy, creamlike lather.

Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this and leave it on for ten minutes.

Rinse your face thoroughly, first with clear hot water, then with cold.

Supplement this treatment with the regular use of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your daily toilet, to keep the new skin which is constantly forming free from blemishes.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter. A 25-cent cake will last for a month or six weeks of this treatment and for general cleansing use. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York and Perth, Ontario.

Protected against loss or injury. Arranged in orderly sequence. Available when wanted. A constant source of pleasure—briefly, that's the story of a Kodak Album.

You will find conveniently displayed in our store a choice of Albums with flexible covers of the finest leather, in black or blended gray. Many more styles in artificial black leather or Art Craft shades, and the lower priced black cloth bindings.

Albums with 25 or 50 leaves, in all sizes, permanently bound, or the more popular Loose Leaf Albums with leaves held in place by lacings or adjustable screws, permitting removal of leaves when mounting.

A piece of Dry Mounting Tissue, a few seconds pressure of a hot flatiron, and the print is firmly attached to the album leaf—clean, smooth, and without curl—that's the modern way, but there always will be those who prefer Eastman Photo Paste, a brush and roller.

Ask for particulars and prices.

IT'S HARVEST TIME AND HALLOWE'EN!

Little elves and goblins are preparing now to walk the Earth. Perhaps they're going to meet at your house with long white sheets and pumpkin heads on All-Saints Eve.

These little Ghosties, though primarily of the Spirit, demand on this night the Best the Earth affords in the way of Goodies. That's why the Head-Goblin has ordered the juice of rosy apples, and dainty Nut Brown Cookies served at the Elves' and Witches' Party. Here's his recipe:

Phospho Nut Brown Cookies.

One and one-half cups of Nut Brown Meal, one cup of white flour, one teaspoon salt, three teaspoons baking powder, two-thirds cup of brown sugar, one egg, one teaspoon mixed spices, one-half cup of raisins and two tablespoons shortening. Beat the egg, sugar and shortening together; add the flour, meal, baking powder, spices and salt mixed together, one cup of sweet milk and the raisins. Have the batter quite stiff and see to it that it has been well worked together at the last in order that all of the ingredients are well blended and softened. Allow the mixture to stand for half hour.

CARE OF THE BODY.

struggle to overcome it. This co-operation is not to be had from hysterical men and women or from resentful State and municipal authorities who know their communities have been misrepresented. Already the unfortunate psychological consequence of hysterical outgiving on this subject is shown in the defensive position taken by the authorities of eight States, who protest against statements which they declare are false and which are certainly highly colored.

"Just as nobody wanted to say or do anything to cause the relaxation of any precaution against infantile paralysis or against typhus, nobody wants to say or to do anything to obstruct proper measures for the control of pellagra. But the system of disease prevention which begins by invoking panic is based on an erroneous and mischievous belief that only through terror can the public be brought to co-operate with sanitarians. This is not the case."

Pellagra is a disease of malnutrition. It is no more infectious than stomach ache. Anything will serve to scare an ignorant and credulous public.

* * *

Diet and Long Life.

IN A MAGAZINE article a physician discusses long life, and gives many elaborate tables, showing the influence on longevity of race, occupation, use of alcohol, etc., but not a word about the chief thing, namely, diet.

Yet, life insurance reports show that of 300,000 persons recorded, not one who was greatly overweight attained to a really old age.

* * *

Personal Liberty.

FOLLOWING are good words, spoken by Judge Charles F. Moore of New York at the recent bankers' meeting in Los Angeles:

"In spite of the inconvenience to which we may be subjected and the unreasonableness of the restraints placed upon us by the law of the land, we have come to understand that it is far better to endure them all than it is to permit every man to choose his own course without let or hindrance, for we must recognize that it is better to give up some of the personal liberties to which we are entitled rather than abandon all authority and leave ourselves at the mercy of the passionate mob.

"One serious difficulty is that few of us are willing to accord to others the same measure of freedom we want for ourselves."

The Soya Bean.

ENGLISH and Hungarian agricultural chemists have collaborated in the production of a soya bean, for which great things are promised. We are told that it is to take the place of bread, butter, flour and milk. Nonsense.

The soya bean is largely used by the Chinese. The white cheeses you see at Chinese stores are made of soya bean curd.

In France, a liquid made from the soya bean has been used as a milk substitute. It is not good for that purpose, because, like all beans, it is largely starch.

The soya bean is a valuable food, but it is inferior to peanuts. They contain much fat, which beans lack.

Fighting.

IF YOU read the newspapers, you will notice that they always emphasize fighting. "Fight started" for some commercial, or social, or political object.

Why not "strive" or "emulate?" They are nicer words.

A life that is a constant fight isn't worth living. And people become bellicose from constantly having the idea drilled into them that they must fight. Then, presently, they are ready for another war.

Nature Alone Heals.

"GENTLEMEN, there is no such thing as medicine. Nature does the healing and the most we can do is to assist her in removing the cause of the disease, not by drugs, but by observing the laws of health. Those who know the most about drugs use them the least, and those who know the least about them use them the most."

If Harry Brook says this, he is at once denounced by the medical profession as a quack and a faker.

It is not my statement. It is from an address delivered, before 2000 students of Oxford University, by William Osler, M.D.

Nos Compagnons de Voyage.

—BY—

John Steven McGroarty.

BY GOLLIES, we wonder what the neighbors in the green Verdugo Hills would think if they could hear us saying something, every once in awhile, in the French language?

And yet, if we had not been able to pick up a phrase or two in that dashing and fashionable tongue after having been on the sea for eleven days and eleven nights in a French ship, manned by a French crew and filled, for the most part, with French passengers, would it not be thought very stupid of us?

By gollies, we ought to be able to cut quite a figure in the Verdugo Hills when we are home again—saying something in French every once in awhile.

It should be worth quite a lot to us in the way of prestige and eclat, as the saying is, to work in a line of French talk, now and then, when we are with the neighbors once more in the little gray house in the hollow, or sitting with them on the stone fence watching the sunset on the Verdugo Mountains and the lights of the foolish automobiles flitting like fireflies up and down the Calabasas road.

But, after all, we fear that no such glory is to be ours.

This French that we have so jauntily acquired on the ship will have as jauntily forsaken us by the time we reach home.

It was no trouble to pick it up, and, by the same token, it will be less trouble to forget it "Come easy, go easy," as the saying is.

Which is all as it should be. For, by ginger, it is no joke for a man to be packing a burden of languages with him, up and down the world, wherever he goes. If he have one language so that he can make himself understood in it, we would say that he is doing very well.

The French are getting out a new dictionary now and they have used up 25,000 words just getting to the second letter of the alphabet. And still we meet people who have the courage to start in to learn it—Americans, mind, you, at that, and after they have "learned" it, as they claim, nobody can understand what they say; and a Frenchman least of all.

There were Americans on our ship who were writhing in the throes of learning French who do not even know their own language. Americans voyaging to see France and Europe who have not seen their own country. They have not seen Niagara Falls, the Grand Canyon, the Yellowstone, Yosemite or the green Verdugo Hills.

We are a strange breed, and yet the farther one fares abroad the better it seems to be an American.

But, as we have said, it is easy to pick up a little line of French talk that will give one an "air tres distingue," as the saying is.

As, for instance, there was of course, a barometer on our ship. Most every ship has one. And the barometer on our ship was hung at the entrance to the bar-room. And the French word for barometer is baromet, with the accent on the last syllable. So, we soon were able to say "barromette," which not only identified that important nautical instrument but gave, unerringly, its location, which was, to be sure, at the entrance to the bar-room.

So, you see how childishly easy it is, after all, to acquire a working knowledge of the French tongue.

We Meet Interesting and Pleasant People on Our Voyage.

THIS illuminating incident of the barometer leads us to recall to mind the many interesting and pleasant people we met on board the ship.

We can never think of that barometer at the entrance to the bar-room without recalling to mind a certain fellow voyager whose object in going to France was to make that country "dry."

In all our experiences of life we do not believe we have ever met a human being whose faith and courage was on a par with this man's.

He was going to France to make it "dry!"

No one could wish him anything but the best of luck. But that is neither here nor there, as the saying is.

The thing to consider is the job that he has cut out for himself.

Throughout the voyage his seat at the dining table commanded a sweeping and unobstructed survey of wine bottles that were set before the passengers, and from which they partook freely, as it is the immemorial custom of French people to do. They drink wine as we drink tea, and it does not seem to affect them the least bit.

The man who was voyaging across the vast tumbling ocean, risking his life in storms—as he did—to make France "dry," could have swallowed his share of that wine and nobody be the wiser for it. But, he did not do so. We must give him credit for having the courage of his convictions.

He looked not on the wine when it was red, or when it was any other color, as far as that goes.

Not only did he prove that he had the courage of his convictions, but he let no opportunity pass to assert the same. He waded into the wine-bibbers, and whaled them good. He told the French where they got off at, as the saying is. And he minced not his words.

Well, sir, you would look for a fight under these circumstances; now, wouldn't you? If the ship had been cargoed with Americans, no doubt there would have been a fight. Certainly there would have been a fight if there had been a few Irish aboard.

But the French are a polite, and in many ways, a noble race. They proved it in the war. Indeed, their whole history proves it.

So, in this case, there was no fight. Or even the suspicion of a fight. All that the French did was to listen to the Crusader placidly and gravely, and even with a certain admiration.

And why not with admiration? Was not this a man who had set forth upon a high adventure that required not only a supernatural faith but a sublime courage, as well?

Did not the French cheer their fallen foes on the field of Austerlitz?

Also There Was a "Little Flock of Blackbirds."

ALWAYS a pleasant and a reassuring sight on board our ship was the presence of a party of fourteen Little Sisters of the Poor.

The sailors said it was an omen of good luck as they saw them on the dock when our voyage was to begin. And it seems a true omen, now, after the wild storms which assailed us.

Throughout the long sea journey they were tirelessly placid and serene. Rough weather or any danger seemed never to perturb them. Perhaps it was their childlike faith.

Three times each day they came trooping into the dining-room. They were the first to be astir in the mornings to attend the mass in the chapel of the ship. Their days were spent on deck, rain or shine, reading their prayer books.

"They are like a flock of little blackbirds," said our old, gray skipper, lovingly. He stopped often to chat with them.

They are wonderful women, these little Sisters of the Poor. Any man will say that, no matter what his creed, or if he have no creed—any man who knows them and what they do.

And what they do is to devote their lives to the care of the aged poor. They desert their own estate—and it is often a very high estate—to care for poor old men and women the world over. More than one princess of the blood is numbered among them. Hundreds and thousands of their numbers have given up luxury and wealth and happiness to be mendicants for those who, save for the little sisters, would have no one to care for them.

It is a wonderful thing for a woman to do. Any man will say it is.

There was one pathethic passenger on board our ship who was the constant object of the deep concern of the "little flock of blackbirds," although he did not know it, and may never know it

He was a little old Jew with a rabbinical beard, and a face on which was written the cruel tragedies of his people. By some miracle he had escaped from the pogroms and massacres of Europe, and had succeeded in reaching New York on this same ship which was now carrying him back.

For some reason—and it must have been a heartless reason—the immigration officers would not permit him to land.

So, all day long, he stood at a port pole of the ship gazing out upon the lonely sea—that sea which had proved the rescue of so many a tortured soul, but which offered now no rescue for him. At night when the deck was deserted he would come up, still watching the sea—the unpitying sea. And no man who has seen his face can ever forget the voiceless heartbreak it portrayed.

"And, oh, if we could only have him to care for and to comfort," said the little blackbirds.

"Would you do that, if you could, sisters? He is of an alien faith," we said.

"What difference could that make?" the little blackbirds answered. "Maybe God will yet give us that privilege. We will pray that it may be so."

They were on their way to France, which is the mother of their order, and where they are well beloved. Home to France after fifteen years of probation, to make their final vows. Their chance to abandon their rule was still good, and freely offered to them. But, they were going back to put that chance away forever.

"A flock of little blackbirds," the old gray skipper called them, lovingly. "And they are omens of good luck," the sailors said.

The World's Ends That the Ships Bring Together.

SOME one has said that if the peoples of the world could be brought together to talk things over there would be an end to their quarrels.

In our ship there were all sorts and conditions of men. There were men of every nation under the sun, of every creed and of many minds. There were hundreds of them. And, at the start, they were total strangers to one another. But, before the voyage was ended, it seemed as though they had known one another all their lives.

Surely it is the ships that bring the world's ends together. Wherefore, we are in favor of ships. It is a good thing to bring the ends of the world together.

Before two days of the voyage were over, all the people of our ship were vying to make life as kindly and as happy as it is possible for life to be.

We had quite a religious atmosphere aboard, what with the sisters, a procurator of the Holy Cross bound for Rome, two groups of Jesuit scholastics ordered from America to Innsbruck and Ona for their finishing touches, a number of Y.M.C.A. workers, three Anne Morgan girls, Jews revisiting Rumania and Austria, and last, but by no means least, the Methodist crusader headed for France to make it "dry."

At home, on land, these groups would be no more gregarious than pigeons are with crows. They would stand apart, each from the other. They would flock each for itself. And, even though they might not openly quarrel, they would certainly not be friends.

But, on board the ship, they were not at all like that. We had had such a happy time together. A great singer of the Metropolitan Opera Company had sung his master songs for us, unsparing of his golden voice. A young Yiddish girl had charmed us also with her songs. A boy from Venezuela had held us enraptured with his violin. One of the Y.M.C.A. men kept the ship's piano going merrily.

The ship had brought the world's ends together and had welded them with just that common human love which is all that is needed to make all men brothers.

In the Quest of Memories and Old Dreams.

IT IS upon the quest of memories and old dreams that men go down to the sea in ships.

It is not so with the wayfarer who journeys in caravans, or with the wanderers you will meet on inland trails. With them it is a quest of new peoples and new places. And, we would almost say that they are the happiest.

The voyager seeks only memories that are his own or that smolder in his heart from the gray ashes of long dead fires lighted by his ancestors.

We thought of this in thinking of ourself. One night when the moon was on the waters we asked ourself why it was that we had left the peace and contentment of our quiet hills to venture this long journey across so many lands and so many seas.

Why will a man leave, even for a day, that which he has acquired and which is his heart's desire, to meddle with a world that should hold no concern for him?

It was not difficult to find an answer. Yonder, across the moonlit waters lay a little green land, in a green glen of which our mother was born. The little green that we had never seen, but which we had always longed to see. And, yonder still was Spain and Iberia from whence had come the Phoenician and the Milesian whose blood is in our veins.

So, to lay hold of memories, and to sit by the gray ashes of long dead fires—this is why men voyage across lands and oceans far from their quiet firesides at home.

Sometimes, too, there is some fierce, crying, elemental reason, in a way akin to these reasons we have set forth, and yet differing from them, too.

We have to tell you of a voyager on our ship who was beating back across the seas for this fierce, elemental reason; and for no other.

He came on the ship challenging everything and everybody from the very start. He had a chip on his shoulder, as the saying is. A huge, savage, snarling fellow.

The "garcons" (as we call them in French) trembled in their boots whenever this big thundercloud passed by. He seemed accustomed to beating men down; to commanding obedience by his very brutality.

At the end of the first day he had not one friend in the world. For, his world and ours was now just this little ship plunging helplessly enough on the tremendous waves of the great sea.

At the end of another day we sought him out where he sat in a corner of the deck wrapped in steamer rugs and scowling at the waves and the sky. All the other voyagers appeared to be glad only to be shut of him. But, for us he held a fascination. We have never been able to help being interested in the primordial man. And here was a primitive man, surely, at least.

It was a difficult thing, we must confess, to beat down his rough, strong guard. But one can gain great victories by the exercise of a loving patience and the proof of honest intentions. And, at last, the man softened.

He was going back to Budapest, he said. Back to Budapest where, as child and man, he had been kicked about like an outcast dog. Kings had ridden roughshod over his naked body; lords and rich men had spat upon him. He was despised by the land that bore him. And all through no fault of his own. How could he help it—that he was born a peasant and a slave? he asked us, savagely, between his clenched teeth.

Well, the sea had rescued him from Budapest—this same sea that had rescued so many million others and at which he was now scowling.

We told him that—that it was the sea to which he owed his rescue.

"It is true," he said; "I had not thought of it so." And he rose, then, and stood at the starboard rail, and bared his great shaggy head to the sea.

Aye, the sea had rescued him. And he had come to America. And after thirty years he had grown rich and great. Very rich; and very great in the sense that he was a master of men and the captain of his soul.

And now he was going back to Budapest. Kings were no longer there. The lords that had spat upon him were begging for bread.

And so he would go back and ride rough-shod over those who had ridden rough-shod over him. He would flaunt his wealth in their faces. He would hire them, for dirty pennies, to wipe his boots and to wait on his table, licking their hungry lips for the crumbs that would fall.

All this and more he would do when he got back to Budapest. His eyes were deep with sullen fires as he said it.

It was bad, we thought, for a man to harbor a bitter hate like that in his heart. But, we are as we are; and the best we can do is to pray God to let His love touch us and His mercy to shine upon us.

Maybe God will decide to command the man from Budapest to reckon, first, with Him. "Qui sait?" As we say.

Ah, well, anyway, it was a happy voyage, and we found ourself loving everybody who fared with us through the storm and danger of the sea.

"Nos compagnons de voyage"—they were very nice people!

The Married Life of Helen and Warren.

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

A Dinner Adventure in Greenwich Village Proves Helen a Poor Bohemian.

"YES, and we'll get a rotten dinner," grumped Warren.

"No, dear, Mrs. Holden says the food's very good. We've never been to Greenwich Village but once," persisted Helen, "and that was two years ago. I think you might take me," pleadingly.

"Got the address of this joint?" as they turned into Fifth avenue.

"No, but she told me how to find it. Here comes a bus now—this will take us to Washington Square—it's not far from there."

With grumbling reluctance Warren signaled the bus with his cane. The next moment they were scrambling up to a coveted seat.

Helen fairly glowed at the prospect of a Greenwich Village adventure. It had been hard to overcome Warren's deep-rooted aversion to the Village food, but now after much coaxing they were on their way to "The Spotted Leopard."

At Washington Square they left the bus and turned into a slatternly, evil-smelling street, on the edge of Little Italy.

"Can't be any decent place to eat around here!" scowled Warren, stepping over a pool of dirty water.

"There it is just ahead—that green and yellow sign," trying to quell her own misgivings.

"Great guns, it's not in a basement?"

"Why, yes, dear, that's part of the atmosphere."

Down the grimy stone steps they entered a dingy hallway dimly lit by a solitary gas jet.

"The Spotted Leopard" was apparently a community center. Under the feeble light was a bulletin board covered with notices of studios to rent, blouses and smocks for sale, and the various Village amusements.

The clatter of dishes and buzz of voices guided them to a door that opened into the long, low-ceilinged dining-room.

It was a weird scene—that shadowy, crowded room lit only by the tallow candles on the tables.

"Two seats over here," came a friendly voice as they glanced about uncertainly.

A man at the end of a long table rose to let them pass to two vacant places against a wall covered with rough charcoal sketches.

Wedged in on the long wooden bench, Helen swiftly appraised the other diners. Beside her was a woman in a Norfolk tweed suit and a man's straw hat, smoking a cigarette in an amber holder.

Just opposite was a sallow, undernourished youth and a girl with a straight bobbed hair and a batik smock.

"Not a very inviting layout," Warren scowled at the soiled dishes and crumpled paper napkins in front of him.

It was stiflingly hot and airless. The droning electric fans hardly stirred the heavy, smoke-weighted air.

The waitress, her carmined lips a vivid streak across a powder-masked face, sailed up to clear off the dishes, which they had to pass across the table.

It was an unappetizing prelude—handling the soiled dishes of other diners. But with the tables so close together, there was no room for service.

Everyone was friendly and helpful. The bobbed-haired girl passed them some paper napkins which Helen spread on the bare table in lieu of a cloth.

Except for a few late comers, most of the others had finished their dinner and were now talking animatedly over cigarettes and coffee. There seemed no disposition to move on. Apparently they had settled down for a talkfest.

Helen caught a word here and there from heated arguments over Nietzsche, Symbolism, Psychoanalysis, Free Verse, Finalism, Numerology, Individualism, Russian art, Sovietism and Prohibition.

"Dear, look, that must be 'Olga the cigarette girl'—the one Mrs. Holden told us about," as a dark girl with short, bushy hair passed among the tables selling Russian cigarettes. "She makes them herself—her name's on them."

"Cigarettes?" approaching Warren as a likely customer, she held out a box from her tray.

Warren gave her a dollar, receiving a red-lipped smile and 50 cents in change.

"Perfumed!" he grunted with a disdainful sniff at the long, thin, gold-tipped cigarettes.

Here the waitress appeared with their soup, which the couple opposite obligingly passed across the table. Served in thick, blue-banded bowls, the thin gruelly liquid was tasteless and unseasoned.

"Luke-warm dishwater!" Warren pushed back his bowl in disgust.

"Sh-sh, dear, we're late—that's why it isn't hot. Oh, there's that man who plays the ukelele! I wonder if he's the one they write so much about in these Greenwich Village stories."

"Yes, that's Jimmie Roberts," volunteered the mannish woman beside her. "He calls himself 'King of the Village.' Makes those ukeleles out of cigar boxes, paints them up, and sells them.

"How interesting," murmured Helen, watching the slim, horn-spectacled youth twang a ukelele vividly colored in cubist designs.

Mounted on a chair, in competition with the mechanical piano, he was chanting nasally a ribald song.

"But the Bourgeoisie as a class are a menace to the successful operation of the communal system. Russia must destroy them or be destroyed—" The bobbed-haired girl paused in her discussion to pass their roast.

"Oh, thank you. I'm afraid we're troubling you a lot," apologized Helen.

"Everybody has to help serve here," taking a pitcher of water from the adjoining table to refill all their glasses.

Helen viewed with dismay the dubious, sauce-covered meat, gravy-soaked potatoes, and the greasy string beans that filled her plate.

"Dear, I wouldn't eat that meat," in a cautious whisper. "It's lamb, I think—but it isn't fresh. Now don't—please don't make any comments."

"If you ever bring me to a damned hole like this again—" he muttered under his breath.

"Sh-sh, we don't want to offend these people—they've been very nice. Oh, there's that queer artist who sells inspirational candy! We saw him at 'The Pink Parrot' two years ago—you thought he was crazy."

"Will anyone else have a package of soul candy? Whether you write or paint—whatever your profession, you will find in these sweetmeats inspiration. There is no charge—I give it free. Of course, if you insist, I will accept 25 cents a package. My friend, I thank you."

Then, holding up a pamphlet from the [illegible] on his tray:

"[illegible] my little book on the 'Science of Cosmic Vibration.' Worth its weight in gold. It is yours for the asking—or if you wish, for 50 cents."

At Helen's eager nudging, Warren bought a copy.

"Dippy, all right. Of all the fool rot!" glancing over her shoulder as she scanned chapters on "Esoteric or Exoteric Vision," "Soul Symbols," "Astral Colors," and "The Eternal Symphony."

Their perusal of the "Science of Cosmic Vibration" was interrupted by the salad—a dab of cream cheese on a discouraged lettuce leaf. Next came the desert, a soggy cake-pudding covered with a gluey vanilla sauce.

The coffee was the only palatable part of the dinner. But Helen could not even sip that with relish, for the handle of the cup was wet and sticky.

What was the attraction here? Why did all these people, their dinner over, still linger in this hot, stifling place? Was uncleanliness and discomfort necessary to a Bohemian atmosphere?

There was nothing to drink. In vain Helen looked for the large coffee cups that might camouflage a stronger beverage, but there was no sign of liquor—not even a pocket flask.

"Let's get out! I'm about fed up with this," Warren crushed his paper napkin to a ball. "Who do we pay here?"

Again the whole side of the table had to rise to let them pass.

While Warren looked up the waitress to pay their bill, Helen waited awkwardly by the door. At a near-by table a coatless, long-haired youth was reading manuscript verse to a woman in a green gown and dripping jade ear-rings.

Helen caught the last verse, delivered in a deep sonorous bass.

"Beloved, I cannot reach thee with my Yearning
To crimp thy Hennaed Hair with lips still burning.
O Suffering Cats, the Purple Purl of my Desire
Flames to Saffron Ecstasy thy Verdant Fire.
Behold the Swooning Couch where Cooties leap
The couch where my soused Bride doth weep."

"Superb! What limpid rhythm! Such subtlety! Why don't you send it to the 'Imagiste'?"

"Oh; they're too lowbrow—they never appreciate my stuff. Now if they had a man like Brettan for editor—he'd go mad over this."

Then fumbling in the pocket of his coat which hung over the back of the chair.

"I've another little thing here on 'Purple Dreams and Putrid Parsnips'."

But Helen was spared further lurid, meaningless effusions, for Warren now stalked up, took her grimly by the arm and marched her out.

"If you'd lamped that kitchen—you wouldn't eat for a month," as they came up the basement steps into the squalid street.

"The kitchen! You didn't go back to the kitchen!"

"I wouldn't if I'd known what I was getting into—I was looking for that girl to pay her. I'm not squeamish—but that dump was the limit."

"Don't tell me about it," shuddered Helen. "You could see the place wasn't clean—but I hoped the food was. Dear, I've had enough—I'll never ask to come down here again."

"Glad you got a good dose. You're forever harping on those 'quaint little places' in Greenwich Village. If you'll tell me what sane people see in those joints! What's the attraction? Bad food, bad air—not even any booze!"

"I suppose everybody wants to go once," shying away from a row of garbage cans. "It's the nearest to the Latin Quarter of anything we have over here."

"Well, they give you good grub in the Latin Quarter—that's more than you get here. And all those idiots spouting hot air about a lot of fool 'isms.' Come on, let's go to a drug store for a glass of buttermilk. I've got to have something besides 'Cosmic Vibrations' to carry me over till breakfast."

"Sir," began the young man with the new diploma, striking his most effective attitude, "I am trying to get a start in life."

"Must Mate the Best."

If the 25,000 tallest men and women in America were mated and induced to rear two children more than the normal family rate, and if this selection of the tall was continued for centuries, the average height of an American would be increased one inch every 1500 years, according to figures presented the International Congress of Eugenics at New York recently by Maj. Leonard Darwin.

"If we want more persons eminent in morals, intellect or physical strength to spring into existence in all the generations to come, the most certain method of achieving this result would be to raise the level of the whole people in regard to their unborn qualities. For, if this could be done, the factors needed for the reproduction of men of genius would exist in greater numbers; their union by chance in any one individual, or the actual appearance of a man of genius would occur more often; and all the while lots of people would be receiving the benefits due to their improved natural endowments," he said.—[New York Times.

Cause for Mirth.

When the young mistress of the house entered the kitchen she carried herself with great dignity. She had, incredible as it might seem, come to call the cook to account.

"Bridget," she said, "I must insist you have less company in the kitchen evenings. Last night I was kept awake by the uproarious laughter of one of your women friends."

"Yes, mum, I know," Bridget admitted cheerfully, "but she couldn't help it. I was telling her how you tried to make cake yesterday morning."

Dangerously Ill.

Said the woman's husband at the door: "The missis is very ill, ma'am, and won't be able to come this week."

"Oh, I am so sorry, George. Nothing very serious, I hope?"

"Well, ma'am, she was so bad that I had to go to the pictures by myself."—[Houston Post.

The Road—1921.

Winding away,
Through the "alisal,"
Is the Royal Road
—"El Camino Real"—
On every mile
Of all its length,
A story is writ.

The tale that it tells,
Is of Mission bells,
Of Dons and Hidalgos
Of Spain;
A story of prowess and strength;
Or, of love, perhaps;
Of a Spanish song
With a soft refrain—and a strain
Like the moan of a dove.

'Tis almost the path
The Padres trod;
—Franciscan padres in garb of brown,
Sandaled feet, shorn of crown—
The Sierra Madres looking down,
As they bore aloft
The Word of God,
Like an oriflamme!

Winding away, through the "alisal,"
Is the Royal Road,
—"El Camino Real"—
Changing each moment
Its dusky hue,
—Becoming a satiny ribbon of blue—
Reflects, throws back,
From its mirror-like face,
Rose, green and purple, like filmy lace;
Flashes of turquoise in loops and whirls;
Swift glinting gold in endless swirls;
Away, and away and away—
To the vanishing point.

And for every mile
Of all its length,
A story is writ!

A Tale of the Vaudeville World—Humor, Action, and a Surmounting Love.

"DID you get the booking, Eddie?" Effie Eaton looked up questioningly at the debonair Thespian who entered the footworn portals of Room 611. Her words were carefully casual, but the glance was full of import.

"Booking!" scoffed Eddie La Rock, with affected nonchalance. "Booking?—I got the air." He lit a cigarette and dropped down on a trunk-lid.

"You don't mean," demanded Effie, "Santmann couldn't get us a route—not any of the Eastern time at all?"

"Not any a-tall!" informed Eddie bitterly. "He said the bookers thought we wasn't ready for the big leagues yet."

"Why, Eddie La Rock, we've spent six years gettin' ready for 'em!" Effice dabbled her nose with her handkerchief, but she didn't weep. Tears ruined your make-up and when you did four shows a day you had your make-up on most of the time. "What did they say was the matter with the act?"

"What could they say! The old stall!"—he threw away his cigarette and began pacing the floor indignantly. "Mixed teams got to have more novelty nowadays; the chatter was mostly released; and I ought to leave off my song number and stick to hoofin'. I told him it's a lie, we coughed up a hundred little iron men for the cross-fire and we been goin' great all over our western route, six to eight recalls every theater we played. 'Well, you better go on back there then,' he says, 'because I can't do anything for you around here now the way things are breakin'.'"

"Did he mention—anything about me?" asked Effie timidly.

Eddie coughed and swallowed. Then he came over and put his hand on his partner's shoulder. "I hate to tell you, girlie, because myself I think you been doin' right well in the act, like I've trained you. But your vamp bit—he said it's all wrong." He paused judiciously. "And I've been wonderin' if mebbe he ain't right, and you better just feed the talk, and dress the act, and come in on them few steps for the finish."

"Why, Eddie,"—Effie bit her lip—"it always gets me a hand, and you said yourself—"

"I know, but vamps are terrible out of date, honey. You could take it out and get you a new flash dress—"

"What's the use o' me wearin' clothes if I don't do anything in 'em! No, Ed,"—Effie realized her bonnie boy had already lingered too long on the Rialto—"we may as well take our medicine. You close for the route and some day mebbe we'll be framed for Broadway. I been all the afternoon turnin' the cuffs on your silk shirts. What do you say we drop over to the Palace and catch the intermission?"

"Why, girlie, I—I can't very well, tonight." He was quietly slipping into a nobbily pointed collar and fresh tie. "I promised some o' the boys I'd step around to the club. You could run over to the Palace alone, or tomorrow—"

"Tomorrow," put in Effie cannily, "I'm goin' shoppin' for that new dress to wear in the act; so you better leave me—fifty or sixty bucks."

"Huh?" Eddie did a swift pivot from the mirror and caught up his hat. "Say, Ef, who do you think I am—Rockefeller? You've been doin' nothing but select wardrobe ever since we're in New York! And you've already got three stage dresses good as new."

"Why, Eddie La Rock, you know they're been to the cleaner's till they're all gray and limper'n a rag! You just said I ought to buy me a new gown."

"I meant"—Eddie eased toward the door—"make over that green one with the panniers."

"That old thing? Why, the silk's cut through!"

"Darn it, honey, I hate to be stiff with you, but you're always stickin' me for coin—I got them English brogues to buy and I ain't very flush." He took out an anemic roll and peeled off a greenback. "Here's ten for a starter."

Eddie pecked a connubial kiss and did a vanishing act, while his better half tucked the tenner in her First National with what grace she could.

She was scarcely disappointed about the dress. It was the best fiction she could think of to salvage collateral. She knew Eddie. He was sitting in a friendly game, from which, in the wee sma' hours, he woud gumshoe in with a flat purse and an alibi. The rest of the week they would eat off the tenner in the Automat.

When, as a disillusioned bride, Effie had first found herself the victim of her husband's ingenious evasions, she had fondly hoped to cure him of his selfishness, and extravagance, and philandering. But six years of matrimony had taught her that if she wanted to live with Eddie La Rock she would have to take him on his own terms. And so many other ladies wanted him, she was lucky to have him on any terms.

At 30 he was an irresponsible juvenile with a yellow mane, a face unlined, a gift of gab, and a way with women that would charm the bees off a honeysuckle. For the rare moment in which he was still her lover, Effie adored him. For the rest of the time, she mended his socks, and laundered his silk shirts, and made as cheery a job as she could of condoning him. She was used to poker losses, and broken engagements, and being reduced to "dressing the act;" these were nothing. But their new disappointment in not landing the Big Time, that was everything.

Thrice they had advanced upon New York and thrice been turned back to the sticks. And Effie knew that, as far as she was concerned, this time was the last. If Eddie essayed Manhattan again, it would be with another partner. And once the team split—

But this wasn't the only angle that hurt. She was ambitious for him, and, in a small way, for herself. She could never quite understand why they didn't get by.

She got out again the well-thumbed copy of Variety with the report of their uptown tryout.

"LA ROCK and EATON"—the reviewer had written—

"SONGS and TALK.

"Fourteen Minutes in One.

"One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street.

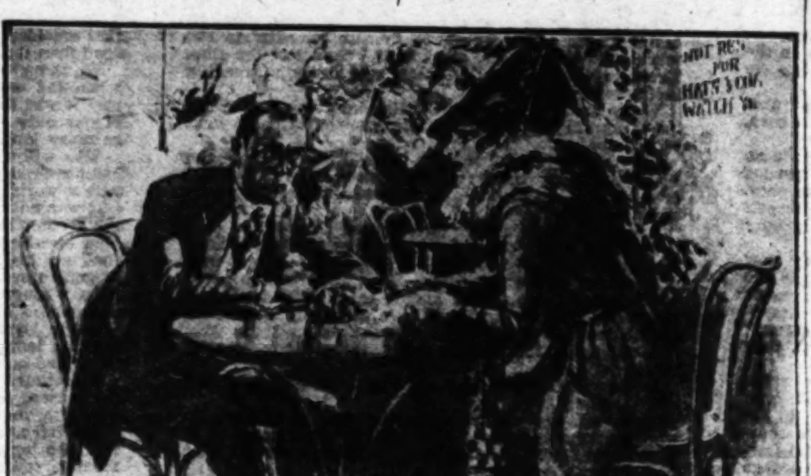
"This team is evidently from the West and with their present layout they'll have to go back there. Turn opens with man loafing in front of the postoffice. He sings a couple of published comics and pulls some flip gags. Is rather long on looks and evidently thinks he's a wise cracker. Friday night he had another think coming. When he gets down to stepping it's a different story, but too late to save the act. His partner did a village vamp bit that got over. If the turn was reframed to play up her possibilities for impersonation and feature his dancing, they might deliver."

Laying aside all rancor, Effie reread the review. Now she saw it was really constructive criticism. Showed them how to reframe the act and get over. Her vamp bit was good, and she could put in a couple of the impersonations she had been perfecting. And Eddie must get down to brass tacks and give them a little of the real essence, like he used to. They could still do it and have New York eating out of their hands.

In a burst of enthusiasm she got up and tried Eddie Foy before her mirror, and practiced her Grace La Rue glide, and decided she'd go again to study Nance O'Neil in "The Passion Flower."

When Eddie came in at 3 a.m., she put it up to him excitedly. But the moment was inopportune. Red-eyed and wrathy, he had reversed a winning streak and sacrificed his case-note to a bum bunch.

"What's eatin' you, Ef?" he demanded. "Go on to bed and forget it. I'm off that dancing stuff for life. My brains is in my head, and some day I'm goin' to prove it to them big bookin' stiffs. And where do you get the idea you can do imitations? You only been gettin' away with the vamp bit 'cause it's sure fire and everybody's doin' it. That Variety guy's kiddin' you and you don't know it."



She put out her hand impulsively and rested it on his. "Won't you see that I mean it, honey? That I want you back?"

"Then you ain't willing to try rearrangin' our routine?" she persisted.

"Naw. What're you fixin' to do, make a dumb act out o' me?" And he buttoned his silk pajamas peevishly and dived into bed. "And another thing,"—raising up impressively on his elbow—"any further arrangements you got for hoggin' the act, you better get rid of 'em before we start West—see?"

The next morning Eddie elected to consider himself an abused boy and hurried off. Effie collected all financial resources and went on a shopping tour. She put in a nerve-racking afternoon making every dollar do the work of two. At 5 o'clock she was hurrying along Broadway, when she glimpsed her husband coming out of a picture show. Pushing forward to join him, she discovered he was not alone.

It was an awkward moment and Effie rushed to the rescue of the cool glance she gave his elegant companion. "Why, hullo, honey, if this ain't luck! You're just in time to say howdy to Vi'let. I run into her comin' out of her agent's and we been makin' it old-time home week."

Violet smiled sweetly and extended a bejewelled hand. "Hullo, dearie. Seems like an awfully long time since I've seen you, though Eddie tells me you been campin' on Main street. Too bad you didn't let me know, so I could have you down to my place on Long Island. Opening next week at the Riverside. O' course I got the Palace to follow.

"Well, so long, I got to be vampin'. If you're in town, be sure to catch me at the Riverside. I got a entirely new turn, with a dancing partner, and a jazz band that's a riot."

"Vi'let Harter's sure some flash!" admired Eddie, as the lady's opulent summer furs disappeared in the dinner-hour throng. "I bet them foxes nicked her for a few. It's a wonder you wouldn't keep up your street clothes better, Ef. Odd coincidence, wasn't it, me runnin' into her? We was talkin' over old times on the punkin' circuits. I'll say there's a dame's done a lot for herself! I'll say—What's the matter, don't you believe it happened like I said?"

"Why, yes, I guess so. I'm just tired, Eddie. I don't want to talk."

"Well, then," he caught her up, "you go on to the room and grab off a nap and I'll trek after a guy that owes me a tenner."

When Effie reached the Marquess, she slipped into a kimono and threw herself on the bed, but not to sleep. This meeting with Violet Harter in her husband's company was the last straw of disillusionment in her New York sojourn. Violet was an old acquaintance of Eddie's, gossip said an old flame. She had crossed the great vaudeville divide and landed where La Rock and Eaton aspired to land. How was a mystery. Talent her friends said; her enemies called it brass.

To associates in the profession Eddie was forever boasting about their friendship and he was always holding her up to his wife as a model of success. And today she had certainly looked the part. Effie couldn't help contrasting her Fifth avenue hat, and white fox furs, and fingers ablaze with "ice," with her own severely tailored turban, and serviceable serge, and lonely diamond supported by flawed emeralds. Violet had been a-glitter with Broadway shine. No wonder Eddie wanted to be seen with her. There was no harm in his talking over old times with an old friend. Yet somehow she felt vaguely frightened. Realizing this was a state of mind she must not indulge, she bathed away her fears with a hot towel and decided La Rock and Eaton must get out of New York as speedily as possible.

A week later they took up the three-a-day—sometimes four-a-day — grind where they had left off in the spring.

There was nothing in Effie's stage work to stimulate her. She simply dressed the act and fed the chatter. Wondering sometimes if the vamp bit had been so impossible, she made up her mind to stand Eddie in a corner and make him listen to her other impersonations. Of course he wouldn't let her use them; but—

The experiment was never tried. Eddie caught cold in a Turkish bath, whither he had repaired to sweat off surplus poundage. Booked into an Oklahoma oil metropolis, they played their first show with difficulty. Afterward, at the boarding-house, Eddie was stricken with dizziness and nausea.

The doctor she called pronounced it influenza and ordered him to bed. It was within an hour of the time for them to appear when she got word to the house manager. He threw up his hands in despair. "What am I going to do? My show's all shot to pieces. You're the second team on the sick list with this darned flu and my dumb act's working without their property trunks. Couldn't you go on and do a single?"

Effie's heart went into her boots. She was about to refuse, when she thought of the impending doctor's bill and the hole the manager was in.

"Aw, come on, Miss Eaton," he urged. "Just plug a couple o' song numbers and fake a little stepping."

She assented and hurried back to their room.

"First show I ever missed!" writhed Eddie. "It's an awful tough spot to put you in, little girl; but if you can just ease through, I'll be workin' again tomorrow. I suppose you got to give 'em the vamp bit and that Mary song we used for a encore. Wise the leader to cover you up if you're slippin' and don't try none o' them damned jay impersonations!"

Effie hurried back to the theater. She was switched to go on second and the manager encouraged her from the first entrance. "Hop into it, Miss Eaton, and hand it to 'em between the eyes."

She went out for the Mary song—and felt lost on the stage without the support of Eddie's flip smile and easy confidence. All through the verses she felt her throat tightening; but she stuck it out, and, after the second chorus, fled in a panic to the wings.

"You're doin' great!" cheered the boss, patting her shoulder. "Now go on back and open up your holler, 'cause they're all your friends out there."

The vamp bit came back like an old friend that begged for greeting. There was instant silence when she began, and when she snapped out of character and bowed off, the house echoed with applause.

"Some Teda Wara!"—the manager stared at her with wide eyes. "Where

Commenting on this, a correspondent writes:

"This is placing a tremendously autocratic power in the hands of medical men. Without doubt, a 'reputable physician,' within the meaning of this paragraph, is a regular union drug doctor. This will enable them to hound a man for the rest of his days, with unreliable and misleading Wassermann tests, 606, etc., and absolutely prevent cure by rational means."

Infantile Paralysis.

FOLLOWING is from Physical Culture:

"Infantile paralysis has been definitely proven to be an alimentary disorder. It comes from putrefaction of the food contents of the small and large intestine. In other words, it is due entirely to overfeeding. There is absolutely no other cause for this serious ailment. If a child is fed properly, and the alimentary canal is in that way kept clean, there is no possible chance for this serious disease to secure a foothold.

"Practically the same statement can be made in reference to nearly all ailments of children."

Mosquitoes and Malaria.

MALARIA, as the name imports, is due to bad air, caused by decaying vegetation. Mosquitoes are only incidental, but "medical science" nowadays is crazy on bugs. Clean up the swamps, and the malaria goes—also the mosquitoes.

J. H. Tilden, M.D. writes:

"Gen. Butler cleaned up New Orleans during the Civil War, and yellow fever disappeared. That was long before the mosquito was discovered to be the 'cause of the disease.' I was told by an old inhabitant of the Crescent City that he had known St. Charles street to be the dividing line in one epidemic—the disease was confined to the inhabitants living on one side of that thoroughfare. I suppose that the mosquito did not cross the street.

"The great Panama Canal drained and reclaimed a lot of swamp land. In draining that country, the mosquitoes lost their home and yellow fever had nothing left to propagate it."

Lumps in the Breast.

A PASADENA correspondent writes:

"My wife was operated on ten years ago, for a lump in one of her breasts. Now a lump has returned in the other breast."

Sure. For the cause is in the blood. Waste matter, due to overeating of mucus-forming food.

Most women have lumps in the breast at menstruation or in the menopause.

Cutting them out is medical graft and sometimes causes them to return as malignant growths or cancer.

* * *

Punishment for Profiteers.

IN HUNGARY, they administer public physical punishment to profiteers.

Not a bad idea.

It might also be applied to medical profiteers, who recommend unnecessary surgical operations, for the sake of their 33 1-3 per cent commission.

* * *

Change of Climate.

YOU cannot hope to escape your ailment by change of climate, so long as you carry your stomach—and your eating habits—with you.

Doctors send patients to other climates, when they are at a loss what to do with them.

Scaring the People.

FEAR has always been one of the greatest aids to physicians and parsons, in establishing their power over the people. Epidemic scares are especially favored by the medical fraternity. Following is an editorial in the New York Herald, under the heading "Our Summer Health Scare:"

"After the great typhus epidemic with which some of our health advisers menaced the nation early this year, disappeared from the front pages of the newspapers sane medical men and sanitarians hoped [illegible] nerves and credulity.

"It was not to be. Scarcely had the necessity for national economy begun to vacate the desks of sinecurists in Washington than the Public Health Service discovered an 'emergency' due to pellagra in the cotton States. At once the mills of publicity began to grind, and, already a good many folks are alarmed over the outlook, while a few are on the verge of that condition of panic in which a certain type of health officer takes a delight in keeping as many folks as he can.

"So excellent are the facilities of the Public Health Service for frightening the public that it is almost useless even to hope that it will fail to scare most of us in this instance. This is highly unfortunate. Pellagra is a serious disease, unfortunately endemic in certain sections of the United States. It should be studied and treated in sobriety and earnestness. The co-operation of local authorities and citizens generally with the directors of the campaign against the disease is essential to success in the

Boy Warns The Small His Mother

Many a worthy woman has cast gloom over a small boy by warning him against green apples, wet feet, etc. On behalf of the boy, we beg to call the woman's attention to the following:

"High heels menace not only the health of the women who wear them, but also the health and chances of the children these women may bring into the world."—Dr. R. Kendrick Smith, of Boston. "To overcome the forward thrust which high heels give, the body is forced to subject itself to unnatural strains. Such a posture brings about decreased respiration, a lessened richness of the blood and a less lively circulation. All the pelvic organs become congested through being thrown out of balance and pressed upon by the abdominal organs."

"Working women are the worst offenders," adds Dr. Evangeline W. Young, one of Boston's best known women physicians. "It is the girls who are on their feet most who persist in wearing the highest heels. Sensible women have learned that they can increase their efficiency and even earn bigger salaries by wearing shoes built for solid comfort and health."

And if some day your children (or your neighbor's children) are particularly annoying, let this woman writer in the New York Sun lead you to happiness—the happiness that comes from wearing sensible shoes like Cantilever Shoes.

"Sometimes the housewife's headaches are due to her shoes. There is nothing so irritating to the nerves as standing in tight or wrongly built shoes. Her cure will come by discarding the high heels and tight shoes for comfortable shoes during working hours."

do you get that stuff? Got any more?" She blushed vividly and nodded. "Well, go on, spill it."

She gave them Eddie Foy for an encore, and then, while the tumult raged, looked up at her mentor questioningly. "Do you think they'd stand for—that joss-house scene—from 'The Man Who Came Back?' "

"Stand for it! They'd eat it alive!"

She went back excited but unafraid.

For the first time in her life she was doing the thing she wanted to do and she brought to it every ounce of brains that was in her. Few in the house had ever heard of the honey-voiced siren who drank the dregs of depravity in the dens of the China coast; but when Effie finished, not many would forget her. For an instant there was that rare silence that foreshadows the spiritual element in applause; then the riot broke loose.

Impelled by a friendly hand, she bowed and bowed until she lost count. "Say, "Sarah Bernhardt"—the manager caught her and held her off puzzledly at arm's length—what're you doing in my theater! Why ain't you on Broadway?"

Then the emotional tension broke, and Effie ran sobbing to her dressing-room.

That night, in the Oklahoma bonanza town, Effie Eaton touched the heights; but the next morning she slumped back again. Though Eddie was weak as a fish, he insisted on getting up and dressing. When the doctor came, he said La Rock would have to go to the hospital where he could be kept in bed.

Next day the manager came to see him. "Say, how'd the wife get away with it?" La Rock demanded.

Effie cut short the manager's rhapsody; but as soon as she stepped out of hearing, Eddie winked at his caller. "Darned game little girl! Awf'lly nice of you to kid her along. D'you think, seein' we're a standard act, 'n' everything, mebbe they'd let her hold down the route until—"

"You bet!" assured the boss. "I'm wiring to keep her over the last half so she can be near you."

Effie wanted to stay with her husband; but the team couldn't afford to remain idle.

She wrote him every day. And he invariably answered, telling her not to worry if she "died on the boobs"—he was feeling fine and would join her in a week or so.

Then there was a three-day interval. She wrote frantically and added an extra ten-spot to her usual money order. Finally she telegraphed. At last his answer came.

"Say, Ef,"—he wrote—"what do you think you're getting away with anyway? Last Sunday I saw that piece in the Clipper. I guess there is a mistake somewhere. I never gave you no authority to change your routine, only use the vamp bit and the Mary song. You sure have made a bum out of me with the house manager here. He says you got Juliet and Elsie Janis backed off the lot, which, if true, and he ain't loco, I suppose you've already kissed me good-by. But I think you might have waited springing it till I'm out of this pest house. Eddie.

"P.S.: I got the bathrobe and the tenner. Should I thank you or does it let me down easy? Don't send no more telegrams. If I'm croaked, they'll let you know."

Effie read the letter in her dressing-room and went white at the stab of it. She suddenly recollected that Eddie was a sick man, lonely, no doubt, and blue. She sat down at once and answered it.

"Dear Grouchy Boy," she wrote him, "I've just received your letter and it's made me feel pretty bad. Leaving you or breaking up the act is the last thing I've thought of. I don't know what that was in the Clipper, but it must have been an awful blurb. I'm sorry about the impersonations, dear, but I had to do something to fill out the time. I'm perfectly willing to go back to the old routine, if you'll only hurry up and get well. Am sending you my route. Will you join me Sunday? Or shall we lay off a week in some quiet place till you're all set? Answer at once or I'll telegraph! Here's kissing you—but not good-by. Lovingly, Effie."

She posted the letter and cried herself to sleep. But when she made her next jump, there was no mail and no Eddie. A frantic week intervened. Finally she got the Oklahoma house manager on the telephone. Eddie had been discharged from the hospital three days previous and had left town.

She bought one of the trade papers and was framing a "Personal" that wouldn't reveal too much, when her eye fell on an item under caption: Engagements.

"Eddie La Rock,"—it reported—"with Violet Harter and jazz band. La Rock is reputed a nifty stepper and will strengthen the dancing end of the turn. Routed west over the Orpheum time."

Effie finally understood that her blond boy had abandoned her. There was nothing to do but forget him—as if she ever could forget him!

But the pill was bitter. It was true then: Eddie was big-time material and all this while she had been holding him back.

A month later she opened in a Chicago neighborhood house, unaware that the eyes of vaudeville were upon her in the person of a small man who chewed a black cigar in the rear of a box party of his wife's relatives. After her turn, he sent for her, and within a week Effie was tendered a contract. She came into New York via a Sunday night concert. It was an ordeal by fire, before a vast sea of blase, dare-you-to-please-me faces. But next morning the news of a new mimic spread like wildfire, and an army of press agents encamped on her humble Hotel Marquess doorstep.

After four weeks around Manhattan, she closed in June, booked solid the next season over the big time.

In a season or two Effie became a standard big-time single. Her name went up in the lights. And she headlined the Palace.

And he showed them everything from "Sunrise on the Levee," down through "Black Annie" and "Bumbershay."

She was no stranger now to white fox and diamonds. She was never quite sure that she wasn't dallying in some pleasant dreamland from which she would awaken in Calgary or Grand Island.

For three years from the day she left her husband in the hospital Effie never saw him nor heard from him. For awhile she followed his route with Violet Harter. The jazz band broke up and immediately he disappeared from the big time.

Once she encountered Violet on Broadway. This time, however, Miss Harter wore no expensive furs and her jewels were conspicuous by their absence.

"Hullo, dearie," she said. "Seems like an awfully long while since I've seen you. They tell me you're moppin' up at the Colonial this week. How's that naughty boy of yours? I s'pose you've made it up by this time. He was always expectin' you'd telegraph him."

Effie conquered her pride and asked a discreet question.

"No," denied Miss Harter, "I don't know where he is and don't want to, exceptin' it'd be to tell him what I think of him. On his wire could he join, I let out a swell dancin' partner, and inside of a week he starts makin' trouble with the band boys and behavin' like he owned the act."

Effie retired to contemplate the meager information she had obtained. Evidently, his relations with his dancing partner had been purely professional. And he was always expecting his wife would telegraph him!

Months passed. Effie was playing St. Louis. After the Monday matinee, she went around to the front of the house to have a look at a new lobby frame. As she turned the corner, she thought she saw beside a pillar of the colonnade, a mirage out of the past, of Eddie, hat battered down and cigarette draped on his lips. When she reached the pillar he was not there.

In the morning she decided to make the rounds of every theater in the city. She covered all vaudeville bills; then began on cabarets. Friday night she had reached the limit of her list; the Cafe Marigny, a noisy dance hall on a shady thoroughfare, called by courtesy a cabaret. Beside a tiny stage, a piano and a saxaphone were jazzing. She ordered a cider cup and a sandwich.

There was a momentary lull in the entertainment. Then a man stepped out from the faded velvet cyclorama—and Effie's heart stopped beating; it was the living wreck of Eddie La Rock.

He sang and his former flip assurance was now only sullen defiance. A half-dozen frowsy flappers joined him in the chorus.

Effie shut her eyes against the pain of it.

She pushed away her sandwich and called the waiter. "Your song plugger's an old friend of mine," she said steadily. "Tell him to come over."

Under cover of the dancing, she found a deserted booth and waited. At last she saw him, cigarette in hand, threading his way among the tables. Then he looked in—and the smile froze on his lips.

"Ef!"—he took a hasty step backward. "What the devil are you doin' here?"

"Sit down, Eddie," she said quietly. "Mebbe that's what I was goin' to ask you, what are you doin' here?"

"Well, go on, ask me. Though it ain't any of your business, if you got to know. I'm restin' up between bookings. But what's it to you—after the way you walked out on me in Oklahoma?"

"Walked out on you? Wasn't I payin' your hospital bills and writin' you to join me?"

"Tell that to the marines, Ef! Soon as you got out of town, didn't you chuck the whole frame-up?"

"You know I didn't! I never meant to change the routine permanent; only do the best I could until—"

"I'll say you did pretty good, Ef!" he laughed sardonically. "Some flashy baby now, ain't you? I s'pose you've come to offer me a job next week at the Palace?"

Her eyes were dim with unshed tears—of pity, not of wrath. When he had done with his taunting flings, she said simply, "Yes, Eddie, that's what I came for; to get you back in the act."

"That's a good one!" he sneered. "What'd I do on the big time? You always said I can't sing, and Vi'let Harter says I can't dance, and them big bookin' stiffs—"

"But you can dance. You could do some steps while I'm makin' my changes and—"

"Fill in your changes, huh?" He leaned forward. "And you're the coony kid that wasn't goin' to alter our routine!"

"O' course, we couldn't go back to that now. Mebbe my imitations aren't any good; but the public stands for 'em, and that's our bread and butter." She put out her hand impulsively and rested it on his. "Don't you see that I mean it, honey! That I want you back! I'll never razz you any more about playin' poker; and we can have good times like we used to, goin' to dansants, and travelin' round together."

At last she had reached him. "Say Ef," he flared, "why in the devil do you want to kid me! Ain't I dead one enough—"

"Do I look like I'd follow every route for three years that's been printed, and spill my fam'ly troubles to Vi'let Harter, and hunt out this jitney jazz joint, just to kid you?"

Unwillingly Eddie's eyes met hers. His lips parted in a sickly smile. Then his head went down in his hands. "My God, Ef," he sobbed, "you don't mean you'd take me back after all this time I been treatin' you like a dirty hound!"

"Don't honey!"—she bent over him. "There's people in the next booth."

Can't help it," he wept. "I been such a jealous dog! And here you are actin' like nothing's happened. But I ain't worth it.

"I joined with Vi'let 'cause I was sore on the hit you made—and then we had a rickus—and now—I'm a common bum. I'd just queer your stuff. Go on away and lemme be."

"What I'm worryin' about Ed, is this: do you want to come back in the act?"

"Do I want to come?" cried the prodigal fervently. "I'd go through hell to come!"

Six weeks later La Rock and Eaton were ready for their fourth assault upon New York as a vaudeville team. After an out-of-town showing to break in, their names went up in the lights on Broadway.

The interval after the St. Louis reunion was employed in getting Eddie back into form. Temperamentally this was easy. Physically it required heroic measures.

"How are you goin' to dance, Ed," she kidded him, "with a belt line like the Chicago loop!"

His new stage wardrobe was bought on Fifth avenue and when it was delivered he put it on for her benefit.

"Gee, girlie," he remarked modestly, "I look like a million dollars—and feel like thirty cents, acceptin' it off you. It's such a classy layout a person ought to have a headlight somewheres to complete the picture."

Inwardly Effie smiled, but she said with a reminiscent frown, "Darn it, honey, I hate to be stiff with you; but youre always stickin' me for coin. I ain't very flush just now, and I got them brocade slippers to buy—"

"O' course, if you're goin to tie the can on me," he reddened, "I s'pose I can go back to the Marigny."

"Before you start"—she slipped her arm cosily through his—"we better go out and hunt you a sparkler."

She left him at Forty-fourth in a boy's raptures over the "headlight." They were not sharing the same quarters. That was part of his probation. She knew he would always remain a sportive blimp, responsive to the flutter of every passing breeze. Yet if she could once rope him to the hangar—!

The hour of their Broadway opening came at last. Effie was more nervous than she had ever been in her life. But her fears were for Eddie. Well as she knew him, however, she was scarcely prepared for his nonchalance.

"Quit givin' me the gloomy stare, Ef," he guyed her, in the wings. "There ain't no ivy growin' on your honey boy today. Them new steps I got for my finish are goin' to knock 'em into the aisles."

They went on first for a short double. The house was tensely quiet as Eddie made his exit. Effie gave them her usual routine and received her usual ovation.

Then Eddie's clatter mat went down and the orchestra picked him up.

At first the audience was cold; but when they found he wasn't faking or stalling to a song, they were with him. And he showed them everything from "Sunrise on the Levee," down through "Black Annie" and "Bumbershay."

His collar was limp and beads stood out on his make-up; but he had not labored in vain. A solid hand swept the house.

A half-hour later Eddie said to her shyly, "Mind, Ef, if we shake the hard-boiled gang and take a little turn in a taxi?"

"Why, no," she answered, wondering. "Where to?"

"Anywhere," he shrugged, as they got in. "Through Central Park. Well, little girl, we're the regular show stoppers, ain't we? I guess I showed 'em I ain't one o' them single shuffle four-flushers. And in your Petrova, bit—"

For awhile Eddie babbled on; then all of a sudden, out of nowhere, he produced a satiny florist's box that disgorged an opulent corsage of violets. "Say, Ef," he mumbled sheepishly. "I thought mebbe—you'd wear these—for a celebration. They ain't bought with the jingle you been stakin' me to—honest they ain't!—but a little jack I had left in the old grouch-bag."

With the blush of a bride Effie took them. "Thanks, Eddie," she said unsteadily.

"He watched her admiringly as she pinned them on. "You're some clever baby these days, Ef! You sure are! Too bad you been tied up to such a down-and-outer.—"

"Don't, Eddie."

"Such a low-down grotto hound—"

"Now, don't."

"Such a jealous dog!"

"Please—!"

"Well, I won't, only—I want to wise you from now on I'm goin' over the jumps clean. I guess them bookin' people was right; my brains is in my feet. I—Gee, Ef, still wearin' the old hoop!"—he caught her hand impulsively and raised it to his lips and they rode on in silence. Presently, he took up the speaking tube hesitatingly. "Where'll it be, girlie? 'Home, James!' or 'Back to St. Louis!' for little Eddie?"

" 'Home James!' " she murmured.

His arms closed around her. La Rock and Eaton were framed for Broadway at last.

The daily life of the Montenegrin peasant is full of superstition. tion of this disease. These popular dances of today, that have crept now even into the upper social circles, and, in some places, are being danced even in the churches, have come up from the underworld. They take their very names and movements from the lower animals, and they were originated in the slums of New York, Chicago, New Orleans, San Francisco, London, Paris and the degenerate cities of the Orient." Gonorrhoea.

GONORRHOEA is never cured by drugs or dope. The poison is merely driven back into the blood, where it lies, awaiting a chance for nature to expel it. Then medical science again promptly proceeds to suppress the curative efforts. And so on, until the unfortunate patient succumbs, not to the disease, but to the medical poisons.

Dr. George Starr White writes:

"If one has been treated for gonorrhoea, while their system was impregnated with nicotine or alcohol, the gonorrhoea toxemias will persist indefinitely, or until the nicotine, or alcohol, is first eradicated. Nicotine and alcohol both seem to act as binders to hold gonorrheocal toxemias in the system. . . .

"There is only one way to curb venereal diseases, and that is through education. Every doctor should feel it his duty to educate his patients along these lines. Little by little, parents will see the importance of proper education.

"Diet has as much to do in the control of venereal diseases as exciting reading, though hardly ever a word is said regarding 'exciting foods.' No case of gonorrhoea can be cured if nicotine or alcohol is in the system. The sooner all physicians realize this the better.

"There are many natural methods of curing gonorrhoea, but the diet must be the first thought. Get the system well cleaned out and keep it clean and simple methods will do the rest.

The Farmer.

THE farmer is the only indispensable member of society. Cities are excrescenses. We could do without them.

In many countries, during the war, this fact was brought home to the people. Farmers lived well, while city people were half starved.

It has been fashionable to sneer at the farmer. There are signs indicating that before long the laugh will be on the other side. The farmer is beginning to assert himself.

So far as mortal can be so, the farmer is omnipotent, but like the elephant, he does not know his power. When he is thoroughly organized, city people will have to behave—or starve.

* * *

Toxemia

FOLLOWING is from the Philosophy of Health:

"People live in such a manner as to enervate themselves, which causes imperfect elimination. They then retain the excretions, which further enervate and poison the system. This poisoning is insidious. As a result, secretions are inhibited—first of those organs which, by inheritance, occupation, or depressing habits, are below the systemic standard. To the retained excretions are added those of fermentation, simple and septic, which are absorbed from imperfect digestion, made possible by a reduction of enzymic power. This state is chronic toxemia, which is demonstrable, and can be proved the foundation of all diseases."

Quarantine Regulations.

THE quarantine regulations, established by the Public Health Service, give autocratic power to physicians, who may be wise, or otherwise. Here is an extract from "Travel of Venereally Infected Persons:"

"8—(a.) Any person infected with syphilis, gonorrhea, or chancroid who wishes to engage in interstate travel must first obtain a permit, in writing, from the local health officer under whose jurisdiction he resides. This permit shall state that, 'in the opinion of the health officer,' such travel is not dangerous to the public health.

"(b.) Any person infected with syphilis, gonorrhea, or chancroid who wishes to change his residence from one State to another must first obtain his release, in writing, from the local health officer. He shall inform the local health officer as to the place where he intends to reside, and shall agree, in writing, to report in person to the proper health officer within one week after arrival at his new residence. It shall be the duty of the health officer who issues the release to promptly notify the health officer under whose jurisdiction the infected person is to enter of its issue. This release shall contain the name and address of the infected person. The receiving health officer shall, in turn, report the arrival of the infected person to the health officer who issued his release and notify the State health officer in his State that a person infected with venereal disease has entered his jurisdiction.

AT GRIPS WITH DEATH IN TRAPPING JUNGLE BEASTS

BY CHARLES MAYER.

(ILLUSTRATIONS BY WILL CRAWFORD.)

ELEPHANTS are easily trained and, when they once get the idea of what is expected of them, they will do it over and over with little variation. A trick or a certain kind of work immediately becomes a habit with them. In fact, they can form habits more rapidly than any other animals I have ever seen.

In Burma there are large lumber mills, and elephants are used for rolling the logs into position for the saws. Pushing with their heads, they run the logs up two inclined skids to the platform. Two elephants do the pushing and a third elephant acts as boss. The boss need not be an especially intelligent animal; he is simply taught that the log must go up the skids in a certain way and that the two pushers must be kept even. In his trunk he carries a few links of anchor chain, which he uses as a whip. If one elephant falls behind, the boss gives him a rap with the chain. When the log is on the platform, the pushers turn and plod back for another. The boss elephant is quite unimpressed by his authority, and the others show no resentment when he swings the chain on them.

When the whistle blows, the elephants know that it is time to stop work and eat. It makes no difference if they have a log within a fraction of an inch of the platform: the boss drops his anchor chain and gets out of the way, and the pushers step to one side, letting the log crash down again. Then, without the least expression of interest, they turn for the stalls. Because they obey signals so mechanically, the engineer steps out, when feeding-time comes, and looks up and down the runway to see if an elephant crew has a log on the skids. If so, he waits until it reaches the platform before he pulls the whistle-cord.

The great weight and bulk of elephants sometimes make difficult the problem of handling and especially of shipping them. They are usually hoisted over the side of the ship in slings, but that method takes much time and labor, not to speak of very strong tackle. I did not evolve a new one, however, until the refusal of the captain of one of the British India Steam Navigation Company's boats to take a consignment of elephants for me put my ingenuity to the test.

I was under contract to send fifteen large elephants to Madras, and I had arranged with the company's agent at Singapore for three shipments of five each. The animals were the remainder of the Trengganu herd and I was anxious to see them shipped, for I was still sick with the fever. The doctors had told me that the best thing I could do was to leave the country and recuperate, and any delay in disposing of the animals meant a great sacrifice of either money or health.

The first five elephants, together with attendants and food, were waiting back of the sheds at Tanjong-Pagar, the docks at Singapore, to be put on board. At the last moment the chief officer came with the message that the captain refused to take them.

I went to the captain's cabin and found a stout, red-faced and apparently good-natured Englishman. He was just out of his bath, wearing pajamas and idling about in his cabin until the ship was ready to get under way. I thought it a good time to approach him, and I took care to be quite calm and cool about it, although I was raging inside.

I showed him my receipt and the bill of lading given me by the agent. He replied that the agent was not captain of the ship; he didn't care what agreement the agent had made. So long as he was captain, he'd run his ship to suit himself, and all agents could go to the devil, for all he cared. And, moreover, he'd not carry elephants—not for any one. I explained my position and told him that it would mean a great financial loss to me if I failed on my contract to deliver the elephants.

"Look here, Mayer," he said, "I've handled elephants at Calcutta and I've always had a lot of trouble with them. If I load these elephants, it means that I have to rig up extra gear, and I won't do it."

"Captain," I replied, "I'll load those elephants without using a foot of rope. I'll put them anywhere you say, and you won't have to rig up a bit of gear. And I'll unload them at Madras in the same way. Will you say the word?"

"I don't think you can do it," he answered, "but I'm enough of a sportsman to give you a chance."

That was all I wanted. I got out before he could ask me how I was going to work, for I couldn't have told him.

The elephants were to go in the bow and they had to be taken there through a seven-foot passage from amidships. The smallest of the elephants measured fully seven feet and the largest more than eight. I decided that we might as well try the largest first, and I asked that the electric bulbs be removed from the ceiling.

After some coaxing and prodding, we got the first elephant up the gangplank. The others followed obediently. Then I asked the chief officer to clear the cabins along the passage, for I was afraid that some one might open a door and frighten the elephant. A frightened, stampeded, eight-foot elephant in a seven-foot passage would give Singapore enough excitement to last for a year. The chief officer sent the people from the cabins and locked the doors.

The elephant balked at sight of the passage. I was at his head, talking to him and coaxing him, and two attendants were behind, prodding. We made him kneel and then urged him forward. At last we got him into the passage. It was a tight fit. His sides scraped the walls. I gasped at the thought of what would happen if he suddenly became afraid. He would try to stand up, of course, an then, wedged in, he would begin to kick and lunge his way out; and the other four, who were close behind him, would do the same. "And then, good-by, steamship," I said to myself. Slowly we made our way forward, with the five elephants hobbling along on their knees. I stayed close to the head of the first, talking to him and petting him. Finally we came to the end of the passage, and I drew the first deep breath in fifteen minutes. I took the venture simply as a matter of course, and I didn't say anything that gave the captain an idea of what my emotions had been in that passage; but Ali looked at me and I looked at Ali, and there was no need of words.

I washed and went to the captain's cabin for breakfast, while the men secured the elephants in their quarters.

The captain said, "Mayer, that was the quickest and slickest thing I've ever seen, but what am I going to do with those animals at Madras?"

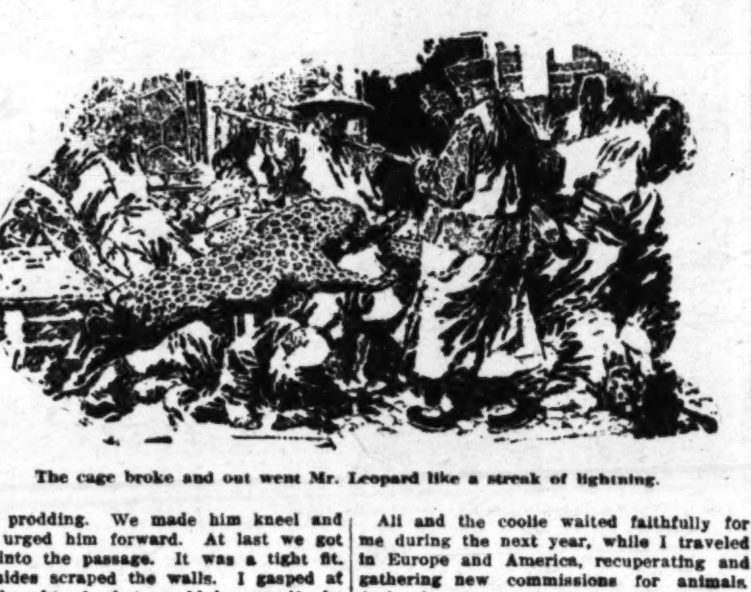
I knew that there were no docks at Madras and that all freight was unloaded into lighters, but I answered, "My men will attend to them."

When the ship reached Madras, the attendants opened the doors and simply backed the elephants overboard. They hit the water with a great splash and a roar and came up blowing like whales. They were swimming, of course, for elephants swim better than any other land animals I have ever seen. The attendants approached them in rowboats, and, jumping on their backs, rode them to shore. By the time they reached land, they had completely recovered from the excitement of falling overboard.

The captain returned to Singapore, enthusiastic over this new way of handling elephants, and I had the pleasure of shipping my last consignment to Madras on his ship. He advised me never to take an agent's word for what the captain of a ship will or will not do, and, after that experience, I always saw the captain first and the agent second.

By the time I had disposed of the last of my elephants, I was so sick with the fever that I could not leave my bed. I was dangerously ill and I began to realize that I should be lucky if I escaped with my life.

Mr. Lambert, who had been my friend ever since I landed at Singapore to enter the animal business, engaged passage for me on a steamer bound for Europe, and took charge of the affairs of my animal house in Orchard Road. When it was time to go to the steamer, my Chinese coolie boy carried me. He is the only Chinese I have ever seen cry; the tears rolled down his cheeks as he carried me up the gangplank and to my cabin, for he thought that he should never see me again. I rather thought so myself, but I figured that if they didn't drop me into the Red Sea, which is the last resting place of so many people who have stayed too long in the tropics, I should recover and live to return.



The cage broke and out went Mr. Leopard like a streak of lightning.

Ali and the coolie waited faithfully for me during the next year, while I traveled in Europe and America, recuperating and gathering new commissions for animals. And, when I came back, they were on the dock to welcome me.

Though my health was much improved by the voyage, I did not feel able to resume the active business of collecting, and so I concentrated my efforts upon my animal house and made it the largest place of its kind. I had a monopoly of the business. Mahommed Ariff, who had a large number of native collectors working for him, did much of his dealing through me, and I had no difficulty in disposing of all the animals brought in from the jungles by our various agents. My largest market was Australia, where I could sell the animals f.o.b. Singapore without any of the risk of transportation. Also, I made shipments to Hagenbeck of Germany and Cross of Liverpool. Because of the high import duty, I sent comparatively few of my animals to the United States.

John Anderson, who was European adviser to the King of Siam and who had been created a Siamese nobleman, sent for me and offered me a commission that kept me busy for the next five years. The King of Siam was in the habit of making presents of wild animals to foreign rulers, and it became my work to select the animals and supervise all details of shipment. I was sent to interview the Minister of the Interior, H. H. Prince Damerong, who gave me a permit to travel wherever I pleased in Siam and to force labor. In Siam I directed many hunts, especially for tuskers to be used in the teak forests. The driving was done entirely during the daytime, and on elephants, instead of on foot, as in Trengganu. The fever had left me in bad condition, and so I did not take an active part in the work.

On my trips between Bangkok and Singapore I stopped off many times at Trengganu to renew my acquaintance with the Sultan and to talk with the native hunters, who were sending a steady stream of animals to me at Singapore. I was known to the natives throughout the peninsula as Tuan Gajah—Sir Elephant—and I was amused to find that the story of the big elephant hunt had grown to incredible proportions. The herd of sixty elephants became larger each time the story was told.

After one exciting incident in the work of shipping animals for the King of Siam, I was allowed full authority. We were sending a pair of beautifully matched leopards to the Emperor of Austria, and they had reached Singapore in two large, poorly constructed cages. Mr. Anderson was there, and we disagreed on the advisability of recaging them. I thought that the cages looked weak and I wished to have my Chinese carpenter build two that would be smaller and stronger. Mr. Anderson, however, was impatient to start the leopards on their voyage, and, since he was boss, we loaded the cages on bullock-carts and headed for the docks. In unloading one of the bullock-carts the natives allowed the case to slide to the ground too heavily; the cage broke, and out went Mr. Leopard like a flash of lightning, heading straight for the Chinese quarter. The Chinese saw him coming, and a panic started. They tumbled over one another in getting out of the way, and two of them were scratched. The leopard was quite as frightened as any of the Chinese. The natives in charge of the bullock-cart came running for me, and I went to the Chinese quarter to find the leopard. He had taken refuge in a house, and I finally discovered him hiding under the stairs, his eyes shining in the darkness. Since it was impossible to get rid of the mob of Chinese and recaging under the circumstances would have been too dangerous, we had to shoot the animal. We took the other leopard back to Orchard Road and built a new cage.

In 1902, just before the rainy season, I was resting in Singapore after six months of hard work. Just as I had almost decided to go to Europe, I happened to see in an old copy of the New York Clipper an advertisement of a steam merry-go-round. That gave me an idea; there had never been a merry-go-round in the Malay Peninsula, and I was confident enough of my judgment of Malay nature to gamble that it would be a success. Mr. Lambert didn't agree with me. "Forget about it," he advised. "Take the steamer and have a good vacation." But I went to the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank and cabled $2000 in gold to the factory at North Tonawanda, New York, with instructions to ship me the merry-go-round on the first boat, via London. It arrived nine weeks later, and it cost me £110 in freight. The rain was beating down steadily in Singapore, and so I transshipped it to Penang.

A few days later, I was in Penang, driving around in a rickshaw, looking for a good location, while the merry-go-round, still in crates, was coming ashore in sampans. Opposite the Hotel de la Paix I found a good open space, and I routed out of bed the Chinese merchant who owned it. I told him that I should like to rent the lot for a show and that, if he would come to terms with me, I would let him and his family ride free of charge. Now a Chinese likes a show better than anything else on earth, and so we were not long in closing a bargain. I was to pay him a rental of $1 Mexican a day and to have an option of two months on the lot. I had no paper on which to write out the agreement, and so, since I didn't want him to change his mind, I paid him $30 for one month, writing the receipt in my pith helmet. He signed in my hat; then we pasted a stamp on it and canceled the stamp by writing the date across it.

When Ali and my coolie boy were getting the merry-go-round unloaded, I collected a gang of laborers and an engineer. All that day we worked at uncrating the merry-go-round and putting it together. The natives stood around, watching us and speculating as to what this strange new thing could possibly be. The merry-go-round ran on wheels on a track and the horses were connected with eccentrics, which worked them up and down; a good loud organ was connected by a belt with one of the wheels. The merry-go-round carried fifty-six people.

I began business on the Chinese New Year's Day. The merry-go-round was the vampires, who are a product of recent years (imported from France chiefly) and of course unknown and therefore unheeded by the mothers.

"The vampires find their victims in innocent girls who patronize 'beauty shops' merely to get a hair shampoo, or a face bleach, or some manicure work done.

"The vampire begins by calling the girl's attention to the soft, downy hairs, which are a natural growth on every girl's face and arms. She recommends a depilatory powder to be applied for removal of those hairs; telling the girl that it is quite harmless, etc., etc.

"Soon the girls realize that the hair growth is no longer downy, and is getting too strong for removal with madame's powder. Then the woman recommends something stronger. The hairs keep getting stronger too, and assume heavy growth—especially if the victim has a tendency to dark hair, and most of the victims have.

"Finally, the girls get desperate and of necessity must resort either to regular shaving, or to the dangerous and highly expensive practice of electro treatment

"There are Madame Vampires who profess to have a special remedy for permanent removal without electro treatment; and I know of several girls who have paid from $50 to several hundred dollars for such treatment, only to prove that the 'removal' was not permanent at all. Yet the victims—afraid of the publicity involved—keep still. And Madame Vampire has so far escaped punishment.

"I recently had evidence against one such woman who has made several girls miserable for the rest of their lives, but in no single instance can I prevail on the girls to start a damage suit.

"It is pitiful to learn how the girls endeavor to hide their trouble from young men, and even from each other. Some of them in despair, have learned to obscure their misery by clouds of cigarette smoke. Others succumb to the drug habit, and there are still others unaccounted for.

"What is to become of the next generation?"

Childbirth.

APPROXIMATELY 28 per cent of the more than 20,000 annual deaths incident to childbirth could be prevented, delegates to the convention of the American Association of Obstetricians, Gynecologists and Abdominal Surgeons, were told by Dr. A. M. Mendenhall, instructor in obstetrics at the University of Indiana.

Approximately 90 per cent of such deaths could be avoided, not by surgery, but by teaching mothers how to live during pregnancy, so as to insure easy deliveries and healthy children.

The Next War.

MAJ.-GEN. SIR WILLIAM S. BRANCHER of England predicts that the next war will come in five years, and without warning.

One of the scenes of Shaw's "Back to Methuselah" is laid in the year A.D. 3000. A woman is telling of events that happened more than a thousand years before. She says:

"A thousand years ago, when the whole world was given over to you short-lived people, there was a war called the War to End War. In the war which followed it, about ten years later, none of the soldiers were killed; but seven of the capital cities of Europe were wiped out of existence. It seems to have been a great joke; for the statesmen who thought they had sent 10,000,000 common men to their deaths were themselves blown into fragments, with their houses and families, while the 10,000,000 men lay snugly in the caves they had dug for themselves. Later on, even the houses escaped; but their inhabitants were poisoned by gas that spared no living soul.

"Of course the soldiers starved, and ran wild; and that was the end of pseudo-Christian civilization."

"Sexitis."

DR. JOHN R. STRATON, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, New York, believes that over-emphasis of sex is the main menace to modern morals, following in the wake of the World War. In the Dearborn Independent he writes:

"To give it a brief biological name, we might call it 'sexitis.' It is the undue [illegible]

"[illegible] is simply a distortion of the high and holy relationships which God has established, and their perversion to base, selfish and unholy ends. We see illustrations of this malady on every hand. We find it in the literature of the day. Many of the novels which attain to the dignity even of 'best sellers' are not only full of sickly sentimentality, but of such sordid realism that they ought not to be allowed in the hands of any pure girl or any developing boy.

"We find a manifestation of this modern malady in an acute and extreme form in the theater—both in the so-called legitimate drama (now a misnomer) and in the movies. The bedroom farces, the display of lingerie and the risque dialogue of the modern stage are the outward manifestations of this disease. And, when it comes to the movies, the playhouses throughout the land are simply seeking with it. . . .

"The modern dance, also, is a manifesta-

MARIA'S HALLOWE'EN

By Florence Allen MacIntyre

IT WAS Halloween—that night of nights when the superstitious shudder and the young clamor for a glimpse into the future! There were parties everywhere tonight and as the wind blew in the direction of Maria's home, faint strains of music were wafted to her ears.

Maria had tasted of love. She did not want to peer into the future. She longed to live in the past, to dwell upon memories that were sacred indeed. Perhaps it was for this very reason that she had sent "regrets" to the kindly hostesses who asked her to their Halloween festivities.

To keep back memories of other, happier Halloweens she decided to spend the evening cleaning out a closet that badly needed attention.

Maria occupied a big, old-fashioned room atop her father's house, the very same room used by her brother for a study during his college days. A jumble of trash met her eyes as she jerked open the heavy closet door. If brother would only come home and take away some of those relics of his bachelor days! Things certainly were in a mess, and it was only romantic Maria's regard for the sentimental which kept her from applying the torch long since. One had to be patient!

"Well, there's no use crying over it," she sighed and removed heaps of clothing from hooks and nails, segregating good garments from hopeless ones, placing the old rubbers and shoes in a box and lastly consigning a number of hats, once proud to be seen on the avenue, to a rubbish heap.

The evening wore on, still there was the big cedar chest to tackle. That would make a splendid shirt-waist box once it was cleaned out. The chest had not been opened in a long, long while. Somewhere in the distant past the little key had been lost, so the hasp was made secure by a short, smooth stick. She pulled it out and laid back the cover.

Relics of school days greeted her eyes. For a moment Maria, still in her twenties, felt old. It seemed a long time back to the days when these things were in active service. There was a once white evening tie, crumpled and yellow now—a broken kewpie with remnants of a bridal veil, sweaters, college flags, a punctured rugby ball, photographs of flapper girls and whatnot. Two or three bound books were sandwiched in this jumble of things, and at the very bottom there were several, brown-covered, neatly labeled notebooks, Maria shuffled them around.

"Well, of all things!" she found herself exclaiming, "if here isn't the very notebook I typed for brother and the one which received first prize." She sat upon the bed and began turning the pages. What memories the little book awakened. She thought back to that proud memorable night of her brother's graduation. How splendid the boys looked in their caps and gowns as they marched through the auditorium to receive those well-earned diplomas. She remembered the groups of adoring schoolgirls, giggling as the Adonis of each one's fancy reached forth like a victor to receive his laurels. Gentle mothers wept tears of joy that night. Stern fathers swelled with pride and swallowed hard as their boys were complimented by the professors.

So different was all now. Little did these doting ones realize then how short some of the splendid careers were to be cut! The war had come and gone and left its little tale of tragedy among the group.

On Flanders Fields the shining light of Maria's own dreams had been snuffed out—her own dear David Compton died there to make the world safe for democracy. It was then she laid away her treasured trousseau—but she must not think of that, she had promised herself—she had promised God she would not! Hers was not the only great sorrow that the war had left in its wake. There was Keller who threatened to be among the great surgeons of the age—he was blinded and teaching in an institution for the sightless. And Don who had left his sweetheart wife with a tiny one in her arms—he too had given his all fighting the deadly typhus in Serbia. There was Ryan, even though he left his strong right arm somewhere in France, had come back so full of medals one could scarcely see the front of his coat—but, he always was a daredevil Irishman! And Vince, poor old kid, he had gone over to try and forget the girl who proved so unworthy of his big, real love. It didn't make a bit of difference to him how many ambulances they shot from under him. "He should worry," he told his superior officer that night at Chateau Thierry when he earned for himself the Croix de Guerre.

So it was. She could go on down the line. Her own dear brother whose very room she occupied, had seen some of the hell of it, but he had come through safe—thank God. What comfort his knowledge of medicine and surgery brought to those agonized souls on the battlefields. That was something to be cheerful about!

She thumbed the notebook meditatively. The room reeked of memories tonight. Happy, happy times when as boys and girls they hustled off on Halloween to frat dances. Excitement permeated the household on these occasions. Dear mother was beloved by all the college "bunch," for her big heart and hospitable door were ever open to them.

There were nights of hard work in this room, too. Often at midnight Maria, always popular with the boys, stole up to them with black coffee and something good to nibble on while they crammed through the long hours studies that had been neglected for happier pursuits.

Silently she turned the pages of the book until her eye rested on a page labeled "The Human Frame." It recalled the day the boys brought home a complete human skeleton to study, and placed it in the closet. And that had cost the family a perfectly good maid. No one thought of warning poor Annie about the skeleton in the closet, and when with all the might of her strong Teutonic arm she jerked open the door, there was just one piercing shriek, and they found her at the bottom of the staircase. Poor mother felt so badly. She did not know of the skeleton in the closet either. When she investigated she shuddered. Her big blue eyes filled with tears and she breathed the little prayer that was in her Christian heart: "Lord have mercy on the poor fellow, whoever he was—may his soul rest in peace!"

"Oh, happy days, gone forever more," Maria was sobbing. Her head felt so queer. She had been working hard at the office—she was nervous, hysterical—there was an intense silence in the room, and then. . . .

Stealthily, slowly, surely, the window in the bathroom was raised. Something dark, unrecognizable was seated at the foot of her bed. There was a moldy smell about everywhere. The dark thing was taking shape. In another moment it stood up.

"Good Heavens!" she exclaimed, "it's the skeleton—the same one the boys brought home one cold night years ago!"

But tonight it was robed in a big black cloak with deep folds and gathers and a white cord held it snugly about the waist.

Maria tried to scream. Her voice seemed paralyzed. The uncanny thing raised its finger:

"Don't be afraid, little one," he said, "I know I'm not much to look at now, but believe me, I had a heart as big as a house. Long since I've dropped all those things. Why I wouldn't harm a hair of your head. A fellow may lose his flesh, but never his disposition. Please don't fear me!"

"What do you want?" Maria found courage to ask.

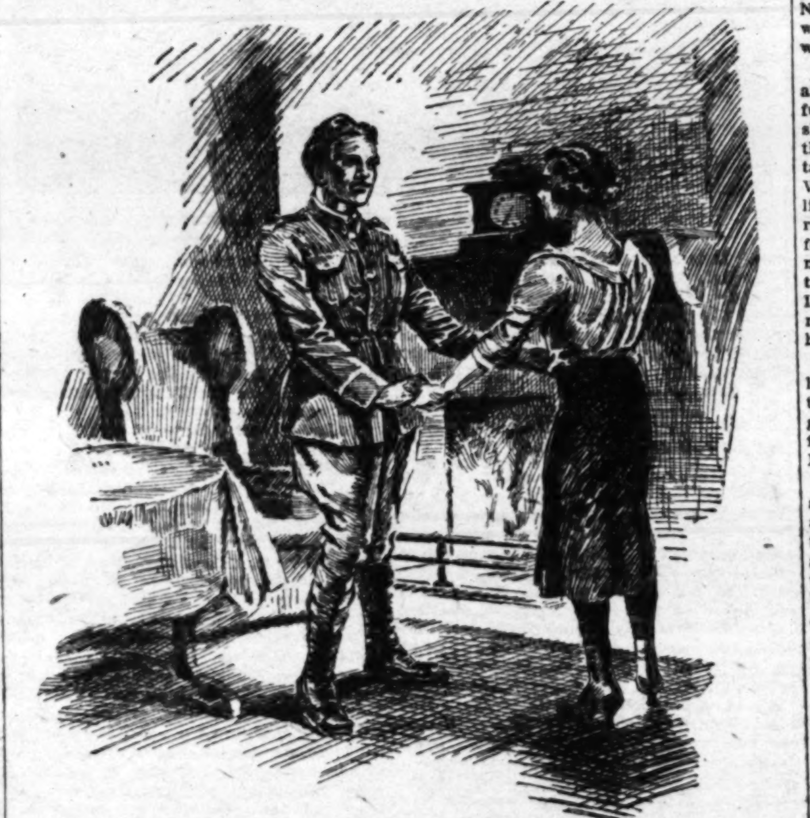
He noticed her shudder. "Ah, you are afraid of me—if only I could reassure you. Night after night for years I've waited patiently for someone to open that chest—you know, the one you cleaned tonight. I came for I thought you would help me. Listen and don't fear." He continued:

"Four years ago I made the acquaintance of your brother, you know, the doctor. I was a cold corpse laying in the morgue. Nobody knew me, nobody cared, so, before they shipped my poor carcass off to Potter's Field your brother requested my right limb, from the knee down. He wanted to study my tibia bone. It was a great compliment, believe me, girlie," he said reminiscently, "with all the other dead ones there that night to have him pick on me! I never did anything for this old world while I had the flesh and I sure was glad of my opportunity to do something for science. It made me feel that I hadn't lived or rather died, in vain. There is some consolation in that."

"You are a good fellow," Maria replied. His philosophy seemed so true to life.

"I knew I'd win your confidence once I got talking with you," he replied, "it's always been my game."

He was anxious to get to his subject. "Tonight is the night of the big frolic on the high hills of Woodlawn. The moon has promised to be there, and the wind will be our orchestra. We are going to dance. I do so want to dance, but you must know that its rather hard to get along without my tibia. I'm tired of being a tomb flower—that's the same as a wall flower in the flesh, you know. One can't lean on his imagination always," he said gleefully, and chopped his jaws together as if relishing his own pun!



She held him off at arm's length and surveyed him from head to foot.

"Where is your tibia?" asked the shuddering Maria.

"In the very bottom of that cedar chest which you opened tonight. Look," he commanded, raising one end of his cloak and showing the girl a black and spongy bone broken off at the knee. "You will get it for me, won't you?" he urged.

"If you promise to sit right here—I couldn't stand having you hover over me in the closet," and she rose from the bed and walked across the room, keeping an ever-watchful eye on the uncanny one.

"I give you my word of honor," he promised.

With heart pounding and the blood fairly oozing through her temples, Maria rooted through the chest. At the very bottom toward the back her hand touched something hard and cold. Yes, thank her stars, that was it!

"Here," she exclaimed, holding up the bone triumphantly.

"Ah, you're a prince—or rather a queen. Now I can join them at the frolic." There was a rattling sound and she supposed he was laughing.

"Since the great dancer fell from the airplane," he explained, "we have wonderful times on the green. When the moon shines and the world sleeps we meet on the topmost hill up there and some fantastic steps we have been taught to do. We take hands, form a circle and romp like children. Oh, it's great, it's great," he rambled on delightedly, "but you can see for yourself that I've been out of it minus my tibia. Never mind, I'll have a good time now." Then he became solemn. "Ah, I can make that long journey some night now, I've wanted to go back to my old home so badly, just once."

He was looking squarely at Maria and his gaze held her in a grip of terror. The two holes which once had been eyes were glaring at her. A light seemed to shine from the smaller holes in the eye sockets. Maria winced.

"Why don't you come with me tonight and see the frolic?" he questioned. "There are many hours left. It would be such a treat to have someone among us with flesh and blood and warmth," and he made as if to touch the girl's soft white body with his bony fingers. She jumped unconsciously and tucked the quilt about her limbs more snugly.

"Please don't," she begged.

"Come with me—it's only a step to the cemetery, come and see what good times we have."

Maria did not have courage to refuse. "Oh, my hair isn't combed, and, and . . ." she stammered.

"That's nothing," he waved aside her argument, "slip on your big coat and come."

It was a command. What would he do to her if she dared disobey? She grabbed her coat and followed, sick with fright.

It was not far from her house to Woodlawn. She thought of those bright sunshiny days when she would jump into the family car and motor through the beautiful green resting place. It was so different now. The wind howled, the night was cloudy. What horrible fate was driving her on to be a guest at this festival of specters?

"We can't go in the big gate, but there's a crack in the fence," and he pushed her through it before she realized what was happening.

He raised a fleshless hand as though to shade his eyes from the moonlight and looked high up the hill. There was dead silence.

"Ha, they thought I wouldn't be back tonight," he apologized as she too gazed up to see only the calm still mounds bathed in moonlight. "They wouldn't start the party without me. Good fellows, good fellows!"

They continued their journey up the hill. Maria was nearly exhausted but she plodded diligently on. They stood outside a magnificent marble mausoleum. The skeleton advanced and peered through the iron grating of the tomb. The moon had peeped from behind the black cloud which had covered it for a moment and its beam

Bread.

THE editor of the Baker's Weekly has discovered that bakers' bread is losing its flavor. He thinks the bakers and millers should get together, and find out what the matter is. He writes:

"Every school child knows that wheat really does contain an excellent nutty flavor. And it is for the baking industry to discover where this much desired flavor, so agreeable to the palate, has disappeared to. Is it possible that the grower of the wheat, in his desire for material success, neglects a very important element to insure the continuance of this flavor in the wheat? We refer to the fertilizing of the ground. The price of fertilizers has gone up tremendously. Is it not just possible that the farmer has grown a bit careless in this very important task of his?"

Is it not astounding that these men who prepare one of our most important foods, should not know why it is lacking in flavor?

It is not the farmers who are to blame. The wheat is all right. It is the millers, who have been gradually refining their product—removing the essential life and mineral elements—until it is little but starch.

A man would die sooner on super-refined white flour than when fasting entirely.

Compare this insipid starvation food with sweet, nutty, crisp brown bread, containing all the vital elements of the berry. To make such stuff palatable at all, they have to add milk, sugar and salt, and then the eater adds butter and sometimes jam, on top of that.

Is it any wonder that so many children get sick?

While the government is so strictly regulating what we shall drink, how about what we eat?

There are a few mills in the United States that are making real flour. One was started recently in Los Angeles. They meet with much opposition from "vested interests."

It is said that white bread was introduced by an epicurean faddist of London, who gave a "white dinner," over a hundred years ago. He had much difficulty in getting the bread made.

Experiments made on mice and dogs have shown that in less than two months those fed on white flour were nearly dead, while those fed on equal amounts of whole wheat flour were "alive and kicking."

"Improved" patent process flours not only remove the bran and the mineral elements beneath, but also the germ, which is sold separately, in packages, thus bringing the "staff of life" a step nearer to a starvation food.

Dr. Harvey Wiley, formerly chief chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture, in a speech before the New York Academy of Medicine, during the war said:

"I have the official data before me concerning the percentage of rejects of conscripts which the government expects to have to deal with. The millers who impose white bread upon the nation have worked an evil the magnitude of which we are now about to deal with.

"The only conceivable remedy for the future lies in unimpoverished cereal foods. We now know, through scientific research, that all the diseases that can be classed as neuritis, pellagra, beriberi, acidosis, anaemia, and the various forms of malnutrition which in one way or another resemble these diseases, are caused by the consumption of highly milled grain. They are deficiency diseases, and the only way to overcome them is to add to the diet the things that the millers take away.

"Our breadstuff is dead food. It has no soul. We cannot do our duty by our soldiers or by the soldiers of our allies by supplying them with 81 per cent bread. I say this with all the earnestness of my soul: 'Woe to this nation unless it succeeds in shaking off the commercial parasites who have fastened themselves upon its physical body. Woe to this nation unless it reestablishes the fundamentals of nutrition, which white flour and denatured cereal foods have broken down.'"

Several years ago Dr. Charles E. Banks, senior surgeon of the United States Public Health Service, said:

"There is a campaign among the millers of wheat and interests allied to them to discredit efforts to persuade people to prefer whole wheat bread to white bread.

"Present methods of milling utilize 75 per cent of the grain, and this is almost exclusively the starchy part; the other 25 per cent, containing the phosphorus and other mineral salts, vitamines, etc., is sold by the millers as feed for hogs and cattle. These grow fat on it, for they are getting the best part of the wheat.

"The diet of white bread is responsible for Americans of today being pale and anaemic in youth and fat and flabby at 40, whereas their grandparents, who ate whole wheat bread, were strong and athletic."

It is difficult to get good entire wheat bread. So-called graham bread is often made of low grade flour, with a little bran and molasses. Unfermented bread is usually heavy and indigestible."

Swedish "rye crisp"—made in Minnesota—is a wholesome form of bread.

Not more than a third of the people of the world eat bread. Americans eat altogether too much cereal food, making their bodies acid, the cause of many serious ills.

Eat more vegetables, and less bread.

The Germ Fallacy.

A FEW weeks ago I quoted several eminent physicians on the germ superstition. Here is another witness—Walter R. Hadwen, M.D., of England, who recently visited Los Angeles. Besides his medical degree, Dr. Hadwen is a Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians, member of the Royal College of Surgeons, and Licentiate of the College of Apothecaries. He also holds two gold medals for medicine and surgery. Following is a contribution sent by Dr. Hadwen to the Care of the Body, before he left Los Angeles:

"The past year has been fruitful in surprises. It has also been a year of fulfilment of prophecies. The surprises consist in the fact that the gigantic claims made by the bacteriologists concerning the germ theory of disease, which has accounted for about 95 per cent of the shameful experiments carried out annually upon living animals, have completely broken down.

"It has been admitted by leading vivisectors and bacteriologists: (1.) That germs are not specific; that is, that they cannot be guaranteed to originate specific disease in a healthy body; that they are the normal inhabitants of bodies healthy and unhealthy; that they undergo morphological changes which bacteriologists cannot explain consistently with their theories; and that in their altered shape and characteristics these germs are associated with diseases altogether different from those to which they have been accredited.

"(2.) That the so-called poison (or 'toxin') which these discredited pathologic germs were supposed to emit, cannot be identified, and that the antitoxin, which this imaginary toxin was supposed to be the means of inducing in the blood, cannot be proved to exist. Thus, at one fell sweep, the whole financial edifice of vaccine and serum therapy, with its diphtheria, tetanus, typhoid and other 'antitoxins' and 'vaccines,' crumbles to the ground and all the statistics built upon it, which were so arranged as to show the salvation of millions of lives, constitute a pure unadulterated myth.

"(3.) That the blood of 'immunised' animals is found to possess no virtues superior to that of any ordinary animal; for the blood of the latter is now declared by scientists to be just as 'efficacious' as that of an animal which has been saturated with germs, and to produce similar results when injected into the body. 'Artificial immunity by innoculation,' which has been acclaimed for the last half century, is therefore an illusion.

"(4.) That germs do not remain in the blood when injected into it. After a time they cannot be found there; they rapidly escape, it is alleged, to definite parts in the body, where they locate themselves; therefore all the miracles attributed to their action while in the blood must have been mere phantasies of the scientific brain.

"(5.) That most germs are quite harmless, and even those which are declared to be dangerous have in themselves no power to hurt. The most dangerous of all—tetanus and gas-gangrene—if washed clean of their environment, are acknowledged to produce no effect at all.

"These are some of the salient confessions made, upon the highest authority, during the last twelve months.

"Hundreds of thousands of sensitive creatures have been tortured, to no purpose, except that of gratifying the passing whims of scientific adventurers. Many years ago I foretold that the discovery of 'pseudo-bacilli' (that is, that there were harmless germs so exactly like the so-called dangerous ones that they could not be distinguished one from the other) was the beginning of the end of this wild phantasy, and that this was but a vain attempt of the bacteriologists to save their face over the germ theory of disease. Our prophecy has come true. Every flimsy excuse has now broken down, and this mad Pasteurian craze will stand as a laughing stock for all time."

An address, delivered by Dr. Hadwen, at a public meeting in Los Angeles, on June 16, 1921, has been published, in pamphlet form, by the California Anti-Vivisection Society, 622 Bryson Building, Los Angeles. It contains a fine portrait of Dr. Hadwen.

Dr. George Starr White.

THE California Anti-Vivisection Society unanimously adopted a resolution tendering the esteem, loyalty and confidence of the members of Dr. George Starr White. The resolution declares Dr. White had been subjected to humiliation, attendant upon the death of his wife.

Dr. White has made many enemies among less worthy members of the medical profession, by his persistent fight for rational healing and medical freedom. He has done and is doing much good.

Bearded Women and Beauty Parlors.

FOLLOWING is from a well-known nature cure physician's widow, who has herself had over twenty years' experience with patients:

"I observe that you call attention to the fact that removal of the ovaries tends to make women coarse and masculine; and if such women live through the menopause they often grow beards.

"There is another serious situation facing us, and it is time someone sounded a public warning regarding our bearded girls, for there are not a few girls between the ages of 20 and 30 who are obliged to shave regularly, just like men.

"It is sad to state that these young women are among the most beautifully 'dolled up' girls to be found, chiefly in moving-picture work, and in large department stores.

"These girls had no more tendency to grow beards and whiskers than had their mothers, until they met the 'beauty doctor'

MEDICINE THAT HEALS INTERNALLY
KNOWLTON'S
O-M INFLAMMATION TABLETS
Show Improvement in Stomach Trouble in 48 Hours, or Money Refunded.

Now possible to treat yourself and do it just as scientifically as anyone can do it for you.

O-M Tablets are now being manufactured by the million for people who refuse further to be passed around from one specialist (?) to another like so much merchandise. Before you submit to your teeth being pulled out, or to an appendix operation, try these tablets. Get them and try them, then you will see.

Remember, the cost is only 65c for a full size package and half that amount may save your teeth and appendix. Such operations are too often a mistake.

O-M Tablets represent one of the finest and most efficient constitutional remedies ever offered direct to the people free of fee or prescription charge.

They completely overcome constipation and gas. Two or three doses relieve inflammation of the bladder. "Suffered for years, relieved with two doses." That's what they say about their bladder trouble. "A great discovery," says an old soldier who was suffering with a bad case of intestinal poisoning.

EVERY DAY BRINGS REPORTS OF WONDERFUL RESULTS.

What is to be said when you see these things with your own eyes? Simply help others by telling them about it, that is all. At druggists and by mail.

Aukland, New Zealand's Quaint Capital.

BY RUTH FLORENCE

AU REVOIR, Rotorua. It is hard to say good-by, and we cherish the hope that we may return again, some time. But here comes the choo-choo car. That's just what it is; a choo-choo car—a toy train grown up; boasting of none of the propensities of the American juggernaut, but it gets there, just the same.

There are two classes of travel, first and second. You'll probably travel first class; it costs nearly twice as much as second, and is very little different. But it is "class." And that is the way of the world.

I'm told in some of the coaches there are signs cautioning one against picking wild flowers while the train is in motion. However, we didn't see the sign and we chug-chugged along at about the rate of thirty-five miles an hour—time enough for one to observe the many interesting villages en route, and to see plenty diversified scenery.

The choo-choo is quite accommodating—stopping at certain intervals for one to have a nice hot luncheon, for the nominal price of two shillings and sixpence (about 50 cents) or later for the proverbial "cup of tea" and bread and butter, or scones—for sixpence or a shilling. And it is so refreshing!

We have arrived in Auckland. The bracing sea air is good, after our train trip, and soon we are lodged in a comfortable hotel.

Miss America (the young thing from the States) had been very jocose about the train. Of course, she missed the Pullman drawing-rooms and observation and dining cars. But one must remember that New Zealand does not cover a very great area of land. The roads are narrow gauge, and there are no great expanses of territory to cover.

Auckland is a City Possessing a Peculiar Beauty of Its Own.

THE city of Auckland itself is built upon a number of extinct volcanoes, now grass-covered. In every direction can be seen these small conical-shaped hills, none of them too high for an afternoon's walk. From the summit of most any of these, you can look down into innocent-looking craters, and possibly while you are there, a daring cyclist will be circling the bowl. Around the hillside at your feet, sheep are grazing, and citizens may be playing golf.

Mt. Eden is one of the most popular of these hills. It was an especially clear day when we took this walk, and the view of the harbor before us was glorious. You wonder if you have seen anything just like it; Naples, with its azure skies and waters, Nice on the dreamy Mediterranean—San Francisco with its glorious Golden Gate—but Auckland possesses a beauty peculiarly its own. Its islands, its peninsulas, the red-roofed homes that peep through the green trees and bush, and seem to almost hug the water's edge. In another direction, you gaze at several ocean liners that grace the harbor. Again at another point, is a fleet of sailing ships, possibly awaiting a turn of the wind, and as your eye travels a bit further, is bush-covered Mt. Rangitoto—a huge, extinct volcano—very symmetrical in outline. The unique part of Rangitoto is, that no matter from what location it is viewed, the lines of it are exactly the same. Like a sentinel, Rangitoto seems to guard the entire bay.

On another afternoon, we took the "One Tree Hill" walk—so called for the reason that the solitary tree that grows on its summit, can be seen from any part of the city. It is truly a delightful spot for an outing. One is not surprised that Sir John Logan Campbell, Auckland's earliest settler, loved this hill so well, and by his last request, he is buried there, under that one tree. That he was well beloved by the citizens is evidenced by the fact that his simple grave, under One Tree, is rarely without its floral tribute. It is said he knew the site of the town long before a single house was built. He was as great a friend of the Maori as of the white man.

The "Domain" is a park that covers 100 acres. The New Zealander, like his British brethren, is a great lover of outdoor life. That afternoon we saw a different game of football played on the Domain, known as Rugby League. It is a swift, clean clean game. The rules are different to that of American Rugby. It was a splendid game we witnessed; New Zealand vs. Auckland—the former being the picked team going home to England. New Zealand claims she has the finest all-round football players in the world. They will proudly tell you of their famous All Blacks, an undefeated team.

That evening, we went to a pantomime at His Majesty's Theater, "Sinbad the Sailor." Gee! It was a great show. Sinbad had a huge cat—as big as a lion. And oh! he could sing. He sang a song entitled "Why Does the Elephant have One Tail Behind and Another One in the Front?" Now, only an imitation cat could get away with a song like that. But it was a wonderful production, and it seems nice to see people in evening attire. We'll quote Miss America's opinion of Auckland women's dress. She says they have peculiar feet and wear funny hats. But, my dear Miss America, if you wore heavy woolen stockings, and had to wear shoes made on a certain type of colonial last, your feet would look funny, too. It is not unlikely that your feet and your hats look just as funny to Miss New Zealand. And then again, Miss New Zealand, like her English sisters, affects larger, rather floppy hats, and does not wear said hat tipped jauntily at an angle of forty-five degrees, as you do, Miss America. That, too, is a question of custom.

Business center of Auckland on a busy afternoon.

Ellerslie Race Course is Mecca for Tourists and Sportsmen.

BUT even the most fastidious dresser could find much to copy when at the races, where one sees visitors from diverse parts of the world, and also the fashionable beaumonde of New Zealand. An afternoon at Ellerslie race course is not to be forgotten. It is about three and a half miles from the city, and the approach and gardens are strikingly beautiful. It is considered the most attractive race course in all of Australasia. It is controlled by the government, on the totalizator basis. As no surplus is permitted the end of the season to remain over, this same surplus is used to improve the grounds, which very likely accounts for the beauty of the gardens.

The New Zealand cup was the race event of the day. The odds were close, but Miss America and I won a guinea (about $4.80) each, on the race, losing it immediately afterwards on the following race. Reckless gamblers we are.

A dainty luncheon is served at the clubhouse. Here we met many of the passengers who crossed over with us on the steamship Tahiti. It is quite jolly to meet them all again.

Miss America was in her element that night—at a ball in the Town Ball, at which the Governor, Lord Jellicoe and the official party are patrons. Whilst the Honorable Lucy, daughter of Lord and Lady Jellicoe, is attractive and well gowned, it is our young friend who is the cynosure of all eyes. Evening lights and fox-trot music have been part of her regular home diet, and in her creamy spangly frock, we are not surprised that her little dance program is soon complete.

Another day—spent leisurely roaming about the town. Queen street is the main street of Auckland. It is flanked with many fine buildings, many of them patterned on the American plan, architecturally.

Merchandise appears to us to be quite high in price—occasioned probably, from the same cause from which the rest of the world has been suffering—the late World War.

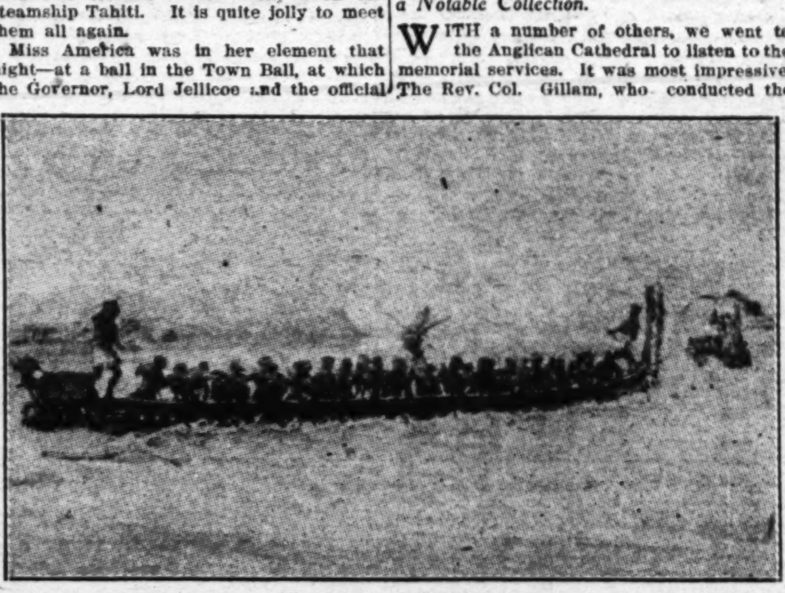
A wonderful piece of construction is the Grafton bridge which spans the Grafton cemetery. At the time it was built, about the year 1908, it was the largest concrete expansion in the world. It is constructed of ferro concrete.

Today is Anzac Day—so called in commemoration of the many colonial soldiers who fell in battle with the Turkish at Gallipoli. Every house of business and every bank is closed, and the day, although sunny, is solemn and sad in aspect. And the parade itself, headed by a military band that mournfully plays Chopin's "March Funebre" and a solemn procession of uniformed soldiers—some minus an eye, some limbs, others, arms—all heroes of Gallipoli, many of them wearing badges and crosses of distinction. Near us is a little woman in mourning, a couple of children clinging to her skirts. Now there is a gun wagon, bearing an empty coffin, draped with the Union Jack, with its wreath, "Lest we forget." A lump involuntarily arises in your throat, as the babe clinging to its mother cries, "Our daddy's gone, too," and your tears fall unashamed, for the sorrow of it all. And it is a bit of relief when the last group—jack tars, and the navy band—go by. How nobly did they give of their ALL for their mother country.

Auckland's Art Gallery Contains a Notable Collection.

WITH a number of others, we went to the Anglican Cathedral to listen to the memorial services. It was most impressive. The Rev. Col. Gillam, who conducted the service, was chaplain with the regiment at Gallipoli.

We spent a few gratifying hours in the Auckland Art Gallery. It contains a very noteworthy collection. There are many splendid examples of artists' endeavors from all over the world, and a number of New Zealand's own, most prominent of which is Goldie's famous collection of Maori paintings. It is altogether an exhibit of art that would require several days to familiarise one's self with, and of which Auckland is justly proud.



War canoe of the Maoris.

Just opposite our hotel is the Auckland Museum, where a fund of knowledge is to be obtained about the bird, animal, mineral and vegetation life of New Zealand. What greets the eye first in its glass cage is the monster bird, the moa, similar in type to the American ostrich, but much larger, and lacking the wings. It is two-toed, and this particular specimen stands nearly fifteen feet in height. This example is long extinct. The Maori will tell you many wild tales about this bird. Many of their phantom gods rode around the world on them, and there is the moa itself to prove it!

To many, the collection of most importance is the Maori relics, etc. They are all contained in a Maori buttress-house—a splendid example of Maori workmanship. One of the most striking features of this exhibit is a Maori war canoe. It has an eighty-two-foot beam, and is 150 feet long. It is made of totara wood—a very hard wood, and is extensively carved and trimmed with mother of pearl, and stained a dark red. It could easily hold 100 men, and took many years to complete. It is a remarkable piece of workmanship, in view of the fact that their implements were of so crude a nature.

The fine collection of Maori greenstone clubs, ax heads, spears, ornaments, native feather clocks, and mats, etc., were the gift of Sir George Grey, who was for many years Governor of New Zealand.

To the morbidly inclined, the war collection will make an appeal. There are heads galore; dried, most grewsome. On asking the attendant for a guide book, we were informed they have not yet had one, but he thought they would, sometime. This is a very naive reply, but how provincial!

A Trip to the Environs is Well Worth the Time and Effort.

THERE are many delightful trips around the Bay of Auckland, and the visitor can spend many pleasant days in this vicinity. The weather is fine, in spite of the fact that it is the beginning of the colonial winter—June.

By ferry, we crossed to Devonport, fifteen minutes' ride from Auckland—a pretty suburb, boasting of a fine "shore." From there, a few minutes in a car or motor bus, and one is in Takapuna, another pretty suburb, built around the banks of Lake Takapuna. Outside of its scenic beauty, Lake Takapuna is noteworthy for the fact that it is as round as the proverbial orange, and is fathomless. And Maori legend will tell you that Mt. Rangitoto sprang out of Lake Takapuna.

If you are a fisherman, Takapuna will lure you with its fine trout. And speaking of fish, if you have tasted of the South Sea schnapper, you will probably concede it to be finer than anything you have ever eaten.

We have just heard a very satisfying concert at the Town Hall, which boasts of a very good organ, and the organist is retained by the city. He is usually brought over from England, and must have the best of credentials.

Through the courtesy of a lumber company, we spent an enjoyable few days in the "bush"—or what we term, timber lands. The forests of New Zealand boast of much valuable timber, but the most notable of all, is the kauri pine. It is a very imposing looking tree, and is said to take a thousand years to reach maturity. This tree is valuable not only for its timber, but also for its sap. It is the gum that is used in varnish, etc. The kauri gum industry is a very important one in New Zealand.

From our temporary camp amidst the fern and bush, we gaze into the sky that is a blazing mass of silvery light. It is a Maoriland night, and we can see very plainly the four stars that form the famous Southern Cross. But the cross itself is more notable, however, for its sentimental value, rather than for its actual brilliancy.

SENSE-SORE-SHIP-SCREEN WRITER DEMURS.

BY RITA WEIMAN.

Rita Weiman.

[Miss Rita Weiman is a successful short story writer and playright, whose play "The Acquittal" had a very satisfactory reception. She is now with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation at Culver City and has just completed a screen story, "The Grim Comedian," which was produced by Goldwyn under the direction of Frank Lloyd with an all-star cast —Editor.]

IS ANTHONY COMSTOCK with us again? Have they failed to lay his ghost—that fat, pompous old wraith who, when he wore erring human flesh, went about looking for evil with a spy glass? It doesn't seem possible in this progressive age of a progressive country.

Comstock in his vice crusades made it the business of his life to unearth indecency that would have passed unnoticed had he not brought it spectacularly before the public. Like a fat ferret, he kept his nose to the ground, so busy searching for trouble that he found no time to lift his eyes to the blue of the heavens or the pure gold of the sun. And now once more his spirit is flitting from State to State of this land of the free and patting on the shoulders little groups of men and women, urging them to go to it for all they are worth, to carry on the great and glorious work of searching for mud heaps.

Heeding him, they put on their best funeral garb, leave their sense of humor and their knowledge of the Bible at home, and go to sit in judgment, prepared to read evil into the fundamental and most beautiful facts of life, determined that they must earn the money paid for their services on censor boards, whatever the cost. This can be the only legitimate explanation of some of the slashing that pictures suffer. Pennsylvania must be overzealous or Pennsylvania would never consider motherhood immoral. I happen to have been born in that State and it has always seemed to me that Pennsylvanians were normal, healthy human beings with real red blood in their veins, not ashamed to face the fact that they were born of honest-to-goodness mothers in the usual way.

There's one great and God-given fact that censor boards seem to leave utterly out of reckoning—if the slashing is done to protect the child mind, it is unnecessary, for the child's mind passes over what it does not understand and grasps at what it does, with an utter disregard of detail. And as for the adult mind, no man can judge for another what is going to be immoral from his viewpoint and what is not. If we would judge immorality by the Ten Commandments—then the desire of one man to gain another's wealth is immoral, for that is coveting. Burglary should not be shown on the ground of immorality. A child's defiance of his parents should be barred. All the human conflict that makes all the stories that have ever been written should be kept from the screen because each and every one of them concerns a direct or indirect violation of a commandment—and the Seventh Commandment is not the only one.

"Oh, yes," your censor may answer, "but if the story teaches a moral lesson it justifies itself. If your burglar is punished, if your man who covets wealth loses out, if your son suffers to prove eventually to his parents the right to live his own life, then all is well!"

Right, Mr. Censor! Then why does the breaking of the Seventh Commandment not merit presentation, if both parties pay the price, if both in the course of the story or at its end suffer for what they have done? Is that not the subject of countless sermons, of countless treaties, of the greatest plays and books that have ever been written? Sin and regeneration! Then why not of the stories put upon the screen? After all, the screen is the most potent medium for preachment because it can visualize for the less active mind the result of wrong-doing and the penalty.

To me there are just three factors in pictures that should be censored—vulgarity, indecency and encouragement to crime. The last named has gone out with the one-reel thrillers, been laid in the dust with masked bandits and highway robbers. It belongs to the prehistoric period of the movies. Vulgarity still exists—in custard pie comedies—in bathing girl exposes that leave little or nothing to the imagination—in cheap, crude ways of telling a story that could be handed delicately and should be put on only by a master-hand. But these, strangely enough, seem to slip by the censors. Such delicate indecency as a comedian losing his trousers and trying for half a reel to escape the scrutiny of the crowd, including the heroine, is allowed to go unchallenged. When it passes as comedy—it passes the censors. Custard pie stuff that turns one sick, the fun that comes of filth flung back and forth until it covers the face and body, goes unshorn while the ugly innuendo of approaching motherhood is slashed to bits with the shears of righteousness.

It is life treated seriously that seems to offend, life as Shakespeare has written it, life as the classics of all time, from Greek drama down, present it, as the Bible teaches us it should be treated, the story with its lesson to give the world, unafraid because it is honest.

But of course this cannot endure. It is only a phase—the swing of the pendulum too far that it may regain its balance. Even Pennsylvania's censors will soon put on their thinking caps and learn to discriminate. They will lay the sneaking ghost of old Anthony Comstock and acknowledge that truth when shown in the white light of sincerity is ugly only to the man who is ugly in his own soul.

him for two days at least, and I was glad to do so, for he was the last white man I should see before we tackled the orang-outangs. I was anxious to have the benefit of his knowledge of the natives and the country, and also I found it reassuring, under the circumstances, to have the friendship of a medical man. Later, I became his enforced guest and I have always been thankful for his care.

We arrived at Nanaoh-Pinoh, which was Mahommed Munshee's village, two days late. I stayed at Munshee's house while the men prepared boats for the trip up the Melarir River to the spot where the orang-outangs were.

Why the Teeth Chatter.

The little muscles which close the jaw are acted upon by the cold in such a way that they pull the jaw up and let it fall by its own weight. This, repeated many times, causes the teeth to click together, and produces what is called "chattering." You think of it in connection with your teeth because it is the teeth which makes the sound, but the cause lies in the muscles used in chewing or in opening your mouth when you speak. The chattering occurs in spite of the will or brain. You have little control over it, and can stop it only by clinching the teeth. It is really a mild variety of spasm caused by the cold, which acts on the jaw muscles in much the same way that some poisons produce muscular spasms which cannot be controlled.—[Popular Science Sifting.

crowning glory—a thing contrived to set a great American flag ablaze.

Eagerly they studied their watches. They could hear a murmur of voices from the direction of the fives court; the school was waiting. They might have set off their display at Elstow and escaped before pursuit could reach them. But it had seemed to them that their honor was involved in staying on school ground.

"Time!" said Bill, at last, and lit the fuse of the first rocket. For a moment it hissed and sputtered; then a streak of fire shot upward, and a minute later, with a bang, the rocket burst, high above them, in a constellation of red and green and yellow stars. Ted had lighted the set piece; already, as the rocket burst, stars and stripes were appearing on the wall.

There was a yell from the fives court; at once they saw a dark mass charging across the field.

"They're going to rush us!" said Bill. "Aim the roman candles right at them—and chuck some squibs to go off at their feet! They won't be hurt, but I fancy they'll stop."

So they stood, Roman candles in their hands, pouring out threatening balls of fire, flinging lighted squibs and giant crackers. There was no harm in the false fire they flung, but the moral effect was tremendous. It took more than boyish nerves could furnish to face that barrage; furiously the great American flag burned brightly and the rockets rose.

"Come out, you sneaks! Fight fair! You're trying to put our eyes out!"

"We'll fight fair if you will!" That was Ted. "We'll take you on, three at a time!"

There was another rush, but again the Roman candles and the exploding crackers checked it.

"Come on—come on, you cads!" Bill cried. "Who's afraid now?"

Turf was flying; stones; fives balls, small and hard, that some genius in the attacking force had thought of bringing up. But the spirits of the Americans soared high, like the rockets they sent skyward; they were above feeling pain. And so it went, until, at last, they had made good their boast, and the last rocket had flown upward, the last candle been discharged. The flag was fading out now, as star after star, stripe after stripe, burned out.

The school scented its chance; charged again, and swept over the barricade, this time to victory. But it was a victory hot, low and cheap. The numbers were too great for discrimination when blows were being dealt; friend struck friend as often as foe. And then the masters, who had been strangely deaf to all the tumult, came, and discipline came into its own again.

"Oh, come on, fellows!" cried Bill. "What do we care for those cads? They can't fight unless they're a hundred to one!"

Arm in arm, untouched in spirit, defiant still, they swaggered across the field. It was Ted Little who began to whistle that air his ancestors had transformed from a taunt into a boast.

"Yankee Doodle came to to-own,
Riding on a pony.
Stuck a feather in his cap
And called it macaroni!"

They heard laughter before them; saw three men who were coming to meet them.

"Dad!" Ted sprang forward; Murray was at his heels, greeting his father, too. There was a lump in Bill's throat. And then, amazed, incredulous, he stood still, unable to believe his ears.

"Hello, boy!"

It was his father.

"Father!" he cried. "How—I never dreamed you were here—"

John Halliday chuckled, ruefully.

"Sam Little told me what you fool youngsters were up to," he said. "I—well, I thought I'd come down. By George—you sure did hand it to those Englishmen, boy! I—I've been talking to your mother, Bill. Do you still want to go—home?"

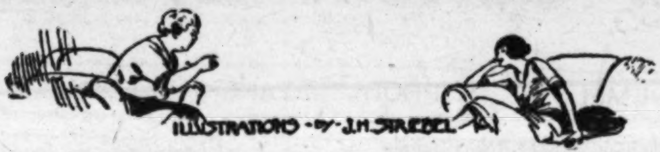
THE POTTERS

by J. P. McEvoy



In Which Mamie Meets Elmer.

PROLOGUE.

Ma does not entirely approve of the young men who infest the Potter habitation and step out with Mamie to various places of high voltage and low neckage . . . their glibness disturbs Ma and she is baffled by their joyous contempt for the learned counsel and sage advice of their elders . . . Ma has decided that now is the time to bring Elmer on the scene . . . Elmer is the son of an old girlhood friend, and he is an upright lad, as they used to say in McGuffey's Third Reader before the term was pre-empted by the piano men—his square, honest countenance beams with candor . . . Ma thinks Mamie will just love him, he has such a kind face, and he means so well, and he is so good to his folks. . . . That's Elmer. . . . You can see instantly that Mamie is going to be crazy about him.

SCENE I.

Ma has invited Elmer, the son of her old girlhood friend, Henrietta Bowles, to visit a spell this evening. Wouldn't it be wonderful if Elmer and Mamie took up with each other, thinks Ma. (It would be more than wonderful . . . it would be miraculous.)

MA (with a flutter:) Now, Mr. Bowles is coming tonight, and I want you to see that he's treated right.

MAMIE (decisively:) I'll treat him right Ma . . . don't you fret.

BILL: You haven't seen this cuckoo yet.

MA (alarmed:) Cuckoo? Cuckoo? What do you mean? He's as nice a boy as I've ever seen, so kind and thoughtful . . . so polite, and so refined and . . . so bright.

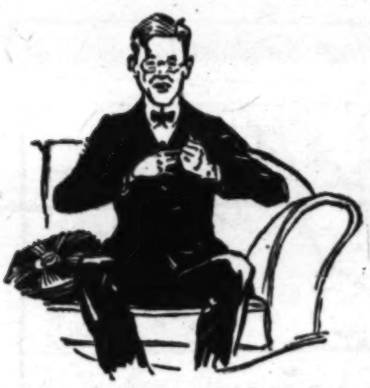
PA: It's just about time she'd see some lad that doesn't resemble a collar ad.

BILL: They look to me like a bunch of nuts; I never seen such dizzy mutts.

MAMIE: Of all the dumb-bell dames I've seen, you pick the dumbest, what I mean.

BILL (stung:) Oh, is that so!

MAMIE (triumphantly:) Yes, that's so.



"Would you like to hear about the new course I'm taking?"

BILL: Oh, I don't know, now, I don't know; speaking of dumb-bells, don't forget I haven't gone out with your friends as yet.

MAMIE (scornfully:) My friends! Ha! Ha! Likewise Ho! Ho! Why don't you ask them, see if they'd go?

BILL: It's so darn seldom they're taken about they might drop dead if I asked them out.

MAMIE (stung:) Oh, is that so?

BILL (triumphantly:) Yes, that's so.

MAMIE: They're popular girls, I'd have you know.

MA: The doorbell, Mamie . . . you'd better go.

BILL: If it's that there Bowles, I'm gonna blow.

MA (to Pa:) Suppose we go to the movie show.

(Ma is certainly taking a deep interest in Elmer. She never goes out and leaves Mamie with any of the others . . . and its "You got in pretty late last night, young lady . . . haven't I told you to always say good night on the front steps? Don't let me have to tell you again" . . . and of course she never has to tell her again—much.)

SCENE II.

The Potter parlor—it's the living-room on other occasions . . . Bill has escaped . . . the Baby is dreaming of ice cream islands surrounded by seas of chocolate sauce . . . Ma has dragged Pa to the movie—they're launching another ship and burning another oil tank in the weekly . . . Mamie has Elmer and the parlor all to herself . . . if Elmer were a female he would be some pretty girl's friend . . . that's the kind of map Elmer has . . . besides, he is one of those earnest young men who are Bound to Succeed . . . but not with Mamie, we fear.

ELMER (continuing his favorite subject, Elmer:) And that very night I clipped the coupon and sent it to this school, and inside of a week I had started the course.

MAMIE (internally:) Who cares?

(To Elmer:) Isn't that perfectly wonderful! And then what did you do?

(Internally:) I hope you got a headache.

ELMER: Well, sir, I studied mighty hard, I can tell you. Instead of going out nights dancing and wasting my time like some fellows do, I plugged on that course, burning the midnight oil, as you might say, and just this week I got my diploma. Guess what I am now.

MAMIE (internally:) You're an awful egg, I'll say.

(To Elmer, with lips parted in eager surprise:) Oh, do tell me; I'm so interested!

(Internally:) Yes, I am.

ELMER: I'm a Business Executive, $6000 to $15,000 a year. It says so in the ads.

MAMIE (with the slightest edge of sarcasm:) When do you start exegging?

ELMER (with superb nonchalance:) Oh, that will all come in good time.

MAMIE (internally:) It'll be a good long time, I'll say.

(To Elmer:) Isn't that just wonderful! I do so admire a young man who has ambition and is willing to forge ahead in spite of all odds.

(Internally:) Whatever that means.

ELMER (inflating chest to ninety pounds:) I guess it isn't every young fellow who is willing to give up all his pleasures in order to study and fit himself for life. Why, I've already started in on another course.

MAMIE (internally:) Another one? Migod, do I have to listen to another one?

(To Elmer:) You know, I'm so thoughtless. Here I am wasting your time when undoubtedly you feel you should be working on this new course of yours. Wouldn't you like to go home and work on it tonight?

(Internally:) A bit crude, but what can the poor girl do?

ELMER (entirely missing the point:) I really should be working on it tonight, but then I deserve some relaxation, don't you think so?

MAMIE (internally:) If you knew what I think, you wouldn't ask me.

(To Elmer:) Well, I should so so (brightly.) Have you read Erik Dorn yet? All us girls think it's so thrilling.

ELMER (heavily, as if in rebuke:) I have no time to devote to anything except things that will help me in my business. Wouldn't you like to hear about the new course I'm taking in the Psychology of Selling?

MAMIE (internally:) Oh, Ma! Look what he's doing now.

(To Elmer:) I'm afraid it's getting a little bit late. Suppose you tell me all about it next time.

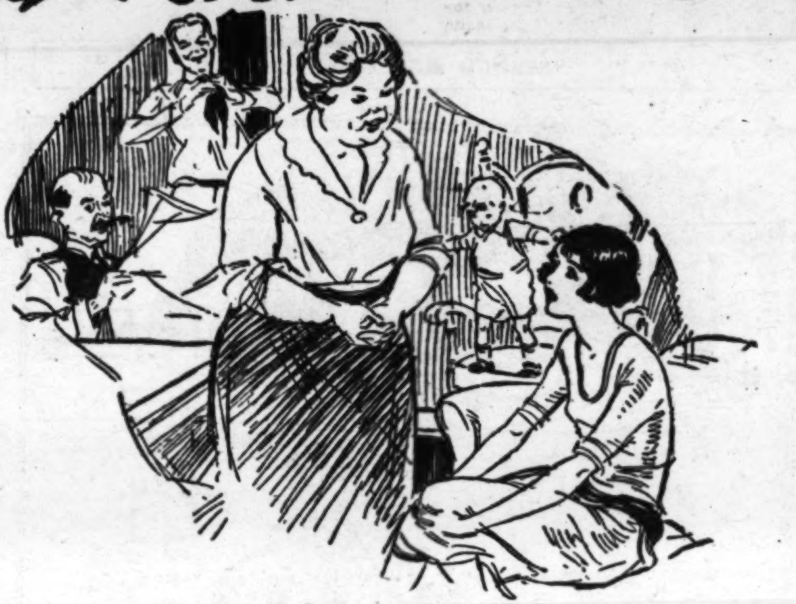
(Internally:) But there ain't going to be no next time.

SCENE III.

Ma and Pa return from the movie . . . Ma gets the shock of her life: Mamie's caller has gone home already.

MA (to Mamie:) But where is Elmer . . . did he go?

MAMIE (wearily:) I hope so . . . I sure hope so.



"Now, Mr. Bowles is coming tonight."

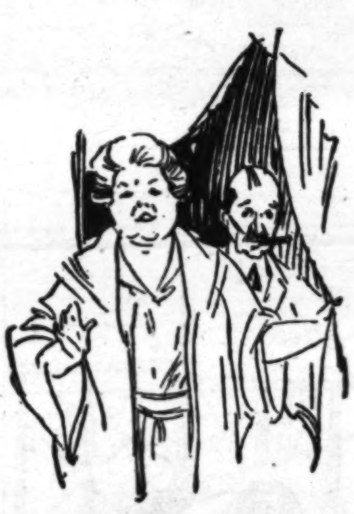
MA (surprised:) Why, wasn't he nice? My gracious, child!

MAMIE (with spirit:) Too darned nice . . . I like 'em wild.

PA: Holy Caesar!

MA: Goodness me!

MAMIE (fiercely:) I like 'em lively . . . jumping gee . . . He talked about himself all night—he's fond of him, all right, all right, and he can have him, ab-so-tive—why do they let such goobers live?



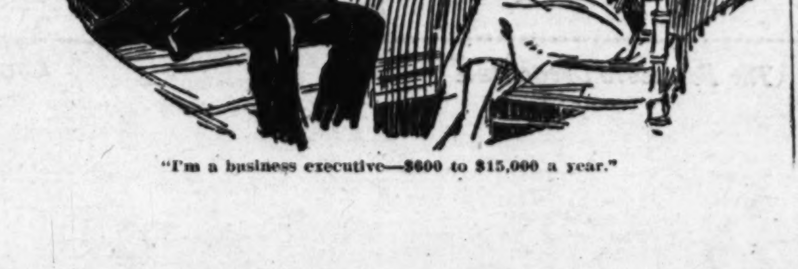
"But where is Elmer—did he go?"

MA (helplessly:) As nice a boy as I ever saw.

MAMIE (decisively:) You let me do my picking, Ma.

PA (to himself, baffled:) Such is life, such is life.

(As Tarde would say, life for the Potters is the pursuit of the impossible through the useless.)



"I'm a business executive—$600 to $15,000 a year."

Be Kind.

Have you thought how well to spend today?
By helping some one in some way?
That when tomorrow shall pass this way
You'll think of happy yesterday?

Today can you not some kind thing do?
To one not fortunate as you?
There's never a day, which you pass through
In which some good, you cannot do.

The pleasant smile, and the helping hand,
Make doubting minds to understand.
To do for others is something grand
We should not wait for a command.

'Tis the doing something that is kind,
That gives one true content you'll find;
For the happy consciousness of mind
Is satisfied by being kind.

Strive to live each day that some soul, sad,
Sick or weary, will be made glad.
Without kindness this world would go mad,
Better it by the life that you've had.

Do be kind brother and sister mine,
And help the sun to brighter shine
On some sad soul, to make friend of thine,
Make of your life a heavenly sign.

Some weary traveler you can make
His burden lighter, if you take
A share to carry, for His name's sake,
'Twill bring you nearer heaven's gate.

The value of good you cannot know
By being kind, to friend or foe,
Make fires burn brighter, and embers glow
To warm a soul, who needs it so.

Don't wait, today do the kindly thing.
Who knows what tomorrow will bring?
'Tis today we happily should sing
Songs of gladness with joyous Spring.

'Tis more of kindness this old world needs,
More of mercy, and heartfelt deeds.
Just living each day, where sunshine leads
To speed the growth of well-sown seeds.

Each day cast smiles of gladness somewhere,
They are garlands of joy, so rare
To saddened hearts, or those in despair,
'Twill gladden them, that you do care.

We should strive to live all our todays
By being kind, to go our ways,
That when sun casts her tomorrow's rays
Reflect well done, for yesterdays.

Englishman Lived 152 Years.

An extraordinary instance of longevity is that concerning an agriculturist named Thomas Parr, born in Shropshire, Eng., in 1483. He was engaged in agricultural pursuits and worked in the field till after his one hundred and thirtieth birthday.

At 120 he married a second time, and had the responsibilities of another family, his wife presenting him with offspring. At 152 he was introduced to the court of Charles I by the Earl of Arundel as a remarkable prodigy, but the change of air and new mode of living caused his death. A postmortem examination of his body was made, but no internal symptoms of decay could be discovered.

A grandson of Thomas Parr died in Shropshire at the age of 120.—[London Answers.

THE HOW IN HOUSES

HOW TO PLAN HOW TO BUY HOW TO SAVE

KEEPING THE HOUSE ALIVE.

THE decoration of a house should be kept alive by a change in arrangement or an added article of furnishing. A room which is finished and ch remains without a change soon benes a dead thing. The age of a room, ether it is furnished in modern or in an furniture, should be a growing age. othing new can be added, if one piece of niture cannot be temporarily replaced by ther, then a rearrangement may be posle. Care must be taken, however, not spoil an already artistic grouping just for sake of variety.

he best way to rearrange a room is to in by taking everything out of it and lacing the furniture. A conventional argement gives balance and dignity. This ct may also be obtained by a proper use background color.

n a small house the walls are better if lecorated with numbers of pictures. A in toned wall if not too dark gives the pression of greater size. The woodwork uld be of the same color, slightly darker. en the tone of the wrong side of the wall er is just what is needed.

ray makes a room look larger and is tful. The gray should not be of too k a tone as it will seem to close in on occupants. Gray is a neutral tone, being combination of red, yellow and blue. If re blue is used the gray becomes a cold y, while if more red or yellow is used it omes warmer. If the gray which is used cold it may be offset by bright rugs or aperies.

Effect of Spaciousness is Possible a Small House.

a small house the effect of space may e obtained if the same color scheme is d throughout. In passing from one room another it must seem rather one whole n many chopped up sections. Dignity secured by allowing no jarring color to seen as one passes from room to room.

The furniture for an apartment or small ise should be carefully selected. Shal, flat furniture is one requisite. A short, piece which is heavy in appearance inges on the inhabitants' psychological ce. An acceptable piece of furniture is gate-legged table which is kept folded inst the wall. A chest may be utilized h as a seat and as a storage chest. A hboy placed in the dining-room will hold h linen and silver. In a small room re should be no furniture placed in the ddle.

f there is an extra door which may be en down and a mirror hung on the opsite wall to give a view through several ms, the size will be greatly increased.

tention to Details is Essential Produce Beauty.

LL decoration should be subordinated to structure. The size and shape of the om may demand either tall or short furnie or a certain style of floor or wall finish, t where it is possible to have a choice it well to remember that horizontal lines e the feeling of rest, vertical lines, that height or growth, while slant lines express ovement.

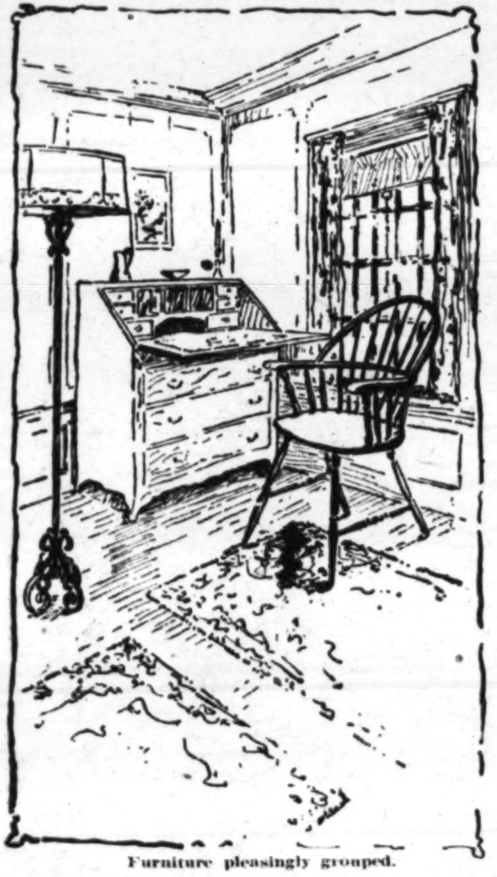
Because many persons have been finanlly limited when furnishing their houses ere has resulted a better type of ornantation and decoration characterized by nplicity and by the absence of much tuff" and gingerbread work. There is s varnish and shine and a freer use of ains and flat finishes, which are more artic wherever used. Another good result s been that people have not bought furnire until they needed it, nor until there s a place for it.

There are certain pieces of furniture hich are suitable for small rooms. Seval of these may be used for more than e purpose. There is a table which forms seat when the top is folded back. A local concern is putting out a combination of desk and victrola and also a tea wagon and victrola. These are excellent in finish and design.

Windsor Chairs are to be Preferred to Heavier Types.

WINDSOR chairs are a good type to use in a small house. They are much more in keeping with the general style than is overstuffed furniture.

If, in place of the three-quarter iron bed with one end higher than the other, a day bed is used, with both ends the same height, the room may be used for a sitting room as well as a bedroom.



Furniture pleasingly grouped.

Where there is little closet space a wardrobe is almost a necessity. Some of the old ones contain too much gingerbread work. This may be removed and the wardrobe refinished to match the other furniture. The old paint may be removed with sand paper. If ivory is the color desired, several coats of flat white are put on first and then finished with an ivory enamel. Mirror glass may be put on either the inside or outside of the doors. If there are no doors a curtain of soft plain material is hung in front.

Where the dimensions of the rooms and closets are small it is frequently necessary to employ methods otherwise not used. In one case there seemed to be no place for the case containing the leaves of the dining-room table. It was placed under the windows in the dining-room and was made into a seat by putting it on casters and having a cushion made to fit the top. A valance of soft blue material to match the cushion hung to the floor.

In another case a dressing table was made by having a plate-glass top made to fit across two painted boxes placed two feet apart. The boxes had been fitted with shelves and a curtain hung down in front of each box. The top of each box was covered with figured chintz to match. This gave a very pretty effect under the glass top.

The mirror has the power to make a room appear much larger than it really is. Its purpose is to reflect and should be hung so as to reflect the most attractive sections of the room. A long mirror may be had on any door by fastening mirror glass to the door with picture molding similar to that used around the room.

Certain Color Schemes that Work Out Satisfactorily.

TONES of blue and yellow are good ones to use in a small house. The blues may include green blues and violet blues. The yellow tones include cream, buff and small quantities of orange.

The way in which this scheme was carried out in one bedroom is as follows: the walls and ceiling were covered with plain, buff paper. As the ceiling was rather low, no line of molding was placed around it to lessen the distance between floor and ceiling. The rug had a large green center while on the edge were several bands of varying width of a subdued orange yellow and plain yellow. The bureau or dressing table was painted blue with a flower design stenciled on each drawer in yellow and orange. A candlestick on the dressing table had a plain yellow shade. The bed, one chair and a small stand were also blue. The bed and chair were covered with a figured chintz in the same colors. The large armchair was covered in yellow linen cover. The window had a white sash curtain with yellow side drapes and a valance and narrow strip of the figured chintz. It was a pleasant, cheerful, and at the same time restful combination.

Flowers Give the Spirit of Joy and Freshness to a Room.

IN THE decoration of the small house flowers have an important place. They also keep the house alive as they stand for joy and freshness. Remarkable results are obtained if the reflection of the group is considered as well as the shape and size. If a low bowl of flowers is placed on an uncovered mahogany table the reflection in the table increases the attractiveness of the group. A single rose in a tall vase placed in front of a mirror has the same effect. Even the reflection of some flowers on a plain gray paper is exceptional, especially if the flower is one with a decided outline, such as stocks or zinnias have.

If no flowers are to be obtained a painted flower pot with a trellis which contains a vine is a fine substitute. The stores sell these flower pots already decorated, but you may decorate your own to match the color scheme of the room. Some of the trellises have a quaintly carved, many colored bird perched on top, which adds a touch of color. This, however, is suitable only in the sun room or breakfast room.

In the placing of a vase of flowers care must be taken that the background is plain and that it sets it off. A picture as a background for a vase is not good. The vase itself should be plain and of good color. The style of flowers used should be in the same key as the room. Certain types are suitable for large, stately rooms while others look best in small bright rooms. A large bowl of hydrangeas is better in a large room, while a single rose is more suitable for a small one.

Side Lights.

THE PLACE FOR PHOTOGRAPHS.

Photographs should be placed in rooms into which the general public is not usually admitted. Those photographs or pictures which are placed in formal rooms should be those in which the public may be interested. They should possess qualities other than those of personal interest, such as good color or good composition.

FIGURED GOODS USED SPARINGLY.

Variegated goods should not be used with other goods of the same nature. If a couch or davenport is covered with patterned cloth, the cushions should be of plain materials, in tones which harmonize. A plain wall paper should be the background for pictures.

CURVED CEILING LINES PLEASING.

If you are thinking of building a new house consider having vaulted ceilings in the living-room and dining-room at least. After seeing many corners and straight lines the curved lines and surfaces make a special appeal.

THE BREAKFAST-ROOM.

Breakfast-room furniture, gayly painted and attractive as can be, is shown at the shops. In design, color and workmanship much of this takes high rank.

sensation of Penang. The crowds flocked to see it, and the natives lined up for several hundred yards, each with his dime in his hand, waiting for his turn. We were so busy that I could not even go to the hotel for a meal; the brassy organ of the merry-go-round shrieked from early in the morning until late at night. In two days, I took in $1500 Mexican.

On the third day the merchant from whom I had rented the lot announced that he was going to build a fence around it and charge 2 cents for the privilege of standing and watching the merry-go-round. I told him that I wouldn't allow it; that all of Penang could come and see my show free. I was too busy taking in dimes to think about fences. He went away angry and disappointed. Four days later a lawyer representing him came to see me. He said that the rent had been raised to $10 a day, and that a dispossess order would be executed unless I paid it, I told the lawyer to wait and I went back to the hotel, to get my pith helmet.

The merchant had forgotten about the receipt. When the lawyer saw it, he told me that the merchant was unpopular with all the Malays and Chinese in Penang because he cheated them, and that they would be delighted if I sued for breach of contract. The result was that for $1 a day I got the use of the lot as long as I wanted it.

Within six weeks I had made up the entire cost of the merry-go-round and I was on velvet. The dimes were still rolling in as fast as I could collect them. Finally, when the novelty of my show had worn off and business began to slacken I shipped to Rangoon, Burma, to collect dimes there. After the merry-go-round had been running two weeks, I was approached by a man who wished to buy me out. I had had all the fun I wanted, and so I sold it to him for 10,000 rupees—$4500 in gold. He was a government official and consequently did not wish to appear in the transaction. The bill of sale was made out in his wife's name, and a man was hired to run the merry-go-round for him. I stayed for a week to get the enterprise started; then I went up to the lumber mills to see if the lumbermen needed elephants. When I returned to Singapore, I had a commission for six large elephants.

It was a better vacation than I could have had in Europe. I had made many friends and attended to some animal business and I had £700 clear profit in my pockets.

At my animal house I found a letter from Mr. La Seuf, the director of the Perth Zoological Gardens, saying that he was anxious to get a rhinoceros and asking what I could do for him. I did not want to go into the jungle again immediately, for I was afraid of a return of the fever, but I replied that I would see what could be done and I sent out word to all my native agents. Both Mr. La Seuf and his father, who was director of the gardens at Melbourne, were great friends of mine, and their gardens had been my best market for animals. Quite naturally, I wanted to do everything I could to help them, and so, when word came from an agent in Trengganu that some rhinoceroses had been located there, I packed up my kit and started out.

At Trengganu the Sultan welcomed me, and I spent several days with him, telling him what was happening in the world and discussing his problems. The problems were largely financial. He owed some money, and, knowing that he had something in the treasury, I asked why he did not pay his debts.

He thought for a time and then replied: "Well, I'll tell you. If I pay those people they will forget about the Sultan of Trengganu. If I don't pay them, they'll never forget me."

The conversation turned to the subject of prisoners. On my way to the palace I had passed the cages where the prisoners were kept. Many of them were starving to death, for, unless their friends or family cared for them, they got no food.

"Why don't you feed them?" I asked.

"Why should I?" he replied. "If I feed them, my whole country will want to go to jail."

Finally, after he had satisfied his craving for sociability, he gave me my official permit to go into the interior and to force labor. I started out for the upper end of his state, bordering on Lower Siam. At the mouth of the River Stew, I found my agent; we gathered a crew of ten men and went up the river as far as we could. When the weeds became so thick that we could not force the boats through, we took to the jungle and began cutting our way to the mud-puddle where the rhinoceroses came to wallow.

We took great precautions in approaching the puddle, for once a rhinoceros gets the scent of a hunter, he is off through the jungle as fast as he can go. The hunter, who spots his animal and shoots, has an easy time of it; but the collector, who must capture, has a more difficult job. He must work and build his trap at the very spot frequented by the animal and he must do so without exciting suspicion. A rhinoceros seldom charges when he sees a man, and his charge is not dangerous, for he is short-sighted and cannot gauge his direction accurately. Most often, he runs, and it is almost impossible, even when the collector can find him again, to chase or lure him back to the trap.

No animals were at the puddle when we arrived, and I had a good opportunity to examine the location. Then we withdrew and I told the men how we should go about making the capture. We made camp, building platforms between the trees for living-quarters, and I detailed some of the men to the work on a rattan net, which measured twenty by fifteen feet, with meshes ten inches square. I felt that we had a good chance of getting a rhinoceros in a net-trap and should save ourselves much time and labor if we could do so. When the net was ready, we put it in position at a likely looking approach—half on the ground, where the animal would step into it, and half suspended, so that he would catch it with his head and bring it down about him.

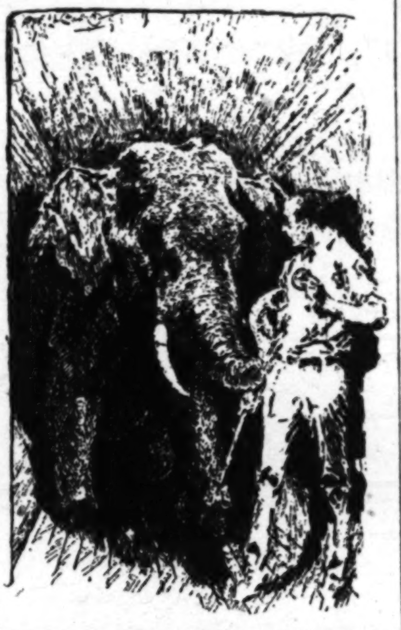
Then we turned our attention to making pits. As I have explained before, a heavy animal was sure to injure himself in falling into a square pit such as the natives generally dug, and, of course, an injured animal would have been of no use to me. Hence the four pits that we dug around the puddle were made wedge-shaped, instead of square. They were six feet wide at the top and tapered to three feet at the bottom; they were eight feet deep and ten feet long, with the approach tapering down so there would be the least possible chance that the beast would injure himself when he fell.

Over the tops of the pits we built platforms of bamboo poles, and covered them with mud and leaves, taking care to leave no traces of our work. To the building of each pit we gave a whole day of hard labor and we were constantly on the alert for fear one of the rhinoceroses might surprise us. Lookouts were already stationed to catch the sounds of the beasts as they broke through the jungle, coming to their bath.

One morning a native came running with the news that a rhinoceros was trapped. We gathered our tools and hurried off to the puddle. There, grunting and fighting, lay a two-ton rhinoceros, firmly wedged in and helpless. When he saw us, he became furious, squirming in the slime of the pit, pounding with his feet and grunting.

I divided my crew, putting half at building a cage of heavy timbers and the others at digging away the ground in front of the beast. By the time the cage was put together and bound securely with rattan, we [illegible] tive, who had been sent back to the nearest kampong, or native village, to recruit men and water-buffaloes, had soon returned with a score or other natives, driving six water-buffaloes before them. Then I went through the usual business of holding a meeting and explaining carefully, in the greatest detail, exactly what we were about to do and how we were to do it; what each man was to do and when and how. When they understood perfectly, we set about digging away the wall that separated the rhinoceros from the open end of the cage. With a little more than one foot of earth remaining, we began to prod him. The immense beast pounded his feet on the bottom of the pit, grunting and moving forward as rapidly as he could get foothold. He put his head against the wall and rooted; the wall toppled over and he lurched out of the pit and into the cage. The natives slipped the end-bar into place.

The capture was finished—but not the work. A rhinoceros cannot be broken and driven through the jungle like an elephant; he must be hauled every foot of the way. With the six water-buffaloes straining and every native giving a hand, we pulled the cage up the incline and mounted it on the runners. It took a week of steady cutting to clear the way, so that we could drag the cage to the Trengganu River. There we built a heavy raft and floated the cage down to port. Another two weeks passed before we could ship the beast to Singapore, for transshipment to Perth.



At last we got the elephant into the passage. It was a tight fit.

I received for the animal £200, which was about one-quarter of its value. But it was as much as the Perth Zoological Gardens could afford to pay, and I was glad to be able to put so fine a specimen into the hands of Mr. La Seuf.

One day when I was busy in my animal house, Ali came to me with the message that three natives from Pontianak, Borneo, were outside. They had something important to tell me, Ali said. When they came in I found that I knew one of them; he was an animal trader from whom I had bought some birds and monkeys. The other two were headmen from the interior of Borneo.

The headmen had gone to the trader with the story of two large orang-outangs that were terrorizing their villages, and the trader was bringing them to me for advice. We sat down in the shade and discussed the situation. The orang-outangs had run off with a young girl and had recently killed one of the men. The natives had tried repeatedly to kill them, but without success, and now they were afraid to venture into the jungle.

For several years I had had a standing order from the Antwerp Zoological Gardens for a good specimen of orang-outang, and I had planned to go, just as soon as my health permitted, into Borneo, to see what I could find. Orang-outangs command unlimited prices because they are so hard to capture and, once captured, so difficult to deliver. On account of homesickness and nativeness to climatic changes they die quickly in captivity. A caged [illegible] two or three alive, but they all died before reaching port. If I had been able to deliver a good specimen in the United States, I could have sold it for $5000.

But here were two full-grown beasts, already located, and waiting for me to try my hand at capturing them. I was greatly interested in the story the two headmen had to tell, and I spent the entire afternoon in listening to them and asking them all manner of questions. They described the country where the orang-outangs made their home, and promised as many men as I needed.

I impressed them with the fact that I was not anxious to make the trip, and I made them promise, as a first consideration, that they would use all their power to prevent the natives from killing the animals if I captured them. I feared that the resentment of the natives against the orang-outangs might lead them to kill the animals for revenge, even after I had them safely caged. They agreed to do as I requested and once again begged me to return with them. I told them to come back the next day and talk with me again. I had already made up my mind, but it is always well to let a native think that one has not quite decided.

When I went to see the Dutch Consul-General and explained the situation, he issued passports for me, and, accompanied by the two headmen, the trader, Ali and my coolie boy, I took the next steamer to Pontianak. At Pontianak I presented my credentials to the Dutch resident. He was pleased to hear that I was going after the orang-outangs and he offered to let me have as many native officials as I wished to take along. I thanked him and declined his offer, explaining that I really did not know as yet what I should need, or how long I should be up-country. As a matter of fact, I did not want his native officials because I knew that the jungle people have no love for them, and I wanted to have my expedition entirely clear of everything that looked official.

We stayed there for several days, getting supplies together. The trader remained with the party at my request, because he was known by both the coast and the jungle people. From a Chinese he rented a houseboat that I could keep as long as I had need of it. The Borneo houseboats are twenty to twenty-five feet long and five feet wide; they have a bamboo shed, which makes a fairly comfortable room, and are rowed or paddled by six men. With a mattress spread on the floor and mosquito-netting hung about, I could take the trip up the river easily. Omar, one of the headmen, stayed with me in my boat, while Mahommed Munshee, the other headman, went ahead with some of the stores.

On the way up the river we came to the station of Dr. Van Erman, the Dutch medical officer who was in charge of the outlying districts. He insisted that I stay with

THE UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM TAKEN UP LOCALLY

"SEARCH ME, SONNY."

Some Good Short Stories from Everywhere.

Compiled for The Times Illustrated Magazine.

Wasted Work.

THE SCIENTIST, Sir Archibald Geikie, although a Scotchman, was not above thoroughly enjoying a joke, even though it was against his countrymen. One he told himself, is about an Englishman and a Scotchman, who went to Egypt together and paid a visit to the pyramids.

The Englishman was lost in admiration of the wonderful sight, and presently asked his companion for his opinion. The Scotchman shook his head sorrowfully.

"Ah, mon," he said with a sigh. "What a lot of mason work not to be bringin' in any rent."

• • •

More Fruitful.

"OUR American, Mrs. Leeds, married Prince Christopher, of Greece, and now her son is going to marry the Princess Xenia. This is very strange."

The speaker was Cortlandt Bleecker, the New York clubman.

"Yes, it is very strange, indeed," he went on, "the way crowns and coronets have been falling on the sidewalk of late. We Americans, as a rule, prefer business plants to family trees."

• • •

Subtraction.

"A POOR excuse!" said Senator Borah in an argument on disarmament. "As poor an excuse as Aunt Dinah's!"

"'Look here,' I said to old Aunt Dinah one day, 'I put four pairs of white flannel pants in the wash on Monday, and you've only brought me back three pairs. What's your excuse?'"

"'Mah excuse, Marse Will', said Aunt Dinah, 'is dat dem fo' pairs muster shrunk up to free. Don' yo' know Marse Will, dat flannel shrinks awful?'"

Illustrated Lecture.

"THE moderate drinker," said William N. Anderson, the prohibition leader of New York, "is usually some such type as Peleg Mannesman.

"Old Peter Mannesman sat, in his parlor with a demijohn of home brew beside him. He tossed off a couple of glasses of the stuff and proceeded to lecture his son on the evils of drunkenness and the benefits of moderate drinking.

"'Never drink too much,' old Peleg concluded. 'Be a moderate drinker, like me, boy.'

"'But, father,' said the young man, 'how can I tell when I've had enough and when I've had too much?'

"Old Peleg Mannesmann pointed out of the window.

"'Do you see those two women standing on the corner?' he said. 'Well, if you saw four women there you'd have had too much—you'd be drunk.'

"'But, father,' said the young man, 'there's only one woman there.'"

Mutual Admiration.

MRS. BARTON FRENCH told at a dinner in Newport a story about the Kaiser.

"The Kaiser," she said, "liked to talk to Americans about Theodore Roosevelt. Once, at Kiel, he told how, when he first met Roosevelt, he said to him:

"'Mr. Roosevelt, if you were a German, I should certainly make you my prime minister.'

"'If Your Imperial Highness," said Roosevelt, bowing and smiling 'if Your Imperial Highness were an American, I should make you my press agent.'"

Misssed Nothing.

THE captain of a football team that had visited Sludmush-on-Sea had just finished a modest celebration of his side's victory, and was enjoying a quiet stroll before catching the train back. The vicar saw him and congratulaated him on his success.

"But I hope the enjoyment of your visit has not been confined entirely to football?" added the vicar "I hope you have been drinking in the ozone?"

The captain then replied: "Well, I didn't notice the name of the place, but it was the one opposite the pier."

Guilty Conscience.

IT WAS at a football dinner, and one of the diners had, well, he had dined, of course.

About 10:30 p.m. he rose from the table murmuring something about sending a message to his wife to the effect that he would not be home that night.

An hour later, as he had not returned, some of his friends went in search of him. They looked in the lounge, the conservatory, and all over the place until someone remembered his remark about a message.

"Let's look in the phone box," he suggested.

They looked—and there he was in a heap in the corner. They woke him up.

"Thank heaven!" he sighed, as he opened his eyes. "Some one has come to bail me out at last."

Point of View.

COL. GEORGE HARVEY was discussing the outlook at a farewell dinner. ner.

"We must consider the outlook fairly and squarely," he said. "We must get at the truth. Optimism is no good. Pessism is no good either. Both make for inaction. The truth alone works.

"The optimist," Col. Harvey added, orders a dozen oysters and expects to find pearls in them. The pessimist expects to find typhoid fever germs."

Tables Turned.

SIR AUCKLAND GEDDES, the British Ambassador, said at a dinner, apropos of the Prince of Wales' contemplated second visit to the United States.

"The Prince of Wales is very tractable, but as a rule young royalties are hard to manage.

"I knew an Oxford don who had, some years ago, a royalty under his charge. He met the young man one morning at the railway station. His Royal Highness was off to London for a two days' junket.

"This, of course, would never do. Yet the don couldn't forbid the trip. That wasn't etiquette. How then was he to act?

"The train had no sooner started than a thought struck him and he ran into the station and wired to the palace that His Royal Highness was coming home for a visit. Result—when the youth reached London for his incognito junket, there was the royal limousine and a half-dozen liveried flunkies waiting for him, and the junket turned into a dull home visit, after all."

Legal Status.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE McKENNA of the United States Supreme Court was discussing the subject of women's political progress in the world.

"No one wants to be a man nowadays," said the justice.

"Most of the women do," interjected a friend.

"Oh, no, all the women want is men's privileges," returned the justice.

As Justice McKenna got up to leave his friends he remarked with a bow:

"Well I'm going now, but I leave my character in your hands."

The group smiled.

"That isn't original," Mr. McKenna came back and added. "It's from the School for Scandal. But I repeated it her because I remember a man who said the same thing once to some of his friends, and they answered him by saying:

"'Can't you leave anything better than that?'"

Free and Clear.

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, the Kansas editor, told a homestead story at a Topeka dinner.

"Along a hot and dusty Kansas road," he began, "a homesteader was pursuing his way towards one of Uncle Sam's free homes in the Cherokee strip. His family and furniture were in a shaky wagon drawn by a pair of shaky nags.

"'Whar ye bound?' a farmer asked him when he halted to water up.

"'Bound? Why, bound fer a hun'erd an' sixty acres o' gov'ment land in the Strip,' the homesteader answered enthusiastically.

"Some two or three months passed, and then the homesteader stopped once more at the farmer's to water up, this time traveling north.

"'Wot ye done with them hundred and sixty acres?' asked the farmer.

"'See them mules?' the homesteader answered, pointing to the sorry animals that were harnessed to his prairie schooner. 'Well, I traded eighty acres of my claim for 'em.'

"'Wot ye done with the other eighty?

"'Don't give it away till I get further on.' seid the homesteader in a low voice, 'but the feller was a tenderfoot, and I run the other eighty in on him without his knowing it.'"

Look Who's Here!

"WE WILL TAKE as our text this morning," announced the absent-minded clergyman, consulting his memorandum, "the sixth and seventh verses of the 31st chapter of Proverbs."

Never suspecting that his vivacious son and heir had found the memorandum in his study on the previous night, and, knowing that his papa had composed a sermon celebrating the increased severity of dry law enforcement, had diabolically changed the chapter and verse numerals to indicate a very different text, the absent-minded clergyman turned to the place and read aloud these words of Solomon:

"Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be of heavy hearts.

"Let him drink and forget his past poverty, and remember his misery no more."

Have We Left Them?

"WHAT'S AN optimist?" shouted Max Eastman, the New York reformer, in an address on profiteering.

Then he struck the table with his fist and answered himself as follows:

"An optimist is a man who, always, though convinced that we shall never get back to prewar prices, firmly believes that we will some day get back to war prices."

Young America.

JENKINS had advertised for an office boy and there were numerous applicants. He sized up the boys, picked out what he considered the most likely looking one and motioned the lad to come into his office.

"Do you think you would make a good office boy?" Jenkins asked.

"I'd try my darndest," the boy replied tersely.

"Fair enough," Jenkins agreed. "The work is not easy, though," he warned.

"I'll take a chance," the boy assured him.

"What is the least you will work for?"

Quick as a flash the boy came back: "The most I can get!"

MARIA'S HALLOWE'EN.

played through the churchlike stained glass window. All was so still.

"Verne," he called and began tapping lightly on the door. There was no reply. "Verne," he called again. Suddenly he stopped, turned and faced his companion.

"Have you sent a warning, that he does not answer," he demanded fiercely. There were lights shining from his eyes and they were green and angry!

"Oh, no, no, I haven't said a word. I've done nothing, noth . . .

"If I can once get that door open—oh, oh," he groaned like a soul in agony.

"Let me go home—let me go," Maria begged.

He was knocking fiercely at the door now. "No, no, not yet, it's too late to turn back from a journey such as this. Do not fear, we'll find him," and clasping the cold, bronze knob with all his poor strength, he turned it slowly. There was the creaking of little-used hinges, then, silently the heavy metal door swung back.

"Enter!" commanded the specter. The girl's pulse throbbed as though her heart would burst. If only he'd forget and leave the door ajar so she might escape if escape became necessary. And indeed her prayer was answered, for in his eagerness to find his spectral companion he quite forgot the detail of shutting up the tomb!

"Verne, oh, oh, oh," pathetically he sobbed the syllables but when the notes of his erstwhile voice died away, dead, drear silence reigned.

A streak of sparkling light caught Maria's attention and held her fascinated. It might have been a moonbeam, yet it looked more like the phosphorescent formations she had often watched in the waters at the seashore—nor was it a direct ray as a moonbeam would be, it danced and shimmered, first here, then there. Maria gazed straight ahead, the light was before her! She looked back and it was behind her, dancing before her eyes whichever way she turned them. And yet, startling as was this weird phenomenon, a peculiar calm seemed to fill her soul and she was not nearly so frightened as when the gruesome journey began.

Glancing backward she saw her spectral host peering into a deep, black crevice in the corner of the vault. He rose and faced her. The light was dancing, shimmering between them. Maria found her voice.

"Friend," she whispered, not knowing a better address for the uncanny one, and fearing lest she hurt his feelings, "What is that light?"

"Ha, ha, ha!" he laughed, chopping those horrible dry jaws together in glee once again. "Why, bless you, that's not a light—you merely see it as a light because you're not of our world—why, that's the laughing, vivacious and wonderful spirit of little Twinkle Toes!

"Oh, Twinkle Toes," he saluted what appeared to be a light, "Speak to the frail, frightened one of the flesh and reassure her."

The softest, sweetest feminine voice Maria had ever heard spoke as though a living creature were standing right beside her.

"Troubled soul," it said, "Peace to you."

The ghastly one interrupted, "If we had time she could summon for you the spirit of some one you love who has passed beyond, but we haven't time—no—no—the night wears on, soon the cock will crow and all will be over. Verne is not here—we must find him. Come!" he commanded, and beckoned with his long, bony finger.

Maria was spellbound. For months she had longed some way, somehow to communicate, if such a thing were possible, with the spirit of her dear departed hero—her David. Others had told of their experiences and success in reaching the spirit of a loved one She wanted just one word, one little word with her darling who had given his all on Flanders Fields that the world might go safely on! Here was her opportunity. She must conquer the fear that now had every nerve in her poor flesh aching and biting. Turning to this creature who had brought her, she begged:

"Please let me stay for a word with Twinkle Toes. You find Verne and when you've got him I'll come! "Please, please," she begged as he hesitated. "I befriended you tonight, now, you . . ." But before she could finish he disappeared through the open door

Then, centering her gaze upon the light, she called:

"Twinkle Toes, Twinkle Toes, I want to speak with David—David Compton who crossed beyond on Flanders Fields!"

Silence reigned. Again she ventured. "Please. Please, Twinkle Toes, just one little message—I was his sweetheart here, and it will make him so happy!"

This time the silence was broken by a ripple of girlish laughter, musical as a babbling brook running its rugged course to the sea. Silence again. Then the same sweet voice spoke:

"He is not here. He wants you—he wants you—but he is not here. Oh, you will be so happy when you are with him."

"But I don't want to pass on yet," returned Maria in panic, "think of my poor mother—ask David to wait at least until she goes—poor mother, it would break her heart."

The rippling laughter, clear as a bell, was heard again. "Oh, you are going to be very, very happy," the gentle voice assured. Suddenly the light went out. Dead silence reigned again.

. . . .

A stifled scream from the big room atop the old house caused Maria's mother to spring from bed and rush upstairs. Shaking from head to foot the half-clad Maria stood in the middle of the room, with terror gleaming from her dilated eyes. She clutched at her mother like a panic-stricken little child.

"You're all unnerved, dear," the old lady soothed. "You overworked yourself tonight tugging away at that old closet—see, you must have fallen asleep with most of your clothes on. How you are shaking! My, it must have been an awful nightmare. Come, dear, down to bed with me, it's lonely way up here by yourself!"

Indeed the frightened girl needed no urging to accept her mother's invitation though she lay awake, listening as the tower clock tolled off the weary hours through that never-ending night.

Her face was white and wan next morning when she started forth to her daily toil. She had not breathed a word of that harrowing dream to a soul, yet she could not dismiss from her mind the adventures which had come to her in that exhausting slumber. She was certain in her little woman's heart that something was going to happen. She would hear something. She knew! Had it not always been thus with her dreams, and indeed had not the Bible itself told of humans who were warned of vital happenings while they slept? What the warning for her might mean she knew not, yet her manner was one of anticipation. Hourly she watched, waited, for that something—whatever it might be—to happen.

The week rushed by as weeks do for busy individuals. It was Friday again, and such a Friday! Rain poured down in torrents all day as if the heavens had burst. Shelter was scant for the wind viciously tugged at umbrellas until their frames were turned inside out and their fabric tattered. There was no thought of a let-up in the elements at going-home time. Cars were jammed with dripping humanity, tired and anxious for the warm glow of home fires. Indeed 'twas the sort of night which makes one feel all the world is against him.

At her usual corner Maria alighted from the car to be buffeted about by the storm. Depression was the watchword. How foolish to want to live on, she mused. After all there was only one happiness and that was with David. The great conflict had cheated her of her David in the flesh, but she knew the kindly God would not keep their spirits apart for very long. She was ready, even yearning to step out into the greatest adventure, and join her David in a better world.

As she turned the corner, her old home loomed up like a beacon on the shoals. It was the one bright spot that gave life to the otherwise drab surroundings, for bright streams of light blazoned from every window of the house. This extravagance was unusual—most unusual. They must have company for dinner, but what a night to visit—and yet a mere visit did not explain the lighting up of every room in the big house. She would soon know.

Dripping wet and with eyes smarting from the wind Maria climbed the porch steps, unlatched the front door and was about to ascend to her room for a change of shoes and dry clothing when her mother's voice deterred her:

"Maria, child, come in, right away.'

Jamming her umbrella into the stand and swinging out of a soaked rain coat she entered the living-room Sitting by the cheery open grate fire was David's young brother George. He sprang up to greet her. His face was tense. Then Maria knew, as she gazed steadfastly at him, that the "blow" had fallen—that her premonition in the dream was about to be realized. She lost no time.

"What's wrong, George?" she demanded.

"Re, Re," he addressed her by the old familiar name David had always used. "I scarce know where to begin." Agitation was written upon his twitching features. "The shock had been so terrible, my mother is sick abed over it. I've come to prepare you, so that you too wouldn't collapse.—" He hesitated watching the effect his words were having. "The fact is," he continued, "that the report of our David's death was an error! Gad—he's been through enough to kill a dozen men, but thank God he is alive!"

"Go on—go on—tell me," Maria pleaded, every muscle in her body rigid and her voice hoarse with emotion.

"I can't tell you all, now," George went on, "it would take hours. David will tell you in his own way and in his own good time." Suffice it now to say that he was captured by the Germans while fighting in France. Then they smuggled him into Russia to be enslaved by a clique of Russian traitors who were playing into the hands of the Germans. No record of his movements was kept. Everyone lost track of him. Then came the Bolshevik uprising. David was taken by them, imprisoned in a cellar in Riga and not permitted to communicate with a living soul. The story of his escape is a long one and he can best tell that himself!"

"David—David—where is my David?" Hot tears coursed down Maria's cheeks and she reached forth her arms in anticipation. The door behind her rolled back and David bounded forth to clasp Maria tightly to his breast.

When they recovered from their big dramatic moment she held him off at arm's length and surveyed him from head to foot. A little older, a little slimmer, much more rugged, and his big brown eyes softened a wee bit through long patient suffering—but, nevertheless, it was the same beloved David—her David.

He joined them at dinner and entertained and thrilled them with stories of "Over There." Mother explained that the lighting up of the house was a tribute to their returned hero!

The glowing embers of the hearth fire were faded to pale, ashy gray ere David released Maria from his strong arms that night, and then he left only when she promised to become his wife within the next twenty-four hours.

Once again alone in the sanctuary of her little sleeping chamber, Maria knelt down and offered the big prayer of thanksgiving that was in her grateful heart.

Delirious with joy she sprang to the cedar chest containing her trousseau, so carefully folded away with all the tender sacred memories of her only love. She knelt before it and threw back the cover. The odor of rosemary greeted her. How fortunate after all that all was in readiness! But before she drew out the filmy net veil so soon to be adorned with orange blossoms, another little prayer cropped into her heart. Only she understood its meaning, and a listener would have thought her mad.

"Twinkle Toes," she called, very softly. "Oh, Twinkle Toes, I thank you. You told me I would be very, very happy." The soft net veil was heaped up in a fluffy mass in her hands now. She snuggled her warm cheek against it, and imagined as she did so that she heard the faintest ripple of girlish laughter, ever so soft and clear as a bell!

The Baby's Eyes.

Sometimes a young wife gets a rude shock, in discovering that, although her husband loves her dearly, he is still quite as much in love with himself as is normal for the male animal.

Before our baby girl came, my Bill used to love to whisper to me that if I didn't have a baby whose eyes were brown, like its mother's, he wouldn't have a thing to do with it. Nothing else mattered, but the little one must have brown eyes.

When she came, however, and the nurse told him that she looked just like him, and was fair, with blue eyes the shape and color of his own, he was delighted beyond words. He thought her the prettiest baby imaginable. Just to tease him, I got the nurse to say that her eyes would change in the course of a month of two. After that he carried her to the window every day, in a fit of anxiety, to see if there were any brown spots.

"I hope they won't change," he'd say, as if that would be a calamity. After she was three months old, he felt the danger past, and he has forgotten all about those ordered brown eyes, for whenever any one says, "She looks just like Bill, especially her blue eyes," he swells visibly, and struts around, and goes out to see if he can't push the barn over, after all.—[Margaret W. STUCK A FEATH

By William Almon W

Bill Halliday, Exile, Learns a Thing or Two About Pyrotechnics and Wins His Heart's Desire.

BILL HALLIDAY sat straight up in bed as the door opened. He stared at his father, who, blinking a little, came in. Mr. Halliday was in evening dress; he seemed to be vastly surprised. So was Bill; he hadn't supposed that his mother and father would be back from the theater for another hour. They must have seen the light in his window, he reflected, bitterly; that was what had betrayed him. That he had forgotten to lock his door didn't matter.

"Bad for your eyes, reading in bed," said Mr. Halliday. "Your mother tells me she's spoken to you about it before."

He came over and sat down beside Bill. He wasn't angry; he didn't speak harshly. It surprised Bill a good deal that it should be his father, rather than his mother, who had come to deal with him. He saw very little of his father, and didn't know him well; that man of great affairs had little time for his son.

"What's this?" said Mr. Halliday. He picked up the paper covered book Bill had been reading. "Hello!" he said, and stared down at the boy, more surprised than ever. "Spalding's Football Guide?" Swift suspicion came into his eyes. "Got another book under the covers? Nick Carter—er—?"—His memory failed.

"No, sir!" said Bill. "I—I was just reading about the teams at home, father! Yale had a great team last year! That Coy—he kicked two goals against Harvard! Did you know that? Eight points, that was. They don't count the same way in America that we—I mean—that they do here, do they?"

"I believe not," said Mr. Halliday. "It's a different sort of game, Bill."

"It must be. There aren't but eleven on a team, instead of fifteen—like soccer, that is. Soccer's a muff game, though. It's more like rugger, isn't it, father—at home, I mean?"

"Yes. You'd better get to sleep now, though, Bill." He picked up the book; stood looking uncertainly down at his son.

"Father—let me keep that book, please? I won't read any more tonight, if you will —I promise. But it's not mine—"

Mr. Halliday dropped the book at once.

"Where did you get it, Bill?"

"Ted Little lent it to me."

"Who's he?"

"He was a new boy last term. He's from Chicago, father. He's going home next summer. He's going to Princeton, father—"

"Well?"

"When are we going home? We've been over here an awful long time, haven't we?"

"Why—I don't know, Bill," Mr. Halliday said, slowly. "You've been here most of your life, haven't you? I have a good deal to do here. And your mother isn't so well in America. We may stay here."

"Always?" Bill had to fight to keep from choking. "Father—I want to go home. I want to go to Princeton. And Ted says—he says I ought to go to Lawrenceville or some school like that for a year, anyway, vrst."

"We'll have to see, boy," said Mr. Halliday, slowly. "Your mother thinks you can get a better education here. She's talked to me about sending you to Oxford. A good many of the boys at school are going there, aren't they?"

"But they're English, father. And I'm American."

"Well, we'll have to see," said Mr. Halliday, again. "We've settled down here; you see, Bill. And it's where we came from in the beginning. There have always been Hallidays near Swaythling, ever since the time of William the Conqueror."

"I don't care!" said Bill. "And—I don't believe you do, either, father! Weren't there Hallidays in Washington's army, too?"

"You bet!" said Mr. Halliday, before he thought. "It's pretty late, Bill. Your mother'll be looking for me if I don't put out your light. Good night, boy. We'll talk about these things some other time."

"Good night, father," said Bill. And when he was alone, in the dark, he sighed. He wished he could talk to his father—really talk to him. The way Ted Little did to his. He had lunched with Ted and Mr. Little one day, and gone to a cinema afterward. And Mr. Little had talked about baseball and things Bill hadn't been able to understand at all, until, later, Ted had explained. About Giants, and Cubs, and White Sox and Tigers.

It was a long time before Bill slept that night, even though the light was out, and he kept his word about reading any more. He wanted to go home. He had wanted that for a long time, but lately, since Ted Little and Jim Murray, who lived in New York, had disputed violently with Ted, because he was going to Yale, had come to school it had been worse.

Ted Little, who had never played cricket in his life, had been on the first eleven, and every one expected him to be on the first fifteen, too, next term. Bill hoped to get his cap, too; he had been three quarter on the second fifteen a year earlier. Ted had amazed every one with his bowling. He could make a ball curve in the air before it struck the ground; no other bowler Bill had ever seen, even the great county players, whose pictures were in the Graphic and the Illustrated London News every week, could do more than make it break afterward. It was all in the way you placed your fingers against the ball; Ted had shown him, and explained that in baseball the pitcher could make the ball do what he pleased.

He was homesick—as desperately homesick as only a boy who cannot so much as remember home can be. They had brought him over when he was very small. Such memories as he had of home were vague, fragmentary. Trains, running on a high platform; a tall tower, in the center of a city, with the huge statue of a man in a broad-brimmed hat on top of it; a beach, where he had played with other children; policemen in yellow helmets and long coats. . . .

He had pieced out his memories with scraps and bits of pictures out of books that he had read almost surreptitiously. His mother had not approved of American stories. But he had spent long hours in his father's library. There was dull reading on those shelves for a boy, you might have thought. But Bill would have challenged you fiercely on that score. He knew John Fiske's "American Revolution" almost by heart before he was 12; Hay's great life of Lincoln was like the Bible to him. And he had found, and lost, and found again the most precious of all his books—"The Story of a Bad Boy," by Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

It was in the pages of that book that the America he had never known had lived for him. Through Aldrich's eyes he saw long winters of snowy roads and fields, and frozen ponds, as unlike as they could be to the open English country of the midlands where his school was; glowing autumns, when the woods and hills were painted in a thousand colors; day and nights of mischievous delight.

His mother, when he asked her, innocently, about this and that, was appalled; she had taken the book from him, condemning it to be burnt. Its very title was anathema to her a glance at its pages confirmed her fear that it shrieked with the blatant crudity of the America that she had put behind her. But he saved it, and had gained, through its peril, the knowledge that his secret hopes and longings must be forever hidden from the mother, lovely, remote, he worshiped.

His life had been odd, confused. There had been a time of wandering about in France, Germany, Italy; a time when he had seen much of nurse and governess and little of his mother. He could remember her, radiant and shining, dressed for theater or opera, stopping in to bend over his bed for a moment. Sometimes, on rare mornings, he had been allowed to go into her room before he was dressed. Then school; an English public school. He had taken his knocks as a youngster; fought his way up through the lower school, till now he was in the fifth and reasonably sure of landing in the sacred precincts of the sixth next term, with the prospect of being a prefect, perhaps, before so very long.

And to the long wanderings on the continent, when he had moved back and forth across Europe, seeing Paris, Dresden, Vienna, Munich, Rome, Naples, Venice, there had succeeded the ordered and settled life in England. School always, in the foreground; the house near Swaythling, in the lovely Hampshire country, which he really liked; the smart little town house near Hyde Park. He was happy enough; he had everything a boy could be supposed to want, heaven knows!

But he had never quite stopped wanting to go home. It had been a great day when he had discovered that the docks of Southampton were opened to a boy who rode in on the tram from Swaythling. He used to spend hours there, after that discovery, watching the great steamers come and go. And it hurt him whenever he saw a liner bound for home. He envied the careless people who lined her rails so much that he hated them.

Of the history of the Halliday invasion of Europe Bill knew little or nothing. He knew, of course, that his father was a Halliday of the great banking firm of Pierce, Halliday and Company, and, vaguely, that he was at the head of the London house. But he guessed, and guessed correctly enough, with that way that children have of getting at buried truths, that it was his mother who was really responsible for the permanence of this European sojourn. The facts he could scarcely have understood. Yet they were simple enough.

The Hallidays were of Philadelphia, and of that prideful city's innermost circle. John Halliday had crossed its boundaries when he married; his wife had not been allowed to forget that. The trouble had lain in this: she, too, was a Philadelphian, but one who dwelt on the wrong side of Market street. She had expected her marriage to ennoble her. Her disappointment had angered and embittered her. Originally there had been a project, suggested first by her husband, perhaps, of a year or so abroad, with the vague prospect of a triumphant return.

But Mrs. Halliday, a shrewd woman, had not been long in making up her mind to change that plan. In England her husband's wealth, his importance in the financial world, had opened all doors to her; her own beauty and charm had helped her, too. She found that English people were simply amused by the idea of class lines among Americans; one American, to them, was much like another, so far as such things went. If they had money, if they were amusing, they were welcome.

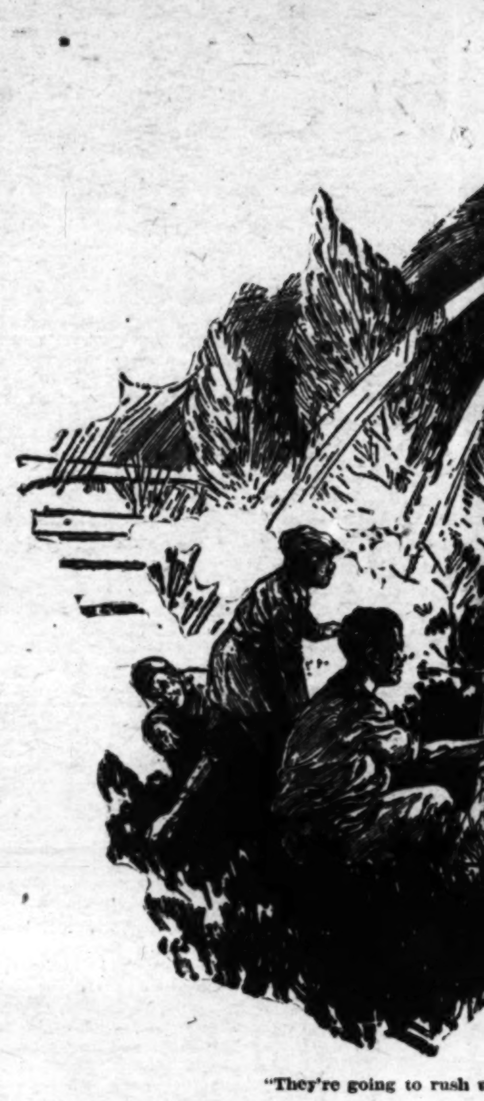
Her eyes were set upon certain precedents. Americans like her husband had stayed in England before; had become, in effect, Englishmen. She could contemplate a future in which she should be Lady Halliday. Her real hopes and ambitions she never confided to her husband. But she saw, with a quiet satisfaction, the way the sane English life appealed to him; the way he sank, insensibly, into its comfort. She could manage John when the time came; she was sure of that.

Of all this Bill had no inkling. But after that night when his father surprised him Bill was afraid, as he had not been before. Always, until then, he had regarded his exile as temporary; he had been sure that, sooner or later, they would go home. Now, for the first time, he had to face the possibility of staying away always—or, at least, until he should be old enough to shape his course for himself. And he was at an age when a few years loom up like as many decades.

During the autumn term he had small time for worry. He was in the sixth, with Ted Little and Jim Murray. Bounds were relaxed; the three of them could go into Bedford, now, when they were free from schoolroom or from compulsory games. There was football, too, to keep them busy. Ted Little's play was a revelation to Bill—to the whole school indeed. With the fiercer, closer American game behind him —and already, at home, college scouts had had their eyes on Ted against the day when he should matriculate—the old Rugby game was a holiday for him. He ran with a fierceness unknown to the school backs, sliding off tacklers one after another, and he followed the ball like a hawk.

Bill really proclaimed himself an American that term, for the first time. The school was surprised, and inclined to be offended. It took Little and Murray calmly enough. They were real Americans; you couldn't mistake them. Ted talked through his nose, rather; their speech was shot with strange and highly colored bits of foreign idiom.

"Say!" Ted would cry, hailing some one; never "I say!" And if you asked him a question to which the answer was affirmative it was always "You bet!" instead of "Rather!"



"They're going to rush

There had been, in the beginning, impertinences about Indians in the streets of New York; sneering comments concerning the crudeness of American life. But Ted had fought a few times, in the classic ring near the fives court, and the school had become strangely reluctant to harry him upon his nativity thereafter.

But what was right and natural and according to kind in the case of Ted or Jim was rank swank and accordingly to be put down when it proceeded from Bill—from young Halliday, who had grown up in the school, and was, to all outward seeming, as English as any of them. There was bewilderment in the attitude the school took toward him, of course, too; why in the world should any fellow keep insisting he was an American when no one would know it unless he admitted it?

Every morning, through the long winter, Bill struggled to wakefulness a full fifteen minutes before the rest of the dormitory, slipped on a bathrobe over his pajamas, and padded through, long, dark corridors to the shower bath near the fives court, where he and Ted and Jim submitted themselves to the shock of icy water. Ted had proclaimed his wonder and his dismay at the discovery that the bathrooms were open only at a stated time, when the school bathed in groups, once a week, and had gained permission to use this almost forgotten shower.

"We bathed whenever we liked in school at home," he told Bill. "Golly—you hear a lot about the way an Englishman takes his tub every morning, but look at 'em here! A bath once a week—and that's a rule!"

More swank! Especially in Bill's case. Freakish customs were allowable in a real foreigner like Ted, but it was plain cheek when Halliday did the same thing. Bill who had never before, in all his years at the school, been prominent, began to be distinctly unpopular.

Restraints that had never irked him beoing to rush us," said Bell.

fore began, in the light of what Ted and Murray knew of freedom at home, to be intolerable. In the sixth, to be sure, the bounds were wide. You could walk for miles along roads lined with hedges full of blackberries, even in late November; even Ted approved of British berries, and conceded their superiority to those of home. You could go into Beds any afternoon, and drink coffee and eat cake in a dingy shop, with its mock magnificence of red plush cushions. You could stare at the jail in which John Bunyan had been confined—for that matter, though, you could see John Bunyan's house at Elstow by looking across the fields from the dormitory windows. You could hire a boat and row on the sluggish Ouse. But that noble stream, that the British called a river, provoked ribald laughter in Ted and Jim.

"It's not a river! It isn't even a creek! it's a brook!" said Jim. And Ted agreed, and they talked of rivers a mile wide, until Bill groaned.

Christmas came, and for Bill two weeks at Swaythling. There was good Christmas cheer. But he longed for snow; he couldn't even skate! He had wanted to ask Ted home for the holidays, but his mother had written that it would not be convenient. Yet the house had been no more than half full of guests. Back to school after that, and the long grind until Easter in London, when he did see something of Ted. Bill hated the second winter term at school. Football was all over; hockey had never appealed to him; he thought it a girl's game. And Ted talked of what he called real hockey, which you played on the ice, skating after a puck endowed with life as it slid across the frozen surface of a rink.

It was at Easter that Ted spoke out frankly.

"I thought you were coming home some time soon, Bill?" he said. "You and your folks?"

They had been having lunch with Mr. Little, and he, having business, had suggested a matinee and furnished tickets.

"We are—directly my father finishes his business here," said Bill, a little flushed.

"Well — but — say—dad—he says your father's going to stay here and turn Englishman! He says he's never going home—says your mother won't let him—"

"My mater—" Bill wanted to say something in her defense, but he choked on the words. He stared at Ted, dismayed, horrified. For the first time the secret fear that had been mounting in him had been expressed. "The governor won't do that!" he cried fiercely. "He's an American—you bet—"

"Well—that's what every one's saying—that's all I know," said Ted. "All the men my dad meets—Americans here. I guess he heard it first from Mr. White. He's a newspaper man, and I guess he knows what he's talking about."

"I guess he doesn't!" said Bill. "Not if he says things like that! You mind your own business, young Ted!"

"Oh, all right—I was only telling you what I'd heard! You needn't get stuffy. Keep your shirt on—as you'd say!"

Bill dined with his mother, alone, that evening; an unusual privilege. And he gained the courage to speak to her.

"Mother—we are going home, aren't we?" he said.

"Why—I don't know—" She looked at him curiously. It was hard for Mrs. Halliday to realize that Bill was growing up; that before so very long she would have two men, instead of one, to manage. "Do you want to, so very much, Bill? How do you know you'd like America? You can't remember it."

"No. But—it's home—"

She frowned.

"It's home here, too, isn't it, Bill? You've grown up here. You like school, don't you?" He nodded. "And Swaythling? All your friends are here. Don't you want to go to the university when they do?"

He shook his head.

"I want to go to Princeton."

"You must talk to your father," she said. "You don't quite understand, I suppose, Bill. But your father is a very important man. Some one has to live here to look after business for his firm. Some one will have to do that, always. We've thought that you could do it, when your father retires. And it will be better if you're really an Englishman—"

"But I can't be that, mother! I'm an American!"

"Do you know what it means when any one is naturalized, Bill?"

He just stared at her.

"If your father were to be naturalized, for instance, he'd be an Englishman, afterward. And you and I would be English, too, because we belong to him."

"But—he won't be, mother! He—he couldn't—"

"He's thinking about it, Bill. I suppose you will have to decide for yourself, later, when you're 21. But just now your father has to do what seems best to him."

"It—it's not fair!"

"Bill. That's rude. Your manners haven't been very nice since you have been going around so much with that American boy—Little, isn't it?"

"I'm sorry, mother. But—"

"We won't talk any more about it, dear. Your father will talk to you, when he has made up his mind."

Bill tried to see his father before he went back to school for the long term. But it was almost as if Mrs. Halliday sought to prevent a meeting between them. Nor did Bill see much more of Ted. Never had he seen so much of his mother during his holidays. He lunched with her at the Carlton; once she took him with her to Paris for a week-end; he must go with her in the motor when she went shopping; be home when people came in for tea.

He was glad to get back to school. He was made a prefect; Traill major had not come back, having gone to Sandhurst. The head talked to him soberly of his new responsibilities, and Bill was rather awed. It was something to be one of those to hold in charge traditions that had come down through centuries. The school was a medieval foundation.

The quarrel between him and Ted was forgotten. Ted imparted all his knowledge of the art of curving a ball, so that Bill, who had always been a good slow bowler, became almost invincible. Then, too, he and Ted played tennis together, and in long hours of practice Ted grew accustomed to turf courts, and taught Bill to come up to the net and hold his place, volleying always, and how to kill a rising ball. In doubles they soon proved themselves the masters of the school; Bill's conservative game, quickened by Ted's teaching, fitted in well with Little's dashing play.

This was to be the last term for Little and Murray; Bill could not see enough of them. Both were going home that summer.

"It's a crime—the way we have to stay here all through July," said Murray. "Lord—at home we get through early in June. Ted and I'll get back just about in time to get ready to go back in September."

"That's a sell," Bill agreed. "But you're going home—"

"You bet we are! Wish you were coming, too, old scout! Say—come on! Make them let you. Come on up to Exeter with me and to Yale next year. You'd have a good chance to make the freshman team—and I'll bet you'd make the 'varsity afterward."

"Forget it, Jim! He's booked for Princeton."

Bill sighed. He was losing hope. His mother had told him that he had been entered already for Magdalen College at Oxford; he should be ready to go up after one more year at school.

April passed into May; May, swiftly, into June. Bill could begin to count the days that were left of companionship with Jim and Ted. They had formed a triumvirate; one for all and all for one, against the school. Bill would have to pay later, he knew, when they were gone; the school would neither forget nor forgive. But he clung desperately to his last link with home. And on a day late in June, in the same post, letters came to Little and to Murray that set them to cheering.

"We're going home!" Ted shouted to Bill, waving his letter. "On the same ship! We're sailing from Southampton on the 3d of August! Oh, boy—I'll see a ball game at the Polo Grounds in less than two months!"

"You're coming to stay with me," said Jim. "We're going straight to Maine and open the house! I've got a motor boat—"

Bill turned away. But later he went into Beds, loyally, to join in the celebration. Coffee and cake, and a surreptitious cigarette, to be smoked with a duly watchful eye for stray masters who might be passing.

"Wish we were going to be home for the Fourth," said Ted. "This makes twice I've missed that!"

"I've never seen any fireworks for the Fourth!" said Bill.

"Say—"

They turned to look at Murray. He was one broad grin.

"Can't we pull something off next week?" he said. "We might get hold of a few fireworks! Glory—wouldn't they be sore—"

Bill lifted his head. His eyes were shining; his cheeks were flushed.

"Those French chaps—they got a half holiday last year for Bastille Day!" he said. "Suppose we asked the head—"

For a moment Little and Murray were silent, awed by the sheer splendor of the thought. They then whooped.

"Would he? Would there be a chance? Let's ask! Oh, Lord—think of the school—how they'd hate us!"

"We'll ask," said Bill. "After call-over today. And then—if we could get some fireworks." He emptied his pockets. "I've got nine and threepence—and we all get some pocket money Saturday—"

They pooled their wealth. They had nearly two pounds among them. They left half-filled cups; hurried to Sadler's, the shop that lived on the school's trade.

"Fireworks? Ho—yuss—when fireworks time comes, boys! Fifth of November there'll be plenty!"

But for the Fourth of July—not so much as a rocket or a squib!

"That's all right, too," said Ted. "I'll write to my father."

"So'll I!" Jim echoed. Bill would have given anything he possessed to be able to say the same. But he dared not. But he pressed his money upon Ted, begged him to send it to his father, and ask him to spend it for his share. This—why, this might be his last, as it was his first, opportunity to celebrate the Fourth!

The letters were posted; Sadler could furnish paper and envelopes, pen and stamps. And later the three of them filed into the head's study and made their request. He received it without a smile. But then, his long beard hid his lips.

"I might call this Yankee cheek," he suggested. "Have you thought that the school would not be—er—pleased?"

"You gave it to Blanc and Michaud last year, sir," said Bill, stoutly.

"So I did—so I did! On your own heads be it! You shall have your half holiday. You may be excused from afternoon call-over and from games."

Now—if Mr. Little and Mr. Murray would do their part! And they did. There were two great packages, wrapped in brown paper, for Ted and Jim, on the 3rd of July; the school, hovering about, eager in the anticipation of tuck that night, was disappointed when the parcels were carried to the study that Bill enjoyed by virtue of being a prefect. But that evening they transferred everything to an unused wooden rick in Elstow, for the use of which a smocked rustic had thankfully accepted a shilling. They lived through school, somehow, on the morning of the Fourth; it wasn't easy, but they had no choice. They were free with the ending of the morning's last lesson, and set out at once along the Bedford road, leaving an unsuspicious school, incapable of imagining so dire an insult, behind them. But when they had gone a quarter of a mile they heard an outbreak of shouts and cries behind them.

"I guess they've seen it!" said Bill—and was proud that he had guessed and not fancied.

"Seen what?" said Ted.

"Oh, I forgot to tell you! I put up a notice on the board. Just this: 'The school is invited to attend a display of fireworks, to celebrate the Fourth of July, Independence Day, at 9 o'clock tonight.' And I signed our names!"

"That's the plu-perfect touch!" said Ted. "Oh, Bill—don't you ever let any one make an Englishman of you!"

"I don't believe our dear schoolmates love us very much just now," said Jim. "Bill, if I were French I'd kiss you!"

They lunched at the hotel in superb state; money orders had come for Little and Murray, as well as the fireworks, from fathers who remembered not only their own boyhood but certain evidences of British condescension of more recent date.

A cinema was tempting, but Bedford was no safe haunt for them that afternoon. They could trust the school, they knew; that threatened show of fireworks could never come off if they put themselves in the way of being captured. And so, after lunch, they were off, circling the school widely, striking out into open country, out of bounds for all save those who were, like themselves, of the sixth. They had tea in an old thatched farmhouse; eggs warm from the nest, foamy milk, strawberries with clotted cream; rock cakes.

Later, as the shadows grew longer, they made their way back, with infinite caution, toward the school. Scouting parties were out looking for them; they avoided roads and made their way through fields of mangel wurzel and potatoes, sinking deep into the soft earth. Twice they watched parties of the enemy, lying hidden behind thick hedges. But they came to Elstow at last, somewhere near 8 o'clock. It was not dark. But then, indeed, real darkneses would not come at all that night, and it was dark enough for the fireworks to make a show.

They had chosen their spot and prepared it against their need. It was in a remote corner of the playing fields, with the embankment of the Midland Railway at the back and a brick wall at one side. They had contrived a sort of barricade of branches to protect their front; the other flank was covered by a jungle of thorny bushes. Their approach with their burden involved a double crossing of the railway and a double breach of the sternest of all school rules, since to step upon the embankment was strictly forbidden. But they were dealing in sheep, now, not in lambs.

Slowly they made their way. They had to wait for two trains to pass. But they were ready at last. Rockets were planted in the ground; roman candles, giant crackers, squibs were piled up; to the brick wall was affixed the set piece that was their
